"General" Alvin Crowder shut out the Yanks with only three hits in the first seven innings and it was not until he had eased up under his big lead that the Yankees were able to strike a few blows in their defense. Babe Ruth contributed the leading wallop when he hit his 45th home run of the season in the ninth with Lyn Lary on base. It was the Babe's first homer since Aug. 17 and left him one behind Hack Wilson of the Chicago Cubs.

Heinie Manush led the winners by getting four of their 15 hits off Pipgras, Holloway and McEvoy. Sam Rice drove in four runs.

JABLONOWSKI HOLDS WHITE SOX AS INDIANS WIN

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.— (AP) — Pete Jablonowski turned in another excellent pitching performance for Cleveland today and the Indians scored a 6 to 1 victory over the White Sox to make it two straight in the series, and seven straight in Comiskey park.

Jablonowski permitted four hits, one more than Willis Hudlin gave yesterday, and but for an error by Montague in the third, would have had a shutout. Dick Porter, with a double and three singles, and Johnny Hodapp, who cracked out three doubles, led the Indian attack.

BRAVES TROUNCE GIANTS FOR THIRD STRAIGHT

BOSTON, Sept. 5.—(AP) —The New York Giants suffered their third straight defeat at the hands of the Braves today by a 6 to 4 score and dropped into third place a half game behind the idle St. Louis Cardinals.

Three of the four Giants runs were scored after an error by Rollings in the first inning on what should have been the third out. Bruce Cunningham pitched effectively and the only earned run off his delivery was made by Mel Ott, who doubled and scored on Jackson's single in the sixth, Cunningham allowed seven hits.

The Braves, led by Berger and Spohrer, made 13 hits for a total of 20 bases off Hubbell and Heving. Hubbell was the victim of most of the hitting while Heving allowed only one single in his two innings on the mound.

P. WANER'S HOMER IN NINTH WINS FOR PIRATES

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 5.— (AP) — A home run by Paul Waner in the ninth gave Pittsburgh its second victory of the series over Chicago today, 8 to 7.

The Pirates fought an uphill battle all the way against the league leaders. Three-run Buccaneer rallies in both the seventh and eight innings brought a deadlock and sent Pat Malone to the showers in the latter frame. Waner's circuit swat came with one out in the ninth to decide the issue.

Gabby Hartnett, Cub catcher, hit his thirty-second homer of the season with Cuyler on base in the fourth.

Ervin Brame went the full route for Pittsburgh on the mound. Osborn finished the game for the visitors. Each club made ten hits.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 5.— (AP) — The world's champion Athletics won their third game in a row from the Boston Red Sox here today by a score of 5 to 1. George Earnshaw, who bested Jack Russell in a game that was close until the eighth inning, received credit for his 21st victory of the season.

The Mackmen held an edge of only 2 to 1 until the eighth inning, when they scored three runs. Al Simmons clubbed in two of these counters by hitting his 34th homer of the season with one on base.

BOOTS GREENE TO PITCH FOR POLISH TEAM SUNDAY

Boots Greene, pitching ace of the City league this season, will be Manager Bizinski's choice to oppose the Kaceys of New London in the second game of the intercity baseball championship between the Norwich Polish Citizens club and the Kaceys at New London Sunday afternoon.

Manager O'Connell will probably send Tillie Daniels to the mound for the Kaceys in Sunday's game. The New London fans who greatly underrated the local team are less sure of their home town boys after seeing the first game go to the Norwich champions. A large crowd of Norwich supporters will be in attendance at the game.

Boswell Ave. Wins

The Broad street team was beaten by Boswell avenue Friday evening, 10 to 1. The winners line-up: Steve Longo, p; Patsy Tedesco, c; Andrew Colletti, 1b; Herman Lieberman, 2b; John Longo, 3b; William Saunders, ss and f; Edward McCune, f and ss.

ELKS-DUWELLS IN CRUCIAL GAME TODAY

This afternoon at the Academy campus, the Junior league season will be brought to a fitting climax when the Duwells and Elks clash in what promises to be the banner attraction of the year.

The Duwells, not counting the game with the Rotary on Tuesday, are still at the top of the league with seven victories and but one loss, while the Elks have won seven, but lost two. The outcome of the game with the Rotary club has not yet been decided, but whether the game is played over or not, the winner of today's game will be in at least a tie for first place.

The Elks are all primed to give the league-leaders the battle of their life and have groomed Fuller, their pitching ace, for the occasion. Fuller has, on several occasions, pitched low-hit games during the season, turning in one no-hit contest. He shut-out the Rotary but a short time ago, allowing them only two bingles and may be counted on to turn in a good performance today.

The Duwells, who have bowled over everything in the league, losing their only game to the Rotary club early in the season, will also have their strongest lineup for the fray and will no doubt rely on Stephanik whom many consider the league's best twirler, to do the pitching. Stephanik like Fuller, has been stingy with his allowance of hits throughout the season and has several shut-out victories to his credit.

It is hoped that the fans of the city will turn out this afternoon and support the youngsters, as it is planned to send the team winning the league pennant on a trip to New York and a considerable sum of money is yet needed if the boys are to make the trip.

The services of Hank Morin have been secured to hold the indicator and the game will start at 3 p. m. sharp.

SHYMAS PLAY CHAPMAN ACES THIS AFTERNOON

When the Shymas take the field at the Providence street grounds, Taftville, this afternoon against the fast Chapman Aces of Willimantic, in a return game, the fans of this vicinity will see one of the hardest hitting combinations to ever represent the local club. The management of the Shyma club during the past week went out and secured two new men who will, without a doubt, give them one of the best balanced ball clubs in the state. The Willimantic club has one of the best ball clubs in the vicinity and hold a win over the local boys, having defeated them last Sunday at Willimantic, by the score of 4 to 2.

The manager of the Shymas will put on the field the best ball club to represent the village this season, they will line-up in the following order: Ulewicz, of the Elks in the Junior league, 3b; N. Lemieux, the diminutive third baseman of the Thermos club, ss, Lefty Wilke, one of the steadiest ball player in this vicinity, 1b; Jimmy Murphy, of the J. B. Martin club and also of the Ideals, c; Pete Raymond, of the Wauregan Grays, 2b; Pete Finn, of the Champion Polish Citizens, cf; Ed Lemieux, of the Thermos team of the City league, lf; Jerry Raymond, rf; Dudek and Borden will substitute while the pitching will be taken care of by either Faucher or Sammy Raymond.

Sunday, the Shymas travel to Jewett City where they will clash with the H. N. S., in the first part of the double header at Ashland park.

ASHLAND TO HAVE STRONG TEAM AGAINST N. H. GIANTS

Sunday afternoon, at Ashland park, in the second game of a doubleheader, the fast Ashland Accos will oppose the clever New Haven Colored Giants. The Accos will put on the field the strongest combination available with Lloyd Jarvis, the star southpaw of the Acco team, the probable hurler. Lloyd will return to mound duty after a long layoff, because he has been giving all his attention to batting. Going through special pitching sessions he finds that the drops and curves of old are still with him.

Other players of promise are Nap Liberty, at third; Sekula, catch; Gaudette and Buba, in the outfield, with Derda stationed at first. A good game is expected as the Acco boys have held long practice sessions every day, with everyone confident of victory.

H. N. S. To Play Shymas

In the first game of the double-header the Holy Name team will oppose the classy Shyma of Taftville. Vachon and Pizzo will be the battery for the H. N. S., with Sammy Raymond and Burrille for the Shymas. Armand Gilbert will play centerfield for the H. N. S., where there has been a weak spot for a long time, but now believed to be well occupied.

PLAINFIELD-MOOSUP SERIES WILL START ON SUNDAY

Plainfield and Moosup baseball teams, of the Eastern Connecticut Twilight league, will go into battle Sunday afternoon at the Carpet grounds in Moosup in the first game of a five game series to decide just which team is the champion of that section. These two teams have met ten times this season with five victories for each club which shows them to be very evenly matched and a good series is expected.

The game will be called at 3 p. m. sharp by Umpire Gagnon, with Raymond officiating on the bases. The Moosup management has made a combination to seat the large crowd that is expected to be present. Bleachers have been put up capable of seating 800 people.

The probable lineups:

Plainfield—Cotnoir ss, Mercier 2b, Beausoliel c, Rissinger lf, Pechie 1b, Marriott rf, Ouillett 3b, Jodoin cf, Colcher or Allard p.

Moosup—Shaw lf, Dysert rf, Frechette 1b, Allard cf, Robitaille c, Tatro 3b, Silva ss, Stevens 2b, Eno p.

SARAZEN WINS LANNIN $5,000 MEMORIAL GOLF TOURNEY

SALISBURY PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 5.— (AP) —Scoring a 70 on the last round, Gene Sarazen, stocky professional from Flushing, N. Y., today won the $5,000 J. J. Lannin memorial open golf championship, with a 72-hole total of 287.

Runner-up with 288 was Walter Kozak, of Douglaston, N. Y., who shot rounds of 69 and 71 today and held the lead until Sarazen's fourth round 70 pushed him into second place.

Third honors went to Charles Lacey, a young Britisher from Clementon, N. J., whose first round 69 aided him in scoring an aggregate of 290. His last round 71 beat par by one stroke.

FREEMAN WINS WORLD'S WELTERWEIGHT CROWN BY OUTPOINTING THOMPSON

By CHARLES W. DUNKLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

LEAGUE PARK, Cleveland, O., Sept. 5—(AP)—Tommy Freeman, hairy-chested Cleveland veteran, was crowned welterweight champion of the world tonight.

He was awarded the title by Referee Patsy Haley, white haired veteran of New York, at the end of 15 rounds of fighting with Young Jack Thompson, Oakland, Calif., Negro, who was defending his title for the first time since he won it from Jackie Fields in Detroit, four months ago.

Haley did not hesitate an instant in reaching his verdict after the last punch went flying through the air. He unhesitatingly grabbed Freeman's gloved right fist and raised it in victory.

Thompson, the dethroned champion, stood in his corner, stunned by the verdict. He could not believe his eyes. Freeman was just as much surprised as the losing champion. The crowd of 16,000 spectators gasped at the swiftly moving drama going on in the ring and then cut loose with a mighty roar to greet the new champion of the welterweights. They have accepted Freeman as their citizen, although the new champion was born in Hot Springs, Ark.

Haley probably reached his decision on Freeman's dogged aggressiveness, although the spectators, at least those in the ring side seats, were convinced that Thompson had the margin in nine rounds on his masterly boxing skill. Thompson floored the new champion for a count of six with two ripping left hooks to the jaw in the second round and had him in distress at the end of the tenth when he landed a hard right to the jaw, just before the bell, that made Freeman's knees buckle.

Freeman made his big drive for the crown with the beginning of the twelfth round. He found Thompson, a tiring champion as this session began. Thompson in the previous round had worn himself to the point of exhaustion by his aggressive attack. When the twelfth started his punches began to lack steam and his speed apparently left him.

Thereafter, Freeman began to score effectively with lefts to the face and caused the champion to miss frequently.

Haley, the referee, said he based his decision on the fact that Freeman landed the cleaner punches and scored more frequently.

He credited Freeman with winning eight rounds, five going to Thompson and two being even.

"Freeman outscored Thompson with left hand jabs by at least three to one," Haley explained. "Thompson missed and you can't give a man credit for missing. Of course Thompson landed the harder punches but hard punches do not always win fights. Freeman made Thompson miss frequently. In fact I have never seen a champion miss so many punches.

The fight except for two or three rallies that brought the spectators to their feet, was comparatively tame. Thompson boxed cautiously and continuously circled the challenger while Freeman doggedly came charging into close quarters in his attempt to inflict body punishment.

WAUREGAN INDIES TO PLAY ON NEW GROUNDS

Through good sportsmanship, the Wauregan Independents have been offered the use of the Wauregan grounds formerly used by the Wauregan Grays, and this coming Sunday the Indies will meet the American Legion of Taftville on that ground and not the Cadets' grounds. The game will start at 3 o'clock. This will be the second game between these two teams. Wauregan won the first.

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY

September

Sweet fragrance of ripe fruit drifts on the air;
The crickets' chirp is louder in the grass;
Bronzed branches of old trees have care
For summer green when frosty dawns shall pass.

Tall goldenrod maturely stands beside
Brown roads that wander woodward by old walls
Of stones that grayer grow; the mullen's pride
In her warm velvet splendor slowly falls.

Stout thistles bend their daggers' rusty blades;
Ragged burdocks of a youthful glory tell;
Steeple bush and toadflax drowse in secret shades;
Blue sailors talk of quests incredible.

September smiles at lofty scorn or praise:
Too old she is, and young, for caring much;
But, walking down the woods and meadow ways—
Fringed gentians measure beauty by her touch.

RULES OF THE GAME

Dear Social Corner Editor and Members: I suppose a great many of you have been busy canning. I always thought I did pretty well at it myself usually doing about 200 jars a year until I read these Rules of the Game which I am sending in. They apply to a family of five and apply only to winter months or as far as the number of cans go:

"For every member of the family—1. Two servings of vegetables every day not counting potatoes dried peas nor beans, 170 Qt jars. 2. Three times a week, one of these servings should be a leafy vegetable, lettuce, celery, asparagus, cabbage, beets and onion tops. Greens of all kinds. 78 Qt. jars. 3. Two servings of fruit daily, this may be either fresh, dried or canned; jellies and jams not counted. 200 Qt. jars. 4. At least three times a week these serving of fruit should include citrus fruit or tomatoes. Tomatoes in diet count as fruit rather than a vegetable. 111 Qt. jars. 5. Every day, if it is at all possible, one fruit or vegetable should be served raw. 6. A quart of milk per day for each child and a pint a day for each adult, a part of which can be used in cooking.

The above will make an adequate diet no matter where you live, if supplemented by meat, eggs and other protein foods, by plenty of water, by at least one serving of butter, by cereal food, at least a part of them whole grain cereals."

How near have you come to this goal? I have done 316 jars not counting jellies and jams since July 1, and don't know exactly how many before, maybe 50. but still see what a long way I am from being a winner.

Don't Worry: Was glad to see you and children had been on a motor trip. Hope you found all well. Who looked after mister while away?

Congratulations, prize winners, you deserve it. I enjoy all the letters but especially like those from which I am able to learn.

I hope Quid Nunc writes about modern times.

I enjoyed attending the Home Makers' program at Storrs on Wednesday. All was very instructive. Was glad to see the charts and samples of mischief done by corn borer, as I had never seen one before. I hear they are doing damage in our town.

Trust all are enjoying these fine days.

MY FIRST DAY IN SCHOOL

Dear Social Corner: My sister Myrtle and I began our school life together when she was six years old and I was four. Mother carried us to school that first morning. I remember little of that first journey to Titus, but now how familiar is every bend in the road and bit of meadow or woodland! How many times I have walked over that grass grown road!

When we reached the school house, Miss Bennett, the teacher, met us at the door. She gave Myrtle and me a front seat which we were to occupy together. I looked around the room and thought myself in a strange place. The walls were bare except in a few places where hung much soiled wall-paper. The curtains, if you could call them that, were nothing more than tattered shades of thin cloth. There were ten double desks for the children and one for the teacher. The blackboards were simply boards painted black. I had no more time to make observations then, for the bus arrived with its crowd of noisy boys and girls. They were all older than Myrtle and I so we thought they were most grown up. Presently Miss Bennett rang the bell and the room became very quiet. I felt it would be a good time to talk to my sister. "Myrtle, what is—" but I got no further for Miss Bennett was looking at me and saying, "Little girls should not talk now."

She gave me a book and said something about learning the first lesson. As I had no idea what was expected of me. I sat very still and looked at the pictures. After a few minutes that seemed a long time to me, the teacher called us to her desk. I was glad that Myrtle came too, for I didn't want to stand alone before all the big scholars. Miss Bennett talked about the story on the first page of the book that she had given me. She asked a lot of questions and we answered most of them. Then she told us to put our books away before we went out to play. The other children went out to play, too. When Miss Bennett rang the bell we had to go back into the school house. She gave us a big picture book to look at but I liked to watch the pupils and hear them recite.

At noon we were again allowed to go out to play. Myrtle and I sat on the ledge and ate our lunch. Nearly one third of the school yard is ledge. On the east side there was a garden of weeds, or that is what they seemed to be. After eating we walked down the road with a girl whose first name was just like mine. We went to a pretty little brook where we got a drink of water out of a cocoanut shell. I heard the bell ring and we all had to run back to school and reached there just in time.

The afternoon seemed very long to me, but I had a good time making pictures. At last came the time for dismissal and Myrtle and I walked home, two tired little school girls.

Conclusion. At the time I wrote this account of my first day at Titus, I was a freshman in high school, and did not know that I should travel that same grassy road five years more as teacher in the same building where I attended school for ten years. Today there is no sound of children's voices at old Titus for it was abandaned last year for a new building in another location. Oh, schoolmates of long ago, let's meet at the old schoolhouse once more and sit on the sunny ledge to talk over the days that are gone!

SOCIAL CORNER EVENTS

September 9—Club No. 2 meets in Buckingham Memorial.

A FOUR DAY TRIP

Dear Social Corner Friends: We have been away for four days and enjoyed every minute, but as "Farmer John" said in my old reading book, "The best of the journey is getting home." We went up through the White mountains on two rainy days, but there were many other tourists all along the way and we could see the Old Man of the Mountains and Indian Head perfectly. The Old Man's Foot and the Basin were well worth the drenching we got to see them and we had room in the car to change some of our wet garments. A car close behind us had several rumble seat passengers and when they tried to get under cover it looked like close quarters. We could have tented if the ground had not been so wet, but had the fun of an overnight cabin that the children had long wanted to try. At Fryeburg we had two nights in a big tent with a floor and on Sunday eve saw Mrs. Peary, her son, Richard, Jr., the "Snow Baby" and two grandsons of Admiral Peary when a beautiful boulder was unveiled near the two stones marking the meridian line he set up there in the time he spent there following college. The friend who spoke about him—Prof. Burton of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology—was very fine. As soon as we got home I went to the library to find out more about him and found Mrs. Peary's Arctic Journal inspiring "What courage and womanly devotion she showed in her travels with her husband!

We spent one night at Welles beach and saw the seals swimming before the door in the ocean and jelly fish washed up from a storm. We followed the beaches quite a ways, coming down from Portland, then came across on Route 110 and visited Ford's Wayside inn on our way into Worcester.

I have been interested in the references in the Social Corner letters to the Next to Nothing house. I wonder why we cannot work out similar beauty with what we can get together of old pieces of furniture. But we seem to put other work ahead of the beautifying tasks, some of us. I used to think I could be contented with just what I happened to have, but we do crave beauty and order and they are worth striving for. So I'm still hoping to achieve more in the future. I have a real old house to work on and am anxious not to introduce any false notes in the furnishings. But most of the furnishings came down to me with the house and some later additions need to be set aside.

The garden still keeps us busy—now in the harvesting stage. Most of my cans are full and much more to be attended to. With all best wishes.

GREETINGS TO ALL FROM FLORIDA

Dear Editor and Sisters of the Social Corner: After a year's silence I will write again. Aries sent me four of the last Corner pages, so I can see what the other writers mean. Just a half page in one issue. Too bad. But, then, between hard times and vacations, the page is suffering.

Aunt Susie: I have often wondered, too, about Club 4 in Plainfield. I was at the first meeting of all there. Only eight members came in; four walked by but didn't tarry. Our hostess was so disappointed over that day.

Balsam Fir: I owe you a letter, too. Will write soon. You certainly have had plenty of company and good times this summer. 'Twill be nice to remember this winter when you are snowed in again.

Cactus Blossom: Will you be at home in Florida this winter? Would like to call on you again.

Aries: I'd love to be able to walk through your "happy thought garden" with you. Must have been a surprising novelty on the vegetables. Also can imagine hearing your good man sputter at the mixup there. Did he make that trip you wrote of?

Sis Hopkins: Your letter of July 26th issue was very interesting. As I have seen and heard both sides of that question, it's a puzzle that will be long to unravel. Am against drinking myself. Many an honest officer has been framed up because he wanted to do his duty right, to stick by the oath he took, etc. Have you read of that diary of the Chicago gunman who was mixed up in the killing of the reporter? Who could you trust in politics, courts and justice done. after reading that list of names mentioned there. The department of justice will do its share of work if it takes complete charge, and do it very thoroughly. Here is something that was heard not long ago: "The government will have to enlarge all the jails of the country soon, because half of the U. S. is either using or selling liquor." Honest, Sis. Hopkins, it's enough to "het up" anybody and everybody.

About the cold weather up there. Wish we could have given some of our warm weather and rain. Florida had rain from May 26th steady, every day or night up to July 5th. We've had showers since, too. Lucky there were no hurricanes. In Daytona Beach, while our hottest (96 above zero) spell, there was a freak in the Gulf stream. The water at the beach was so cold that folks couldn't stay in over five minutes. In Daytona, proper, the heat was up to 96 degrees and on the beach only 75 above. The beach was crowded, but not many went bathing for about a week. Down on the island where we were to move, in June. there is still plenty of high water. My garden is the home of a few mudfish, minnows, a five foot alligator and a few snakes occasionally.

Will tell you about something that happened there last week. My son, Frederick, was working on a motor boat with his dad. Our dog Trixie, was playing nearby, when all of a sudden a swamp rabbit jumped through the weeds ahead of the dog. She ran after it barking aplenty and then gave a scared bark. There was a big commotion at the puddle's edge and that 'gator was thrashing water. My son thought the 'gator had Trixie, so he waded in, waist deep, with his machinist hammer in hand, and calling to his dad to get the rifle, that the 'gator had Trixie. He hit the 'gator with the hammer on the snoot so hard it was stunned. He pried its jaws apart and found it was the rabbit instead of Trixie. He took the rabbit and threw it ashore. There stood the dog wagging her tail, glad to get her rabbit back. And she ate it, too. So Trixie and the 'gator are still in the garden on the island, for I saw both this week when I went there.

There are quite a few snakes lately on account of high water and the blacks in the back swamp cutting pine and cypress logs. That disturbs the snakes. Today a raft of logs about one-half mile long is on the way to the saw mills in Palatka, Fla., towed by a tugboat.

Must also tell of viewing my first log raft on the St. John's river. 'Twas while I went fishing with my hubby a few years back, and our boat was tied up between two big palmetto trees near shore. We heard and saw the tug whistling, a mile down the river. I watched, for that was new to me. But after the tug was past and around the bend, that raft kept going by. To my horror, those 50 and 60 foot logs were coming closer and closer on our side of the river. 'Twas lucky hubby had tied our boat as he did, for the end of that raft hit the further palmetto so hard, I thought trees, boats and all were gone. I never want to get caught on the river by one of those rafts. We were 18 miles from home and in the wilderness stretches. Thank the Lord we were safe and on shore at that time.

Free Air: Are you to be in Florida this season? Hope business is good for your better half.

I will close this time hoping the page will fill up soon, to overflowing. Best wishes to all and may those who are sick and shut in be well soon.
E. M. R. C. P. (May 7, Club 4)

JUST A FEW WORDS OF THANKS

Dear Social Corner: I am writing this time to thank "A Friendly Voice" for information regarding the "chenile looking blossoms" we had growing in our flower garden. Taking it for granted they were princess feather I pulled them up root and branch before they had a chance to go to seed and self sow for a crop next year.

Thank you both, Sister Rhody and Pernickety, for package of perennial flower seeds that you so kindly sent a few days ago. Have planted a portion of them already and will plant rest in the spring. In looking over names in my Social Corner book I fail to find either of yours, so have yet to ascertain your real names, as am quite sure I haven't met either of you at any Club No. 4 meeting I have attended; but hope to do so in the near future.

Bee True: I think of you often and hope your strength will keep adequate to your tasks. I know from experience how reading aloud long at a time taxes ones eyes and voice, although reading is a great pleasure to myself as well as to many others.

Susanna writes most interesting letters of countries visited while touring Europe. The reading of them is next best to going to places in person. She must have had a wonderful time.

Irma Lynn: I do hope you left a few potatoes to grow larger, later on, in your experimental barrel.

Wish I had some exciting and interesting experience to write about, as a number of members have already been sending in theirs to Social Corner page, but my summer has been very quiet and uneventful taken as a whole. Have had a few pleasant auto rides here and there and called on a number of shut ins and tried to give each a cheery word of comfort.

Presume other members, like myself, are busy these days canning, pickling and preserving fruits and vegetables as they ripen so all are laying in a store of good things to be enjoyed through the winter months.

Fairs will be held at many places during this month and if one attends them all their time will be well taken up. Do hope all fairs prove great successes as it means so much time and labor spent in preparing for the events. Shall be looking forward to reading of notice of a September meeting of Club No. 4 before long and hope to hear then how each one has passed the summer.
AMLY.

PRICES IN OTHER DAYS

Dear Social Corner Friends: I'm looking over an old account book of 1833. I find names of Walter Peck, Issaih Clark, Obediah N. Butts, Russel Adams, Rufus John, Jeremiah Young, Peter Spicer, Egbert Bingham, Edwin S. Phinney, Abiather Park, Newton Peck.

Here are a few items and prices. One day's work 67c, one day's work 57c, one day's work 75c, half day's work, 25. I judge the price varied according to the kind of work they did. One ox whip 17c, one lash 8c, one pocket knife 14c, mending one pair of boots 50c, three yards cotton cloth 75c, seven yards cotton cloth 93c, one pair of suspenders 34c, one pair of boots $2.25, six pounds of veal 18c, oxen and wagon to Canterbury 62c, one quarter of beef $4.50, half a bushel salt 42c, drawing wood one day $1, four and one half pounds butter 74c, shearing sheep $1, mowing clover $1.50, one quarter of mutton 87c, horse and wagon 31c getting out flax 34c, washing sheep 58c, three barrels cider $2.50, four bushels potatoes $1.33, two hens 50c, to one month's work $14.50, one saw and auger 25c, one meal of victuals 8c, half pound of tobacco 12c, one cheese $1.12, one bladder of snuff 28c, getting in rye $1, one pair shoes $1.41, one gallon of rum 30c, dressing one pig 25c, making one thousand and a half shingles $1.50, sawing stuff 84c, two quarts gin 25c, half bushel corn 42c. The account book belonged to Charles Cutler. A few other names in the book were Moses B. Adams, Chauncy Adams, Clarissa Adams, Harvey Neff and Ebinezer Park. A few others I cannot make out as the letters "a" and "o" are not closed up entirely. Ink is of good color and writing and figures as a whole are very good.

Cleaning house brings out antiquated articles, I have bound volume of "New England Farmer" bearing date of Aug. 2, 1823.

ANXIOUS FOR MORE MEETINGS

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: After reading so many interesting letters in The Bulletin, can't keep silent. Even if my letter does not interest anyone, it will let the writers know that the letters are read and appreciated by those who fail to do their share.

All of the accounts of the Club 6 picnic at the home of Wheeler have been great and Tish's experience beats them all. When we hear the good times the members have at the meetings we wish someone would fill B. Natural's place. She has not been able to take charge of any meetings for so long and have one here again. We have at least 17 members here in Mystic.

I had the pleasure of attending the Denison reunion, that being my name. What a wonderful old house and filled with so many antiques and all had the pleasure of seeing them. The papers wrote it up well and Mrs. Gates deserves the thanks of all the large crowd there.

Just at present men are in the village getting the names for the directory published once in two years and that length of time makes many changes.

Wishing all the readers everywhere success and happiness.
DENNY.

OPENING THE INDOOR SEASON.

Dear Editor and Friends: As summer's rapid flight has merged into autumn days and the Social Corner out door recreation period is over, Buckingham Memorial has again opened its doors for another period of indoor social gatherings and as Club No. 5 held its first meeting on Sept. 3rd it also opened the Social Corner season.

During the vacation, one of the older member of the Social Corner who was very loyal to the Corner, has finished her musical work at the gatherings and has made the crossing, so other hands will carry on the line of work that Joan, the faithful, loved so well to do at the Social Corner. Sadly missed in the home life, she will also be mourned in the social life.

Again the merry hum and cherry chatter reminds us of many delightful social gatherings gone with the passing years, but starting the new year with hostess Elva and willing helpers the work moved smoothly forward to the dinner hour.

Preceding the serving, with Snowflake at the piano, we sang Blest Be The Ties, and a delicious dinner in quality and quantity was served which gave the satisfying after-dinner effect.

A short, but interesting program was much enjoyed but as all good times come to a close, the successful September Social Corner meeting of Club No. 5 became a thing of the past.
GUSTA. (Club No. 5)

SEPTEMBER

Dear Editor and Members: Greetings to all born in September. We find the earth now in the sign Virgo and all people born between August 23rd and September 23rd are Virgo subjects and ruled by planet mercury. This sign (or month) rules the bowels and solar plexus in the human body and promotes love and marriage in the astral plain. The trite of this sign is Benjamin, meaning power. The colors are amber, gold and turquoise. February and November are best months of the year for Virgo people to begin new work or start an enterprise. And Wednesday is their best day of the week. As this is an earth sign, Virgo people agree best with other earth sign people i. e. those born in Tamus and Capricorn. The flower is the cornflower and the gem is sardonyx and sapphire.

Sister Rhody and Pernickety: Thank you so much for lovely flower seeds.

Betsy Bobbot: The spider flower is open and chinese blue flowers were lovely.

Woodside: You got the box number wrong again; you tease.

Avon and Alta: Please accept our sympathy, also all others in sorrow.

PROGRESS OF THE FLOWERS

Dear Social Corner Members: When I went over to water the little plants in the cold frame tonight, I took along the list so that I might know just which ones were up. Of course I could tell the leaves of some, but I am not familiar with some of the others yet.

Plant labels? Yes, but I've numbered them and on my list have set the name of the plant next the number. Once I thought I was very smart when I put the first letter of the name of each kind of plant on the label. Unfortunately there were several things that began with the letter C and I am still puzzling as regards their identity.

There are more of the new sweet williams than of anything else. Hundreds of them. Want a plant? Both the wild and tame lupines seem to have come up all right and so have most of the other things. The hardy phlox haven't shown up yet. They are said to be slow in germinating. I wonder how slow? Delphinium seed isn't supposed to come up well the second year and it didn't. Both the butterflys and the regular ones are still under the ground. The primulas are on strike too, but they weren't of enough importance so I cared much about them.

Hollyhocks, globe thistles and hardy salvias are large enough to transplant and as soon as we have a really damp, cloudy day I shall have to move them. I think I shall leave most of the plants in the beds this year—last year they killed worse in the garden than they did in the frame.

Cut in the garden the grape hyacinths are coming up—promise of next spring's blooms. And the fall catalogs have been coming, too. I'd like to have some tulips and more daffodils, but I haven't a very good place to put them even if I should buy them. I filled up the places where I thought they would do well last year.

We are picking more bouquets now. You should have seen all the sweet peas I picked last night! There were over 200 fine large sprays. Did I tell you that the duplex didn't come up at all? I can't understand why they did not. But the others have done well in spite of the dryness. They are still full of buds. I think mulching helped them a great deal. Forget-me-nots and yellow gladioli, phlox and larkspur, dragonhead and cosmos, asters and nicotiana—there's almost no end of the combinations one may use.

Now to bed and dream about them.
PERNICKETY.

THE NORTH STONINGTON PICNIC

Dear Editor, Members: I was very sorry to have to let last week go by and not send in a letter. Doubly so as I attended the picnic at Wheeler's and had to leave without telling the hostess what a good time we had. We had a delicious dinner which must have been a big task for Wheeler, Weus and Yellow Jacket, to say nothing of the men folks and their part. There is such an amount of regular work on a farm like that where there is such a big family that extra work means a lot of planning. It meant a lot of extra work, too, for Prairie Chicken, who also has plenty to do at home. I am sure everyone appreciates the work done to give us such a nice time. It was not entirely a strange place to me as I used to visit at a neighboring farm when a child.

After lunch Pyrethrum, Tish, Topsy, Skipper Even Shirley and several others went around to look at the flowers and in our wandering came to what I should judge was the goat-yard, although there was a big flock of young turkeys in there too. There were three young goats which easily climbed the wall into the next pasture but they came back as the mother was hobbled and could not climb. Here I must say that while we have a lot we thought held the record for rocks, Mr. Coats certainly has one to beat it. That prehistoric glacier must have had special dumping grounds.

Well, to get back to the goats. There was an old billy, who had long horns and it, too, was hobbled for which we were very glad. I expect those youngsters would have been tickled to pieces to let him loose in that crowd of women. Then some-one said let's go see the Indian fire place and Pyrethrum. Tish, Eben Shirley and I and a whole bunch of youngsters started under the escort of Yellow Jacket's son. He said it was only a little ways over "there" so we walked and walked and walked. That is, we walked when we weren't climbing up the side of a rock or sliding down one. On top of a big rocky ledge we could look straight down. I don't know how many feet. We came finally to what he said was the fire place, a very picturesque spot not far from a brook. We followed the brook on the way back. The banks on each side were nearly perpendicular and large trees that had fallen down across it were many feet above the bed of the stream. I expect those were Indian bridges, Clifton, don't you? When we had followed the brook as far as possible we climbed that steep hillside by pulling ourselves up by trees and bushes. Tish lost her hat several times besides doing all sorts of things to her stockings and Eben Shirley tore her dress which I think was the extent of the casualities. Tish's shoe untied and she didn't dare stop to tie it up because she was afraid she would be left behind. It was after 4 before we got back to the house and our people were anxiously awaiting our return. We stopped at a well and had a drink of cold water on our way back that was certainly refreshing to our over heated systems. Tish and Pyrethrum thought they would hurry on ahead so if we were due for trouble they could hear the most of it before the rest of us got there (ahem), but I caught up with them and we were hurrying along through a pasture and across a small brook that was nearly dry. It had just small puddles and mostly mud and Pyrethrum stepped on a stone that rolled and she fell in. If she had landed six inches either way from where she did she wouldn't have gotten wet. Mr. P told her in the morning that she should take her bathing suit, but she said there was no place to go swimming up there. You see, she didn't know her brooks. She was very fortunate though in getting off with only a skinned elbow. Mr. and Mrs. Beers and Milky Way were anxiously awaiting us so we left immediately for home. If we had had the time though Pyrethrum and I were game for a trip to the bear's den, wherever that is, but Tish decided she had had enough for one day.

Cosmos: I didn't get a chance to ask you if you were going to Durham?

Topsy: Too bad you didn't go with us, you like to walk so well.

Pyrethrum: Hope we'll see you Sunday. Think it will be my turn then but I am afraid I could do as well as you and R. did. Tell L. that I insist we save some for supper. It tasted good though, 'cause I didn't have to cook it.

A Friendly Voice: Those little toads you saw were just migrating from their birthplace in a pond or spring to their various homes in the wide world. The toads go to water each spring to lay their eggs with their cousins the frogs. For a period of time after hatching they look alike but when the toad gets to be the size of a five cent piece and a little larger they leave the water, selecting usually a damp foggy day and they keep themselves hidden as much as possible under the sticks, leaves, etc. The clear sweet call we hear in the spring are really the toads and that is the only time they do sing. If you will read Thornton Burgess' "Old Mr. Toad", I think you would find it interesting.

Pernickety and Sister Rhody: Milky Way and I were at Storrs the day you were and looked at the flower beds but what I don't know about the names of flowers would fill a very large book. Certainly the beds in front of Horticultural hall were gorgeous.
SUMAC (No. 6).

INTERESTED IN FLOWERS

Dear Social Corner Friends: I have started several letters this summer but none got mailed as some thing always came up before they were finished. I have enjoyed the letters about flower gardens so much and would love to see some of the gardens. But I don't even have time to look at my own as much as I should. It is a regular swamp. My asters have done wonderful as they were only cheap seed I bought from a school child. My French marigold that I got from Beers has done the best of anything I have.

Milky Way: A thousand thanks. I wasn't expecting such a large one. It is lovely. If I have anything you want you can have it. I called up several times to see if you were home. I was coming over after it but never found you home. Then the summer rush came on and I couldn't go any where. I always like to try some new plant. I have about an acre of flowers crowded into about ten square feet or something like that. My hardy carnations have been lovely. I have so many different shades. One salmon varigated withered. I would like to have been with Tish on her trip. Sounded interesting to me.

I just heard that Zulieka has been confined to her bed all summer I feel so sorry for her as she tried so hard to pull through the winter without any sick spell and then had to be shut in all summer.

I am trying to get a collection of begonias. That is all I intend to have for the winter as it seems the only thing I can make grow aside from my cactus plants.

Best wishes to everyone
JUST-A-NUT.

GREETINGS FROM MILKY WAY

Corner Sisters, One and All: I just want to add my thanks to Wheeler, We, Us, and Yellow Jacket for their opening their home to such a crowd of people. I am sure every one enjoyed the day.

Sister Rhody: I am sorry that I had to miss that day at Kingston. Had planned to go but couldn't make it. But Topsy, Tish, Coony and I did go there a day at Homemakers' week and had a wonderful time. Attended lecture in Edward's hall, dinner in East hall and demonstrations in both Agricultural and Lippett halls. Was sorry that we couldn't stay for recreation after, but it was getting time for supper so we had to leave. One of the finest things at our own Farm and Home week in Connecticut at Storrs was the recreation hour. This was in charge of Miss Ella Gardner, and she is going to work in this state in Oct. I hope many will have a chance to meet her.

E. L. M.: You should be glad you live where it is quiet. Cars have been going at an average of 900 an hour for three days and nights. I don't think I will ever be able to hear any thing but traffic again.

I hope some one will write an account of their trip to Durham. Good-night Everyone.
MILKY WAY.

DEPENDS ON THE CORNER

Editor of the Social Corner: When I wish for information on any subject, I always come to the Social Corner for help and have always found just the thing I was seeking. Can any of the Social Corner members tell me if they know of any one that has Shepherd Sweeting apples for sale? I ask for them so often and no one seems to know of such an apple. They are simply delicious, and I would be so glad to get some. Another matter that I am interested in is the cross word puzles in the Bulletin. I love to work them out but so many times the answers are never published which is very discouraging.

What has become of our good friend Dad Shaw? I miss his bright cheery letters.

Think this will do for this time with best wishes to all the Social Corner members.
LEBA.

FLOWERS AND RECIPES.

Mr. Editor and Social Corner Sisters: Many thanks for the yellow slip, also to Sister Rhody and Pernickety for the flower seeds. Am curious to know what kinds there are in the package, and will sow them soon.

My present garden is small, but it gives me a chance for some "playful puttering." I miss the half acre I used to have when I had the farm. This spring, because a new fence had to be built around my garden, it was started late. Although the ground is poor and partially shaded by the high building next door, some things have done very well, especially iris, phlox, columbine, coreopsis, gaillardia and petunias. My "glads" were a disappointment. They were always sure bloomers at the farm. But this year instead of blossomin', they grew tall and rank and, in spite of extra deep planting have sprawled at all unsightly angles. Calendulas were small, and calliopsis, Chinese forget-me-nots, scabiosas, bachelor-buttons, and shirley poppies have exhibited a tendency to lay down. Poor things, I was away during that hot dry spell, and they got discouraged. I don't blame them.

Do you know the plant called artemisia (ghost plant), with white leaved mist-like foliage? It's lovely in a perennial border, combines beautifully with cut flowers, and is fine, too, for winter bouquets. I must have one.

My blue lace flowers have been very satisfactory. They stand next to the yellow calliopsis and make a pleasant combination.

Last spring I rescued an Easter lily which my doctor neighbor was going to throw in the ash can. I planted it in my garden and today it is opening a wonderful blossom. A Regal lily will also blossom in a few days. Next year I plan to have more perennials. Wasn't it Frances Duncan who wrote, "Annuals are to a garden as summer boarders are to a town—useful, but by no means taking the place of year-round residents (perennials)."

Sister Rhody: Instead of adding vinegar to your elderberry pie, try this way for a change. Fill crust two-thirds full of elderberries, with flour and sugar. Cover with thin slices of sour apples, and bake with two crusts. You will find this very nice.

Mr. Editor, if you like pie, just ask your wife to make you a cream grape pie sometime. Chances are you'll want more after you've had a taste. Here's the rule.

Cream Grape Pie: One-half cup of grape jelly (or grape juice can be used), one-half cup milk, yolks of two eggs, cook in double-boiler until thick. Sweeten to taste. A little corn-starch may be added if needed. Bake with one crust. Use whites of eggs for meringue.

Am glad the meetings are to begin again. Hope to see many of you there. I didn't get a chance to attend a single picnic, sorry to say.
THE FRIENDLY VOICE.

CLUB 2 OPENS SEASON SEPT. 9

Social Corner Folks: The first fall indoor Corner meeting of club No. 2 in Buckingham Memorial will be on Tuesday, Sept. 9. U. C. E. is the hostess. Those who promised food for this dinner please bring it, and if you cannot come please see that what you were to give is sent to the hall. Let us see if the first meting cannot be a bannner one especially with enough taken in to meet the expenses of the dinner. The past year was not a success in finances, food or hostesses. For me it meant hard work. The responsibility rested on my shoulders of getting food, paying bills getting a hostess and two or three times the hostess couldn't serve and left it for me to fill in with the work on short notice. With one faithful worker both on dinner and entertainment gone to New Hampshire we are going to feel the loss of Mawb and Joan's death will mean a loss in our entertainment work at the piano.

Club 2 was started about 17 years ago at the home of our late sister Aunt Abby and as a charter member of Club 2 I have tried to work for the upbuilding and success of the club with a pleasant word and smile whether I received a knock or praise but I was very much discouraged with last year's meetings of the club. Am trusting under new working conditions you will have a successful year during 1930-31.

P. S. Alla: My heartfelt sympathy in your hours of trouble in the death of your husband.
CALLA LILY

THE PERFECT FRIEND

Dear Social Corner Members: Once I had two acquaintances. They were both Civil war veterans. One would come to the other's home and, finding him sitting quietly in his cosy kitchin, he would sit down on a chair near the door. There they would sit, perhaps an hour, not a word said, but with complete understanding.

Who knows what recollections were stirred of long night of cold, weary vigil, days of almost starvation, longing for a message from home and the unutterable thoughts passing through both minds as they sat together.

Then the old veteran would go home, not one word being said, perfectly contented that they had done their part in the world's work. Today my friends rest in God's acre, with their G. A. R. emblem above them.

But, at close of day, I sit and vision them as they were years ago, and their memory brings a feeling of peacefulness an drest. My friends.
THE BRANSHEE.

A TRIP TO "HOMEY IN THE HILLS."

Dear Social Corner Editor and Friends: We are all glad, I think, to have it a little cooler with the longer evenings. It makes it pleasanter for us to write a letter to the Corner, does it not?

Doris: You certainly found some nice ways of using adhesive tape. I have also used it for mending pottery and I have it over a small leak in my long spouted watering pot which I use for potted plants. I pressed it over the leak and then painted over it. I hope it stays on. If it doesn't I will have to get a new one, and they are rather costly considering their size and material.

Some one has written that their beets didn't grow. Did you put a little wood ashes about them and hoe it in? If that did no good then get tobacco stems and cover with boiling water and let stand over night and soak the beets thoroughly with the tobacco water. It is good for asters that don't grow, too.

I would like to suggest to any one who is planning to take a trip, now or later, to the Palmetto state to, gather all the fallen branches you can (the lower branches are always falling off) and save them for porch furniture. They make sturdy and good looking chair, tables, benches and stools down there. Why not here?

Toward the last of March when the oranges were still in full bloom we made a trip to Homey, the Florida Alps. The tourist drives many, many miles and in every direction sees nothing but blooming trees of orange, lemon, or grapefruit and just imagine the fragrance of the air. At the top of the beautiful rolling hills is Mr. Homey's residence fronted by a terra cotta wall about three feet high and at the foot of the wall two feet wide a massed bed of real purple petunias and inside the yard grow the scarlet and yellow bantanas with the deep lavender ones three and four feet high. This is a sight long to be remembered in the beautiful land of sunshine. This is claimed to be the largest development of citrus groves in the world.

Fox Glove: Was sorry not to be able to get to your picnic, but maybe next time.

Pernickerty: Thomas Edward Brown wrote "My Garden," of which you quoted a part.

A garden is a lonesome thing, God wot!
Rose plot, fringed pool, fern'd grot—
The veriest school of peace; and yet
The fool contends that God is not—
Not God! In gardens! When the eve is cool?
Nay, but I have a sign;
'Tis very sure God walks in mine.

Sister Rhody and Calla Lily: I know where you can get a lovely 14-inch gazing globe for $21. They are certainly worth the price as it makes your garden four times more beautiful.

Effie M. and Chelsea: I so enjoyed your visit.

Betsy Bobbet: Did the roots grow? If so, you did some coaxing.

Alfara: How are yours? and Helper, too? I haven't over 15 canterbury bells and I sowed a nice bed of them. A fair amount of sweet williams came through the heat of the torrid sun and are looking well now.

Ann Tenna: Where are you? We miss you.

I. J. B., Marigold and Apple Blossom: Don't forget us.

Best wishes to all.
CANTERBURY BELL.

JOINS THE CORNER

Dear Social Corner Editor: I have attended several of the Social Corner picnics, and was so cordially welcomed by all, I feel I am one of the Corner.

I would like to mention the picnic last week at North Windham. The day was beautiful, a good number attended, and a bountiful dinner (as usual) was well served by the hostess and her helpers.

The afternoon was spent on the lawn under the large trees, (one a very large pine). some with work, others telling stories and jokes. All had a pleasant time, thanks to the hostess and all who helped to make the picnic a success.

We have had pleasant times meeting friends and acquaintences during the summer, so I would like to become a member of the Corner and enjoy more of the good times.

Will take as by pen name
OLDTOWN.

GREETINGS FROM E. L. M.

Dear Social Corner Members: September has sure started in well for hot weather; not much pleasure in what ever one is doing.

Milksham: Many thanks for the card; glad you are getting another trip and of course we want to hear about it.

Pernickety and Sister Rhody: Some surprise thank you. The postmark had me guessing. Hope to meet you some time.

Fire Fly and Flossy: You ought to give us some interesting letters after your trips.

This is not much of a letter but will do better next time.
E. L. M.

KEEP SUMMER IN YOUR SOUL.

Dear Social Corner: I have been so well pleased with what Wilhelmina Stitch says that I want to pass it along, as follows:

"Keep summer in your soul though black the day. Look straight toward the goal, press on alway. Count not each weary mile with heavy sigh. Best joke a bit and smile as hours fly by. To this belief cling fast: the days ahead will wipe away the past, and grief lie dead; there is a joyous morrow around the bend; now fold away your sorrow, discouraged friend.

"To those who speak of sadness turn deaf ears. Hark to the song of gladness throughout the years. There's harvest for your reaping, there is, I know! You cannot, when you're weeping, see hope's bright glow. Why say these thoughts are vain? Vain is despair, when lilac, drench with rain, scents all the air."
EVE.

ANOTHER CORNER MEMBER

Dear Social Corner Editor: I have been invited to the Social Corner picnics and had a fine time at every one. Now, I think it is time I joined the Corner. I will take as my pen name that were displayed as Uncle Eli opened his mouth to tuck in some fine-cut. "Uh, I should have known by your fine teeth that you were quite young yet," Gideon finished hopefully.
MOTHERWORT.

THE YOUNG MAN

Uncle Eli's hand halted. His blue eyes began to blink rapidly. The wrinkles in his tanned old face deepened and spread into a wide smile.

"Ain't many fellers my age can show teeth like that, is they?" he inquired. "Hey? Ain't that a fact now?" And he cocked his head on one side and looked up at Gideon with anticipation.

"It certainly is," Gideon agreed earnestly.

The fingers that held the fine-cut opened. The tobacco dropped unheeded to the floor. Uncle Eli reached gnarled fingers into his mouth, took out his upper plate and waved it before Gideon's startled eyes for a moment. Then, with it back in place once more, he slapped the side of his leg.

"That's one on you, Bub!" he chortled. "Thought they was real, didn't you? Hey? Thought they was real!" And Uncle Eli's skinny little frame shook with enjoyment of the moment.

Gideon found himself laughing also "I did," he agreed. "I was—um—fooled. Indeed! But, in spite of the fact, I wonder if you would care to come back to—uh—work. Any time you are able. I will see that the discharge order is revoked"

"Be right on time in the morning." Uncle Eli said sociably. "I still got a good throttle hand." He took a chew of fine-cut and then winked at Gideon P. Fish. "Shucks, Bub," he said in a friendly tone that wiped away all past scores. "You took me off the payroll, but you never fired me. Ain't a man livin' can do that."

That ended Round 3. I guess both Gideon and Uncle Eli won. At any rate, they smiled at each other.

WESTERLY

MANY MATTERS BEFORE THIRD DISTRICT COURT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, Sept. 5—Judge Oliver H. Williams held a session of third district court on Friday morning when court matters were disposed of as follows:

The Kibbe Bros. Co., of Boston vs. James A. Koulbanis. If unanswered, continued one week.

P. B. Aiello vs. Joseph Lupinazzo, alias. Continued one week.

Civil docket—Crandon Bros., Inc., vs. Reuben T. Holland. Continued one week.

General Equipment corporation vs. Frank H. Bliven. Continued one week for settlement.

Peter Kempil vs. Konrad Andrakson. At request of Attorney Ferguson, set down for trial next Friday.

Mary Erebleska vs. John H. Zendzian, alias. Continued one week.

Michael D. G. Papalia vs. Holden P. Ballou. Heard in part at previous court session and additional continuance of one week granted.

Boston Lightning Rod Co. vs. Westerly Ice Co. Continued one week.

In the action under the new summary judgment statute brought against E Worth Co., Ltd., court directed Attorney Ferguson for the respondents, to file preemptorially an affidavit of defense or evidence with the court within 48 hours.

Criminal docket—State, vs. John Burns of Bradford, complaint and warrant in search and seizure of liquors in raid made at Bradford. There was no appearance entered for the liquors and vessels and Judge Williams ordered a warrant issued for the forfeiture and destruction of the liquors and the sale or destruction of the vessels.

State, vs. James Gencarella, complaint and warrant, in search and seizure of liquors and vessels in a raid made on West street. Attorney Clarence E. Roche entered his appearance for and claimed the liquors and vessels seized. The case was continued one week.

John J. Lyon of Providence was before the court on the complaint of Sherwood F. Healy of the state police department, charging the defendant on Aug. 15th with speeding on the Nooseneck Hill state highway. He entered a plea of nolo. State officer trailed him from the Ten Rod Filling station to the Wyoming crossing, a distance of 5 miles when clocked speed showed 55 and 60 miles per hour. His attorney stated that he had operated for 6 years all over New England and this was his first court appearance. At the time traffic being light. He was found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of $25 and costs.

William Jordon Ryan of Westerly on Aug. 30th was charged by Trooper Healy with reckless driving on the Nooseneck Hill road, when he apparently had fallen asleep at the wheel and about a quarter of a mile from the Triangle station on the Nooseneck Hill road had run off the highway and knocked down 33 feet of R. I. state highway guard rail fencing. The accused said he had worked hard and "guess I fell asleep." He was found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of $50 and costs.

Isaac S. Eskenasi of Brooklyn, N. Y., was charged with the driving of an automobile on a Westerly highway without first obtaining a proper license. Prosecutor Ferguson told the court that the defendant had driven an automobile near the Ocean House at Watch Hill with a New York state registration. The prosecutor added that the lack of witnesses prevented the accused from facing a more serious charge. He was found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of $15 and costs.

A private conference and hearing meeting was held jointly on Thursday night in the council chamber of the Westerly town hall when there gathered members of the Westerly town council, the Westerly school committee and building committee of the new Westerly junior high school and the Westerly highway commission. The meeting was called by the members of the Westerly town council as agreed in their regular September monthly session to devise ways and means to obtain funds for the completion of highway construction work around the junior high school building which is over two months in advance of building schedule.

The result of the conference was the setting of Wednesday, Sept. 17, as the date for a special financial town meeting, when the voters of Westerly will act upon a proposition to appropriate $23,000 or so much thereof as may be necessary to grade and construct Park avenue and Highland avenue to Granite street and roads about the property of the new Junior high school building.

On Friday Rev. Lewis A. Walker, pastor of Calvary Baptist church, announced that due to repairs being made in the vestry of the church the Sunday school will not open Sunday. The regular church services will be resumed Sunday after being omitted during July and August. The Sunday school will begin later in September.

YOUNG MAN

By
T. T. FLYNN

UNCLE ELI "ALLOWS" HE'S TOO YOUNG TO RETIRE AND HEROICALLY PROVES HIS POINT, EVEN TO THE SATISFACTION OF A YOUNG UPSTART SUPERINTENDENT

UNCLE ELIPHANT TARBOX was a locomotive engineer. A little man with white hair, eager blue eyes and a leathery, wrinkled face that was forever in motion as he champed steadily on a wad of fine-cut with his $12 set of false teeth.

Those rubber-set molars were the pride of Uncle Eli's life. The surest way to win his favor was to compliment him on the excellent preservation of his teeth. Uncle Eli would blink his eager blue eyes rapidly, and the wrinkles in his tanned old face would deepen and spread into a wide smile of glee.

"I tell you," he would chortle, "th' ain't many fellers my age can show teeth like that. Hey? Ain't that a fact now?" And Uncle Eli would cock his head on one side and look up at the flatterer with anticipation.

And when the affirmative answer came, as it always did, Uncle Eli would lift a gnarled hand, extract his upper plate and display it for a moment. Then, with it back in place once more, he would slap the side of his leg.

"That's one on you, Bub!" he would chortle. "Thought they were real, didn't you? Hey? Thought they were real!" And Uncle Eli's skinny little frame would shake with enjoyment.

And then, with a fresh wad of fine-cut in his mouth, Uncle Eli would nod sagely. "Twelve dollars," he would state with pride. "Twelve dollars is all them teeth cost me, Bub. Had 'em nigh on to twenty-five years and they cut as good as ever. What d'ye think of that, Bub? Hey?"

Well, what was there to think? Facts were facts. And, after being properly overcome, one was a firm and fast friend of Uncle Eli's. One was, anyway, unless one made the mistake of harping too harshly on the matter of Uncle Eli's age. Then the lightning was certain to strike.

Uncle Eli refused to grow old. Each day he was on hand promptly to take out his run; the one daily train to Pine Grove and return. The Pine Grove line was a left over fragment of a lumbering era that had come and gone. In years past train after train of lumber had rumbled down to the main line, on to the devouring maw of the world's markets. But the lumber had all been cut, and the trains were no more. Uncle Eli and the asthmatic old 1237 were more than enough to serve the scanty demands of the back country.

So things were when Gideon P. Fish came to occupy the superintendent's chair and to poke his long, thin nose and pale, staring eyes into every corner of the division and inaugurate such reforms as fitted into Gideon P. Fish's ideas of efficiency and modern railroading.

FISH first saw Uncle Eli pottering around the main pin of the old 1237 with a short steel bar. Uncle Eli had the bar over the eccentric rod and under the end of the great, heavy main rod, and was prying up on the main rod to see how much wear there was in the main brass.

The main rod was a thing of great weight. Uncle Eli's bar was not very long nor his skinny frame very heavy. He made rather a pathetic figure as he tugged and puffed and panted with the effort. The results did not suit him. "Dang ye, we'll see about it!" he grunted, and threw his whole weight on the end of the short bar. The treacherous thing rolled, slipped and Uncle Eli went staggering along the platform. Staggering, perhaps, a little harder and farther than a younger man would have done.

Gideon P. Fish's pale eyes lighted with purpose. He walked over to where Uncle Eli was renewing his attack upon the stubborn rod.

"Th' tarnation thing!" said Uncle Eli as Gideon's tall, thin, black-clad figure appeared by him. "Like to broke my back, it did!"

"Aren't you a little old for this sort of work, my man?" Gideon queried.

"Hey?" Uncle Eli wheeled around quickly and glared up into the thin face and pale eyes of the superintendent.

"How old are you?" Gideon P. Fish demanded without emotion.

"What the tarnation business is it of yours?" Uncle Eli snorted wrathfully. "You got a lot of nerve asking me sech questions, Bub! I don't know you!"

Gideon P. Fish was a man who never grew angry. It was not efficient. But his eyes narrowed as he stated: "I am Mr. Fish, the new superintendent. Asking questions is part of my business, my good man."

Uncle Eli had seen "supers" come and "supers" go. He had long ceased to be impressed by them. Particularly when he did not like them. Now he spat copiously and Gideon P. Fish moved hastily to avoid getting shreds of fine-cut on his shoes.

"I ain't your good man!" Uncle Eli snapped. "I don't keer a tinker's tarnation whether you be the president of the dad-blamed road! My age is my own business, long as I got eyes to see, and legs to walk on, and hands to jerk the throttle an' brake valve! I'm busy! Ef you got to know about ages and sech, look on the records! That's what they're fer!" And Uncle Eli turned his back and jabbed the steel bar under the end of the main rod.

Gideon P. Fish's lower jaw came as near to sagging as it had in many a year. Such wanton disregard of his dignity had never happened before.

"My good man, do you realize how you are talking?" he demanded frigidly.

Uncle Eli turned again, his jaws champing furiously.

"Dang right I do, Bub!" he spluttered. "I was railroadin' on this here road before you was born, an' they ain't any call for you to come snoopin' 'round making cracks about my age! I got a good record! Look it up! Go ask the boss over you, ef you're curious!" And Uncle Eli spat recklessly again.

Gideon P. Fish came as near to jumping as his dignity would permit and then beat a rather flustered retreat.

That was Round 1, from which Uncle Eli emerged victor, either because of his reckless tongue or his fine-cut.

The "super" did look up Uncle Eli's age—and was stumped again. The year and day that he was hired was there, but there was no age. There never had been. Uncle Eli knew it when he issued the invitation to look at the records.

The second defeat put the matter firmly in Gideon P. Fish's mind, where it began to bother him. Uncle Eli should be retired for the good of efficiency and the peace of Gideon's mind.

Uncle Eli was summoned to the super's office of welcome—and a clerk who was ostensibly waiting to take some dictation.

Uncle Eli sat down awkwardly in the chair that Gideon indicated and eyed the super distrustfully.

Gideon locked his bony fingers together, leaned back and smiled sourly.

"I have been thinking over your case, Mr.—uh—Tarbox," he said smoothly. "You have been a loyal servant of the road for—uh—quite a few years, and there is now no good reason why you should not be enjoying a well-earned rest. It will please me mightily to see that you are—uh—retired with full honors and —um—all the gratitude that the company can bestow upon a faithful servant."

Uncle Eli located the spittoon that Gideon had thoughtfully placed by his chair and used it.

"I ain't a case!" he said forcefully. "An' there's a dang good reason why I shouldn't be retired with honors and all the jelly-gaggin' the company can hand out! I ain't goin' to retire! When I don't report for work is time to talk about pensions an' sech foolishness!"

"But you are an old man," Gideon said, holding on to his smooth manner with an effort. "Suppose, now, that you die quite suddenly while out on your run? It would not do at all. Leave the company liable for heavy damage suits if there should be an accident and—uh—and so on."

Uncle Eli forgot to be angry in the face of such reasoning. He exploded in hearty mirth. "Me die out on the road!" he chortled after a moment. "I never heerd sech tommyrot! Say, Mr Fish, ef I ever get set on the cab seat of the old 1237, I'll squat right there till we get back here in the station! I'll do my dying away from the throttle! I declare!"

"I don't like your attitude," Gideon said harshly. "You are an old man, but this is the superintendent's office!"

"You asked me to come here," Uncle Eli retorted. "Ef that's all you want I'll be goin'."

"I've a mind to discharge you," Gideon stated coldly. "You are a very old man, but we must have discipline."

"Fire me?" Uncle Eli got to his feet and glared. "They ain't a man on the road big enough to fire me! I been drawin' a pay check since they was nothin' but two rails across the fields. I never heerd sech foolishness. I declare!"

"I've stood all that I care to, Tarbox. You've said too much for even my—uh — generous tolerance. You are discharged."

"Danged if I am!" choked Uncle Eli. "No young upstart I never heerd of before is goin' to fire me! No, sir! I'm goin' to keep on workin' same as I have for sixty years!"

GIDEON P. FISH almost choked likewise. He repeated his words, adding that he would see that Uncle Eli's pension went through just the same.

Uncle Eli flatly, positively refused to be fired. He terminated the interview by departing in a haze of indignant and stubborn wrath, his last audible words being, "Danged young upstart!"

Gideon looked at the clerk. The clerk stared hard at his notebook and bit the end of his pencil desperately.

After a moment Gideon wiped his forehead. "Make a report of the matter," he ordered the clerk weakly. "Um—stressing insubordination and—uh—impertinence and—uh—old age and anything else you can think of that covers the situation. Have his name taken off the payroll and another man assigned to his run."

"Yes, sir," said the clerk gravely. "Shall I see about his pension?"

"I suppose so," Gideon agreed, sourly.

That ended Round 2, in which Gideon P. Fish was the victor without doubt. Uncle Eli's name was taken off the payroll and another man took his run out, although it required the services of the master mechanic and road foreman of engines to keep Uncle Eli off the 1237 the first day.

A young man by the name of Smith, with a rather washed-out appearance and not too much personality, got Uncle Eli's throttle. He was rather taken aback the second day when, shortly before leaving time, Uncle Eli showed up by the engine. Smith rather feared further hostilities. But he was relieved a moment later when Uncle Eli trudged on back and entered the one coach at the rear of the two freight cars they hauled every day.

That was the first of many days Uncle Eli turned up as though he was going to work and made the trip to Pine Grove and back in the coach. He talked to the conductor, the brakeman, the flagman and the passengers; laughed, joked, made merry. But there were stretches of time when he just stared out of the window. He looked his age in those moments.

The summer was hot. No rain to speak of fell, crops withered and shriveled in the fields. The thick tangle of second-growth pine in the lumbered-off country toward Pine Grove became one vast tinderbox.

Not even the hottest days kept Uncle Eli at home. Lunchbox in hand, he turned up as unfailingly as the sun and made the trip to Pine Grove and back. He was on the train the day in the fall when the vice president's private car was pushed up ahead of them by another engine and shunted fifteen miles to the end of the Little Creek branch, to be left there four days.

THE Little Creek branch was a stretch of track that led off at an angle some eight miles from the end of the line. It had been built for lumber only. Since the big sawmill at the end had closed down six years before it had not been used at all.

The vice president's private car held a hunting party of six, including Gideon P. Fish. In fact, Gideon was responsible for the car going back there. It was his idea of efficiency. They would be in the heart of a nice hunting region, with all the luxuries of home.

The second day after the car went in the conductor spoke of the hunting party as the train passed the switch to the Little Creek branch. "Wonder if they got anything yet," he said.

Uncle Eli spat and observed: "Hope Fish catches a skunk."

In the laughter that followed the conductor agreed: "Guess I do, too."

The next day, the third day of the hunting trip, the wind blew strong and clouds began to pile up in the sky. As they passed the Little Creek switch, the conductor said: "Looks like those fellows will get some rain to spoil their hunting."

"Do 'em good," said Uncle Eli. "'Tain't decent to go huntin' in a private car no way. I sh'd think they'd be ashamed."

There was a two hours' layover at the end of the line. Smith turned the train around on the good-sized "Y" that was a leftover from former days and they all gathered in the small station and played pitch as usual. All but Uncle Eli. He went out and sat on the engineer's seat of the 1237. Every day he did this, and always seemed a little younger afterward.

A few minutes before starting time the card game broke up. Uncle Eli, hearing the voices outside the station, climbed down off the engine and joined them.

Smith, the engineer, pulled out his watch.

"Just about leaving time," he stated, and pocketed the watch and surveyed the sky. "Guess we'll get rain on the way," he observed. "Look at that sky ahead."

They all glanced in the direction of home. The sky was darker, overcast. The clouds seemed to have lowered considerably in one section.

Uncle Eli spoke sharply: "Them ain't clouds! That's smoke, boys! Look at the diff'rence where it meets the clouds!"

There was a difference when they loosed closer. The lowest clouds were of smoke, rolling and billowing before the heavy wind. Pine Grove was higher than the land where the smoke was, and they could see fairly well.

"Wasn't any smoke there when we came up," Smith said positively. "Not a sign."

"There is now," Uncle Eli retorted. "Look at it! You know what happened? Some sparks got past the screen on the stack." He looked up at the stack of 1237 as he spoke, and the next moment cried triumphantly: "I reckon so! The screen ain't even on!"

Smith stared and frowned. "I forgot the thing," he confessed. "Now ain't this a mess? I'll get the deuce."

"By golly!" said Uncle Eli. There's others'll get it first! Look where that fire is, an' where it's goin'. It's cuttin' across the Little Creek branch an' spreadin' fan-shape toward them hunters. It'll trap 'em sure as anything."

The conductor spoke: "It's solid second growth for miles back beyond them. Little Creek is about dried up. They won't have a place to go to."

"Burn 'em sure as anything," Uncle Eli agreed excitedly. "Let's run down that way and see what's what."

A MILE from Little Creek they found where the first sparks had fallen. Smith stopped the train. They gathered by the side of the engine, staring at the blackened, smoking area before them. Smith exclaimed with a strained face: "This is terrible! Suppose they burn to death!"

Uncle Eli spat. "Stop s'posin'," he advised. "Run to th' switch, uncouple an' go up th' Little Creek line. 'Tain't no use waitin' fur help to come. They can't do no more'n we can."

They went on to the switch, uncoupled the engine, and the train crew got into the cab and started up the Little Creek branch. The fire had not spread to the switch, but as they proceeded the rusty, weed-choked rails angled to the left and entered the zone of fire.

The air became thick and strong with acrid smoke. Smoldering stumps and trunks of trees crackled and snapped. The hot landscape sent waves of heat beating into the cab. They began to cough, to choke, to wipe streaming eyes. And still the main body of the fire was ahead of them.

Smith suddenly stopped, pulled back on the reverse bar and started back. "It's suicide to go any farther!" he told them loudly.

No man disputed his words.

The smoke thinned and they came into breathable air again. Uncle Eli wiped his eyes on a large blue bandana, blew his nose and pushed over to Smith's side. "Stop her, Bub," he ordered.

Smith did so.

"What we goin' to do now?" Uncle Eli asked them briskly.

Each man looked at his neighbor. Smith answered a trifle sullenly: "Nothing we can do. You saw what it was like back there. Ties burning out from between the rails and the fire getting worse every foot."

"Ain't figgerin' to go off an' leave 'em are you?"

"What can we do?" Smith demanded.

"I bet," said Uncle Eli calmly, "that if a body opened the throttle wide and kept goin' he'd get through the fire.

"The ties are all buried in the ground and won't burn out fur quite some time. They ain't no heavy trees to fall over the track, as I remember. Engine's made out o' metal. Bound to get through."

"Bound to get killed!" Smith insisted. "You saw how it was back there! That was only the leftovers! You'd get burned right out of the cab!"

"Worth a try," insisted Uncle Eli stubbornly. "They's six men goin' to burn up if they ain't hauled out. They'll never outrun the fire in this wind."

"You're crazy!" Smith said angrily. "I've got a wife and family to look out for! I'll try no fool stunt like that!"

"So have I!" said the fireman quickly.

The others didn't know anything about handling an engine.

Uncle Eli took a big chew of fine-cut. "Fill 'er up, Bub," he said to the fireman.

"What's the idea?"

"I ain't got no family to worry about."

"You're crazy!" the fireman agreed with Smith. "You'll die sure as you're born, Uncle Eli!"

"Fill 'er up, Bub! Don't tell me what to do! I ain't old enough fur that yet!"

Without quite knowing why he did it, the fireman grabbed the shovel and opened the fire door. As the others moved back out of the way Smith cried stubbornly: "Darned if I'll let you have the engine! You'll just get killed and I'll be blamed!"

Uncle Eli moved over casually, picked up the hot-water hose and aimed it out the window. He turned the valve and a high-pressure stream of boiling water shot out into space. Uncle Eli looked across at Smith. "Ef you ain't off the engine by the time he gets the fire filled up, I'll sprinkle you! Unload, boys, all of you! I'm goin' to start throwin' bollin' water in a minute or so!"

That ended all arguments. Uncle Eli was alone in the cab within sixty seconds. He shut the water off, stopped across the cab, let the air off and opened the throttle. The 1237 surged ahead. Uncle Eli leaned out the window and waved his hand at the little group standing alongside the track. A few moments later he shut off most of the steam, made his way over the coal to the back of the tank and, while the engine ran slowly ahead, dipped his whole body down in the cold water of the tank. It made him gasp. He climbed out, breathing hard, clothes plastered tight against his skinny form. Streaming water at every step, he made his way back to the engineer's seat and pulled out on the throttle hard.

Faster the 1237 went, and faster. Her rods began to pound. She began to sway from side to side.

Uncle Eli pulled out on the throttle again.

Uncle Eli closed all the cab windows, the ventilator on top and dropped the cab curtain, then perched himself on the wet seat, hauled out on the throttle still more and cut the valves back a little. The 1237's exhaust shortened. She charged into the thickening smoke, rocking perilously over the neglected old roadbed.

Uncle Eli crouched on the cab seat, hand on throttle, eyes staring through the narrow window in front of him. His face was transfigured with a look of fierce joy. After a moment he reached up and pulled down hard on the whistle cord. With a defiant wail the 1237 fled toward the inferno ahead.

The smoke increased. The air filled with streaming sparks and flaming brands riding the sweeping wind. They began to strike against the cab windows. Smoke crept in until Uncle Eli was sitting in a haze. He coughed, wiped his eyes and then tied his bandana across his nose.

The heat increased. Sparks seemed to leap at the engine from every side. And then, abruptly, they plunged into the main fire. The whole world seemed turned into a leaping, writhing wall of roaring, snapping flame. Great streamers of fire licked out from the undergrowth by the tracks and curled hungrily about the steel body of the 1237. Sparks rained, brands fell over her.

UNCLE ELI forgot to chew in the face of that terrible sweep of hungry death. The very air of the cab seemed on fire. Breathing was almost impossible.

"Sufferin' tarnation!" he groaned, and pulled the throttle out to the limit and crouched over, gasping for breath. Long seconds dragged. And then, when it seemed that his senses were about to leave, they passed the last of the fire and rushed into the dark, dull-colored coolness of the unburned forest.

Uncle Eli threw the cab window back and let the sweet fresh air roll in upon his damp body and then reached up and pulled down long and hard on the whistle cord.

The wailing blast of the 1237's whistle stayed the panicky flight of six high officials of the railroad and their servants. Hardly daring to hope, they gathered at the end of the private car and waited while the blasts came nearer and nearer.

They were there when the 1237, covered with ashes and marks of the flames, slid to a stop. A skinny little figure in wet clothes dropped from the cab and stumbled toward them.

Gideon P. Fish stared dumfounded.

"Where did you come from?" he demanded wonderingly, as soon as they were close enough to talk.

"I come from the main line, and I come through h—l!" Uncle Eli threw at him and spat. Gideon moved involuntarily.

"I'll drag your car out," Uncle Eli told the officials of the road. "Watch them couplers and then git aboard soon as we're coupled up. Ain't no time to lose. You, Bub!"—he pointed a gnarled finger at Gideon P. Fish —"you git in the cab with me and throw coal! I ain't got time to bother with it!"

Gideon looked helplessly at his brother officials and when Uncle Eli snapped, "Hurry up!" and turned back, he followed. At that moment all Gideon wanted was a promise of safety. Nothing else mattered.

They coupled up to the private car and backed off at once. After Gideon finished a clumsy coaling of the fire, Uncle Eli yelled above the noise of the engine: "Git back there and dip yourself in the tank, Bub."

"What for?" Gideon asked.

"Git and don't ask so many questions!" Uncle Eli advised. "See that cab curtain? Want t'be burned full of holes like it?" He pointed to the lower cab curtain, dotted with a half dozen holes that had ignited and smoldered before Uncle Eli could put them out with the hose.

GIDEON took one look and then scrambled back and dipped his long, lean form in the water. He returned dripping and shivering, threw more coal on the fire and then sat on the fireman's seat and looked furtively across at the little figure leaning out the other window.

Uncle Eli ignored him. He knew what they were going into. It would be worse this time, for they were backing up. The canvas would be little protection.

The smoke thickened. They came to the first flying sparks. Gideon quailed at sight of the wall of fire into which they were rushing.

"Will we make it?" he shouted to Uncle Eli.

"Darned ef I knew!" Uncle Eli replied, and slammed his window shut and crouched.

A moment later fear came to Gideon P. Fish as it had come never before. Flame! Heat! Smoke! Roaring fire! The canvas curtain, bellying far in, blazed. Uncle Eli leaped across the swaying, smoke-filled cab, caught the hose and turned the hot water on the curtain. Scalding drops sprayed over them both. A hail of sparks, brands, tongues of flame, beat around the cab. A fragment of glowing charcoal swooped through a hole in the curtain and burned the back of Gideon's hand. He cried out with the surprise and pain of it and then hid his face in his hands and choked and gasped for air.

Uncle Eli kept the hose on the curtain, although his hand was burned also.

Suddenly the tank gave a wild lurch and seemed to leap in the air. Uncle Eli staggered and fell against Gideon.

"We're off the track!" Gideon screamed. "We're lost!"

Before either could say anything more the tank gave another lurch and found the rails again. The wild race went on, with Uncle Eli grimly spraying the curtain.

Suddenly, miraculously, the flames were less and less. The smoke thinned. They were through the worst of the fire.

Not long after, Uncle Eli shoved the throttle in and applied the brake. Gideon saw to his astonishment that they were in a region that fire had not touched, only a short distance from the main-line switch.

AS THEY came to a stop, Gideon staggered weakly off the seat and gasped: "I never thought we'd make it. How—how are you?"

Uncle Eli wiped a red, smoke-dirtied face with his bandana and then drew out his pouch of fine-cut.

"Me?" he answered coolly. "I'm all right, Bub. I'm too young an' tough a feller to be bothered by any such fire as that."

Gideon thought of what he had come through once and Uncle Eli twice and of what would have happened if Uncle Eli had not come.

"I believe you," he said sincerely. "I—uh—have made a great mistake. I can see that you are younger than I thought. Much too young to quit work. Why—uh—um—" Gideon looked desperately for something to compliment and his eyes fell on the teeth

STOCK PRICES ADVANCED YESTERDAY WITH ONLY ONE MINOR INTERRUPTION

NEW YORK, Sept. 5—(P)—The stock market outdid itself today by advancing with only one minor interruption. Net gains of 1 to 3 points eliminated most of the week's earlier losses and there was a small increase in the volume of trading.

Wheat, cotton and bonds also improved. Corn eased and crude rubber futures touched a new low for the fourth consecutive day, but Wall street was more encouraged than discouraged by the general action of the speculative markets.

The rally in stocks was largely based on technical considerations.

The market made most of its rise by noon. Earlier buying covered the merchandising industrial, amusement and specialty shares, neglecting the utilities, oils, coppers and rails. At the appearance of profit-taking around the start of the final hour, however, operators for the advance brought forward the utility and food stocks as new leaders and bullish interest in the entire list was revived, although not all of the closing prices were the day's best.

The weekly trade reviews found conditions fairly satisfactory and noted a maintenance of the better trends that marked the last part of August. Dun's referred to "more promising aspects, more tangible reasons for encouragement and a further strengthening of sentiment." Bradstreet's said there had been more confident buying of staple cotton goods, a better demand for coal and further evidence of relief from the dullness of July and August.

Car loading reports for the final week of last month, made public by two or three important carriers, revealed gains, and there was cheer in the statement of Woolworth's president that the week ending August 9, had marked the turning point in that chain's business. Every week since, he said, had shown considerable gain.

The rally in wheat ranged from 1 3-4 to 2 1-8 cents and was based on covering inspired by reports of a better export demand. Corn's losses were only nominal; the September future closed unchanged. Cotton gained 80 to $1.15 a bale on this market.

So amiably was the stock market disposed that even Curtiss-Wright's reports of a first half deficit exceeding $5,000,000, failed to affect the shares. Omission of Bullard's dividend proved to be only temporarily depressing and the stock closed fractionally higher.

Rubber shares were among the day's speculative favorites. The Kelly Tire and U. S. Rubber stocks, as well as Goodyear and Goodrich, all rallied, some to the extent of several points. New York city tractions also advanced.

U. S. Steel came within a point of its post-June high, reacted to 168 and closed at 170 5-8 for a net gain of 3 1-8. American Can, Loew's, American Water Works, Baldwin Locomotive, Coca Cola, National Biscuit and Westinghouse Electric, also gained about 3 points. Brisk covering in Vanadium brought a rally of nearly 5 points, while Auburn Auto shot up 9 3-4, Case, 7 3-4, Diamond Match, 8, and Eastman Kodak, 5 1-4. American Telephone, Loose Wiles Beatrice Creamery, Johns Manville, Radio, General Electric, and General Motors, were up one to two at the close. Canadian Pacific and Gillette were heavy. Checker Cab and Parmlee Transportation, responded to merger rumors, the former advancing 5 and the latter 2.

Foreign exchanges were easy. European rates sagged again, led by the French franc which dropped 5-32. Latin-Americans also turned downward.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5—(P)—Call money steady, 2 1-2 per cent all day. Time loans steady, 30 days, 2 at 2 1-4; 60 days, 2 1-4 at 2 1-2; 90 days, 2 1-2 at 2 3-4; 4 months, 2 3-4 at 3; 5-6 months, 3 per cent. Prime commercial paper, 3 at 3 1-4. Bankers' acceptances unchanged.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5—(P)—Commercial failures for the week, with five business days because of the Labor day holiday, totaled 336, compared with 300 for the like week last year, R. G. Dun and company reports. Failures with liabilities of more than $5,000 rose to 208, compared with 163 in the corresponding period of 1929.

Atwater Kent Manufacturing company announced today that hundreds of new employes are being added daily, and the demand for new receivers indicates a present buying power exceeding that of a year ago. Production now approximates 4,000 sets a day and the company's schedule calls for still further increases.

During August, 822 freight cars were ordered from domestic makers, against 1,306 in July and 2562 in August last year, Railway Age reports. Thirty-four locomotives were ordered last month against two in July and 31 in August last year. Passenger car orders last month were 13, against 32 in July and 131 in August of 1929.

Commercial and military airplanes produced in July totaled 244 and sales and deliveries were 232, according to the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce. The industry produced 1,721 airplanes and delivered 1322 during the first seven months this year, indicating inventories on hand early in the year as a result of over-production last year, are being depleted.

Reports from 15 eastern states show an August increase in kilowatt hour output of 3.1 per cent over August last year, for subsidiaries of National Electric Power company, a part of the Middle West Utilities system.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 5—(P)—Curb market shares turned rather emphatically upward today, for the first time this week, but speculative activity was largely restricted to the utility shares, and the turnover of 363,900 shares was the smallest of the week.

Electric Bond and Share gave the best account of itself in several days, rising more than 2 points net, ex-dividend. American Gas and Electric rose more than 4 in a moderate turnover. Natural gas stocks in the main moved narrowly. United Gas was firm, and Missouri Kansas Pipe Line moved up fractionally, reflecting more gossip in brokerage circles about a possible alignment with Columbia Gas and Electric.

American Cyanamid B, was fairly active, rising a point, and Ford, Ltd., sold up fractionally in a large turnover. Fox Theatres and Loew's warrants, were again firm, along with amusement shares on the stock exchange. National Rubber Machinery, Mead Johnson, and Technicolor were among shares selling up more than a point. Carrier Engineering gained 4 in a small turnover. U. S. Radiator, however, dropped about 2 to a new low. Oils were largely dull, although Cities Service, which also has large natural gas and electric power interests, gained more fractionally in active trading. Texon Oil gained a point. Cosden and Gulf lost about a point.

Investment company issues were steady to firm. Goldman Sachs gained 1-2 point, despite reduction in the dividend of Manufacturers' Trust, in which it is extensively interested. United Founders also advanced a small fraction. Graymur sold up more than a point.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 5—(AP)—The almost steady flow of investment funds today into the listed bond market, swelled again to volume reached before Labor day and lifted the average price of 30 leading issues to the highest level since 1927.

The weekly federal reserve condition statements, showing that the September 1 settlements had been handled smoothly with very slight release of credit by the reserve system, was regarded as a sign that low credit rates might be expected throughout the autumn months, despite the seasonal demands.

New offerings, as usual on Friday, all but dried up, but bond dealers are planning substantial issues later in the month. An offering of $32,735,000 of Chicago tax anticipation warrants is expected next week, by Halsey, Stuart and company this week's offerings have totaled $57,159,000, only $748,000 less than last week.

Some irregularity persisted, as some of the lower yield issues were sold, but on the trend continued upward. In the foreign dollar bonds, the Latin-American issues, in the main, rallied further. A few of the European issues eased a little. A feature of the public utilities was a strong demand for the New York tractions, reflecting rumors that the Brooklyn Manhattan Transit management had acquired control of the Interborough, which may speed unification. Several of the second grade rails joined the upturn in the prime carrier obligations. Industrials were largely quiet.

Boston and Maine 5s D, Brooklyn Manhattan Transit sinking fund 6s, Chicago Great Western 4s, Erie 5s of 1976, Interborough Stamped 5s, Missouri Pacific adjustment 4s, and Western Maryland 4s, all advanced fractionally in large scale buying. St. Paul 5s, and Baltimore and Ohio 5s D, each gained about a point. In the Pennsylvania group, the Panhandle issues rose a point or more to new highs in a few sales. The 4 1-2s of the Fonda, Johnstown and Gloversville railroad, a New York state traction, jumped 4 points. Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron 6s, were active, rising more than a point. International Telephone convertible 4 1-2s, however, lost a point. Warner Brothers convertible debentures held steady.

Among the industrials, International Match 5s, rose a point in a fair turnover. Armour Real Estate 4 1-2s and Cuyamel Fruit 6s, were firm in fairly active trading. A wide mover was Paramlee 6s, which advanced 7 points to 65, reflecting merger prospects, Marion Steam Shovel 6s, were weak, dropping 3 points. Pocahontas Consolidated Coal 5s and Porto Rican American Tobacco 6s, sagged more than a point to new lows in a few sales.

U. S. governments moved rather narrowly, but the more active issues were inclined to ease. The Treasury 4s and 4 1-4s, were under pressure.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 5—(AP)—Pessimism vanished from the Chicago wheat pit today as future deliveries wheeled into line behind an excellent demand for cash wheat and began to encounter assault against the onrush of lower prices. With European countries taking 1,500,000 bushels of cash wheat for export and domestic interests buying 127,000 bushels more, most of it destined for mills, traders on the board of trade took heart and started buying. The result of this activity was a sharp advance in prices, with closing quotations generally two cents or more a bushel above yesterday's finish. Unexpected strength in Liverpool, largely because of active covering by professional sellers and also because of dry weather complaints from Argentina helped to return confidence to traders. Corn was less fortunate and had a hard time staying above yesterday's close.

Wheat closed firm at almost the topmost figures reached, 1 7-8 at 2c a bushel net higher than the previous close. Corn finished unchanged to 7-8c lower, oats 1-8 at 3-8c up, rye 1 3-8 at 2 1-4c higher, and provisions showing a 15 at 35c advance.

Provisions showed sustained buoyancy, with offerings light.

POETRY

Our Vermont Dooryard Gates

The gates between our home and barn,
  The big gate and the little,
The last right off the waggonshed
  Where grandpa used to whittle—
Deserve more praise than my old muse
  This time of year can muster,
For 'round 'em half thousand thoughts
  In goodly garlands cluster.

The big gate seldom open swung
  Except in apple-picking
Or garden-plowing—just enough
  To keep the latch from sticking;
And through it also went the wool
  To Woodstock, when we sold it,
And pa brought back a roll that stumped
  My little fist to hold it

Two wooden gates—the post between Absorbed the double latchet;
I saw that gate-post cut and hauled
  And chamfered with our hatchet,
And gramp, who dug the hole, threw out
  An old red English penny
Which sister claimed because she said
  She hadn't one or any.

My! how we loved that little gate,
  We bread-and-marmaladers,
We'd swing upon it as we et
  And watch the tramps and traders;
We raced and chased through it like mad,
  Or slammed it hard to hender
The highspy "it" from tagging us,
  That boy of neuter gender.

Through it the milk-pails swinging went
  To get their foamy treasure;
Through it we rushed to ketch the nags
  With rope and two-quart measure;
Our company leaned upon its bars,
  One time the roan colt kicked it,
And there was notches where the man
  Who bought our calfskins knicked it.

Beneath it pussycat would crawl
  With dangling mouse for dinner;
Its latch wore smoother every year
  By hands 'twas growing thinner;
Today—but present times and past
  Are always in collision,
The farm is sold, the gates are gone,
  These thoughts a rear-end vision.
  —Daniel L. Cady, in Rutland Herald.

Twilight Time

Twilight falls and daylight dies;
Over all, the quiet skies;
Golden glow in rosy west
Where the sun has sunk to rest;
Peaceful hush on hill and vale
As the daylight noises fail.

In the dying, golden glow
Visions come of long ago;
Dreams of far-off, childhood days
Dimmed by Time's receding haze;
Dreams of sweetheart days, and you,
You, my lover, leal and true.

Quiet skies and twilight star
Send their healing balm afar;
Sun that slowly sinks to rest
Brings the message, sleep is best;
Even dreams will fade away
With the dying of the day.
  —Margaret H. Tomkins, in the Detroit News.

Hootmon—Yes, yes!

McTavish—Guid! Help me open it up—there's a nice cool breeze blowing and the confounded window sticks.—The Pathfinder.

An American once showed interest in the characters written upon his laundry ticket. The laundry man did not seem disposed to enlighten him as to their meaning. "My name is in Chinese, I suppose," said the American. "Not is name," answered John. "Not name? Maybe my address?" asked the customer.

"No, not in house place," was the answer.

"Then if I give you double the amount of my bill, will you tell me what they mean?" the American insisted.

"Can do! Mean funny looking man, fat face, big feet! Two times pay bill please."—The Sentinel.

NEW LONDON POLICE SPEED SERUM TO BACKUS HOSP. PATIENT, NORWICH

(Special to The Bulletin)

The New London police were called into action in an emergency case by the Norwich police this evening. A patient at W. W. Backus hospital, Norwich, is in a critical condition and in an effort to save the life of the patient a quantity of serum was ordered. The serum was put aboard the Gilt Edge express due to arrive here at 9:01 o'clock and upon the train's arrival, five minutes behind time, Motorcycle Officer Martin left for Norwich with his valuable package and with instructions to make all possible speed in reaching the hospital. Martin left the union station with the serum fastened to his body at 9:08 o'clock.

In Brother's Custody

Irving Congdon, 324 Bank street, who was arrested last night for his own safety, was delivered into the custody of his brother today and was taken to the country in hopes that his mental condition would improve in changed surroundings. Congdon was arrested by Patrolman Henry Sylvia when he requested the officer to shut him up, as he feared bodily harm.

Watch Out for Fugitive

The New London and state police tonight were requested to be on the lookout for John Robinson, 18, who escaped from the Rhode Island state prison this afternoon. Robinson is described as being about five feet, seven inches in height and weighs about 196 pounds. He wore khaki trousers, a light shirt and blue coat. Robinson was serving a sentence of 18 months for the theft of an automobile.

Leon Santacroce, 83 Woodbridge street, reported to the police this afternoon that he had in his possession a bicycle found in front of his residence. Later the cycle was claimed by Charles Brodsky, of 2 Briggs street.

Mrs. H. Cooper, 159 Connecticut avenue, reported to the police last midnight that a man was prowling in the yard in the rear of her residence and that he was there, also, the previous night. Officers were speeded to the house, but the prowler had vanished before they arrived.

Only a Family Jar

The police received a telephone message at 11 o'clock last night that a woman residing on School street was calling for help. Automobile Patrol Officer Augustus Ray and Sergeant Patrick Murphy went to the house and discovered that there was no need for their services, a row between a man and his sister-in-law being the cause of the screams and the request being made for the police. No arrest was made.

SEVEN OF 12 CANDIDATES ADDRESS VOTERS' GATHERING

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 5.—Seven of the 12 candidates who will seek election to the city council at the election to be held next Monday addressed a gathering at Bulkeley school auditorium this evening, William X. Fox, Malcolm M. Scott, Robert B. Chappell, Francis DeGange, David A. Connors, William M. Nordenhold and Mrs. Emily Speirs. The four candidates endorsed by the New London Taxpayers' league, E. Frank Morgan, Edward Prentis, Jr., Edwin Cruise and Ray C. Smith, declined the invitation to address the voters because their platform had already been expressed in articles in the press. The meeting was held under the auspices of the New London League of Women Voters.

A still alarm was received at fire headquarters this afternoon when a tract of grass on Williams street, near Mohegan avenue, became ablaze. Thomas Hose Co. was sent out and the fire was extinguished before damage resulted. Four still alarms were answered by the department yesterday, but in neither instance was damage caused.

Mrs. Hyman Dubson, of Uncasville, and Mrs. Charles Julie and infant son, Fishers Island, patients at Lawrence Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

The condition of Joseph McNamara, of Truman street, who suffered a shock last Sunday, does not improve. Mr. McNamara is at his home, although he was stricken at his cottage at the Golden Spur.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the suspension of the drivers' licenses of Harold Smith, 33 Hamilton street, and John Collear, submarine base. Smith was arrested recently and penalized in the police court for driving without a license. Collear was fined two weeks ago for driving while under the influence of liquor.

Permit for Communist Meeting

City Manager William A. Holt today granted permission for the holding of another communist meeting. This time the meeting will be held at Williams Memorial park. Permission was given Arne Dahlgren, 21 Huntington street, who is a member of the party. The meeting will be held next Monday night. Two other meetings have been held and the attendants did not take exception to the remarks of the speakers. City Manager Holt also gave permission for Rev. Howard Howe, of the Pentecostal church, Boston, to speak at an open-air meeting on the park Sunday. The permit was issued upon application of Mrs. Cornelia Stevens, 112 Crystal avenue.

Milton Gordon, Washington, D. C., was arrested today by Patrolman Edward Riordan, charged with parking his automobile in such a manner as to block traffic on State street. The driver posted a bond of $7 for his appearance in the police court tomorrow.

Patrolman Harry Watterson, suspended by Captain Charles A. Pinney yesterday on charges of violation of the police rules and regulations, when the officer in a telephone message stated that he was in New York and that he was intending to enter a hospital that his tonsils might be removed, went to police headquarters this forenoon, when he was formally notified of his suspension. The specific charges against the officer are failing to report for duty and absenting himself from the city without permission. City Manager William A. Holt has not assigned a date for the hearing.

CONNELLY-FARRAH CASES CONTINUED IN CITY COURT

Joseph Connelly, proprietor of a club room at 203 Main street, and Habab Farrah, reputed proprietor of a drinking resort in the same building, together with Mrs. Mary Dymerski, 7 Shapley street, were presented in the police court today charged with violation of the liquor law. The cases of Connelly and Farrah were continued until tomorrow and each furnished a surety on his respective bond of $1,000. Mrs. Dymerski pleaded guilty to violation of the liquor law and was fined $100 and costs. Edward Plonsky, houseman at Connecticut College for Women; Michael Riley, Arthur Fleming, Cornelius Glynn, Thomas Swain, Timothy Dineen and John Kelly, who were in the club room when the raiders went there, and who were held as witnesses, furnished a surety on their respective bonds of $100 for their appearance in court tomorrow.

The raids were made yesterday afternoon and last night. At the club room about two dozen bottles of beer was seized and, it is claimed, when tested showed alcoholic content of two per cent, while Connelly declares that he purchased the beverage for near-beer and of the same dealer as he has purchased many times. At Farrah's residence was found three quarts of whiskey and two pints of whiskey. About a gallon of diluted alcohol was seized at the home of Mrs. Dymerski.

Frank Sammatara, 121 Shaw street, was charged with failing to stop at a traffic officer's signal and driving without registration. He was fined an aggregate amount of $35 and costs. Sammatara was arrested yesterday afternoon by Traffic Officer Clarence Wells.

STOLE NORWICH CAR— NICHOLS GOES TO JAIL

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 5.—Gilbert U. Nichols, sailor, was in the police court today, charged with theft of an automobile owned by George V. Zurcher, 22 Fourth street, Norwich. He pleaded guilty and was fined $100 and costs. Being unable to pay, Gilbert, who is a member of the crew of U. S. S. Lark, was committed to jail, where he will stay nearly four months unless friends go to his rescue and pay the penalty of the court.

Nichols observed Zurcher's Hudson car parked in the street last Wednesday night and, finding the door unlocked, entered the auto and speeded away. When Zurcher discovered his loss he notified the police and the departments through the state were requested to keep a watch for the car. Nichols was passing through Norwalk about three hours later and the car was observed by an officer, who held it up. The driver said that he was Robert G. Smith, of 664 Bank street, but he did not have either license or registration. He was held a prisoner. Captain Charles A. Pinney and Detective Sergeant Nelson Smith went to Norwalk and returned with Nichols late yesterday afternoon.

PEARSON AND SMITH IN LINE FOR COURT MARTIAL

Louis Pearson and Guy Smith, members of the United States coast guard, who fought Patrol Officer Frankie Cheslock last night when the latter sought to arrest Smith on a charge of breach of the peace, were delivered to the coast guard patrol force early today. Pearson and Smith were taken to the state pier, where they will be given a court martial. When Cheslock, who has gained prominence because of his ring battles, placed Smith under arrest on Main street, Pearson sought to obtain the release of his buddy and used force, with the result that a fight between Cheslock and the bluejackets resulted, the fight continuing for three blocks before the pair was landed at police headquarters. During the progress of the fight, Cheslock was compelled to use his club on Pearson, who was the aggressor. The latter's scalp was laid open in several places and numerous stitches were required to close the wounds. Pearson was a patient at the hospital four hours.

Surprise at Ward Caucus

At the republican city convention held in the municipal building last evening, the delegates to the state convention were instructed to vote for Ernest E. Rogers for the office of governor. At the convention, which was short, P. LeRoy Harwood, chairman of the republican town committee, presided. The delegates named were: State convention—Theodore Bodenwein, P. LeRoy Harwood, Charles B. Whittlesey, John M. Mallon, Jr.; congressional—S. Victor Prince, William L. Apley, Mrs. Charlotte Dorsey, Miss Charlotte M. Holloway; senatorial—Samuel M. Prentis, Ezekiel Spitz, Clifford Trull, Mrs. Frederick S. Weld; county—Morris B. Payne, Thomas E. Troland, Waldo E. Clark, Mrs. Frank B. Bentley; probate—Frederic W. Mercer, Morris Lubchansky, Miss Madeline Freeman, William D. Harris. Prior to the holding of the convention, caucuses were held in the various wards, where selection was made of delegates to the convention. In the fifth ward, Miss Edna L. Tyler was dropped from the ward committee, being succeeded by Mrs. Frank B. Bentley. The dropping of Miss Tyler from the committee, it is reported, was because of her action at the last state convention when she voted for William Blodgett for nomination for United States senator instead of Frederick C. Wolcott, who was elected.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

The late Lon Chaney, who lived and died in much the same way, quietly and with little attention from the public, left the greatest work of his career in "The Unholy Three", his talking film debut, which comes to the Palace theatre where it will be shown from Sunday through Wednesday.

"The Unholy Three" is the story of a side-show ventriloquist, giant and midget joined in a strange crime plot. Chaney, as the ventriloquist, hides from the authorities in the guise of an old woman operating a pet shop and sells worthless parrots that he makes "talk" through his own trickery.

"The Unholy Three" is the talking version of the silent drama in which Chaney starred years ago and he waited until a period of extensive experimenting had proved that he could do as strange things with the microphone as he had done with his make-up box before making the picture.

Having had a great deal of circus experience in his younger days when he traveled with all kinds of shows no one was more capable of portraying the difficult role which he had in this production. Supporting Chaney in "The Unholy Three" are many important stars including Lila Lee, Elliott Nugent and John Miljan.

A double feature bill including "Hot Curves" with Benny Rubin, a baseball comedy, laugh sensation and "Women Everywhere", a romantic musical story of a rum-runner will be shown at the Palace for the last times today. This double-feature has been carefully chosen to give the audience many laughs and many thrills.

Broadway Theatre

If you saw the musical comedy hit on the stage you will need no introduction to the new offering which opens at Warner's Broadway for a four-day engagement today.

Bessie Love heads the cast in this splendid picturization of the Broadway hit, "Good News," and scores comedy triumphs with Gus Shy, of the original stage cast, teamed with her in a hilarious chain of sequences.

The love theme is carried by Stanley Smith and Mary Lawlor, the charming ingenue of the stage production, and Lola Lane supplies motivation to the plot, which centers about a marriage that depends upon a football match.

Cliff (Ukulele Ike) Edwards is a comedy football trainer; Frank McGlynn, a dour professor; Tom Jackson, the coach, and Dorothy McNulty and Billy Taft pair off as Varsity Drag youngsters who make whoopee in a big way with captivating dancing ensembles.

The picture retains all the original flavor and pep of the stage success, while the broader sweep of the camera permits a far greater variety of scenes, all of which have been filmed with an eye for color and taste. The spectacular football stadium sequences outdo anything of this nature heretofore shown on the screen, the spectator having the feeling that he is right on the spot cheering with the rest. "Good News" is one of those infrequent cinema productions of which it may be said, "there is not a dull moment in it."

SIX CONTESTANTS IN ILL. FOR SEAT IN U. S. SENATE

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—(AP)—The race for the United States senatorship from Illinois became a six-entry affair today and the wet-dry fight correspondingly broadened.

The race started out with two candidates: James Hamilton Lewis, former senator and outspoken wet, as the democratic nominee; and Ruth Hanna McCormick, republican and personally dry, who declared she would abide by the voters' decision on a prohibition referendum.

Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill, of Downers Grove, a republican and bitter foe of Mrs. McCormick, next announced as an independent dry with the support of George B. Safford, superintendent of the state Anti-Saloon league, and other prohibitionists.

Three more candidates filed today. Abe Lincoln Wisler, of Chicago, one of the last April republican primary candidates, entered the race as an independent on a new liberal party ticket. Louis Warner, of Chicago, defeated by Lewis in the democratic primary, filed as an independent dry. C. Emmett Smith, of Chicago, entered as an independent opposed to the world court.

ARRESTS IN CONNECTION WITH DOUBLE SLAYING

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 5.—(AP)—Two men were arrested here today for investigation in connection with the beach slayings of Lois Kentle, Los Angeles co-ed, and her fiancee, Francis Canlon.

The first man taken into custody was Harry Harmon, 23, of Valley Center, Kan., an old field worker. Shortly afterward Miguel Garcia, 34, a Mexican, was captured as he fled from his residence, where his wife lay dead from 23 knife wounds. Garcia was accused of this killing, and police said slashes and stabs in Mrs. Garcia's body were similar to those in the bodies of the young couple when they were found in a beach tent at Ensenada, Mexico, August 26.

Authorities have believed the beach murders might be the work of a maniac. Garcia, it was said, fitted descriptions of a "mad Mexican" sought since the deaths.

The married men had the lead by the score of 8 to 3, going into the last half of the seventh inning, but before the onslaught was over the married men, who were all tired out from chasing the ball, woke up and realized that they were defeated. The feature of the game was the heavy hitting of Edward Delaney, the star left fielder of the single men, who got four hits out of five trips to the plate. FUNERAL

Arthur J. Goyette

Funeral services for Arthur J. Goyette were held from his late home on lower Norwich avenue Friday morning at 8:30, followed by a solemn requiem high mass at Sacred Heart church at 9 o'clock. Rev. Donat B. Jette was celebrant of the mass; Rev. Frederick R. DesSurreault was deacon, and Rev. Omer T. Mandler was sub-deacon. There was a very large attendance and many beautiful flowers. Included in the attendance was a delegation from Court Wequannoc, No. 88, Foresters of America, of which the deceased was a member. Miss Alice Frechette, organist at the church, presided at the organ and Omer Tellier sang at the offertory. The bearers were Omer Pepin, Blair Cormier, Leo Flynn, Edward Murphy, John Corcoran and Albert Beauregard. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery where Rev. Fathers DesSurreault and Mandler read the committal prayers. The arrangements were in charge of Undertaker George G. Grant.

Cards being received from Mr. and Mrs. Arthur E. Atkins, of South Second avenue, locate them at Orlando, Fla., where they went by motor to visit their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Atkins, and family.

Deputy Game Warden Watson, assisted by Frank Rockwood, of Lebanon, liberated 125 young pheasants in this vicinity Tuesday, acting under instructions of the state fish and game commission. The birds, which were from six weeks to two months old and had already begun to use their wings, were of the English ring-neck and Mongolian varieties. Formerly the fish and game commission left the distribution of game birds to the sportsmen's clubs in the locality where the birds were to be liberated, but the policy which is now being followed is to have the game placed under the direction of the game wardens and deputy game wardens. To aid in this work, maps have been prepared showing the layout of the country, density of shrubbery, etc. From past experience it has been shown that the English ring-neck pheasant is a valuable game bird, multiplying rapidly and furnishing the gunner with excellent sport. The Mongolians are fewer in numbers and not many have been taken in the past. Many sportsmen are keen to again try the Hungarian partridge which other states are having considerable success with. A few years ago several thousand pairs of this magnificent game bird were liberated within the limits of this state, but very few were ever seen later. Whether they were unable to survive the rigorous winter which followed, or fell prey to foxes, or whether they migrated to other sections of the country will always be one of the great mysteries in this section of the sportsmen's world.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond A. Pingree, of Saylesville, R. I., and Miss Helen C. Aberg, of Washington, D. C., who are guests of Axel L. Aberg, of North Third avenue, motored to Wethersfield Wednesday to visit Mr. and Mrs. Milton Greene, and to Portland, where they were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Robinson.

The members of Council Gagnon No. 208, L'Union St. Jean Baptiste, held their regular monthly business meeting Thursday evening at their rooms on Merchants avenue.

A meeting of the Independent Order of Foresters was held Wednesday evening.

There was a large attendance at the monthly business meeting of the members of the St. Louis society held Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Augustin Belhumeur, of South B street, have gone to their summer home in Vermont.

The Taftville Congregational church is to reopen next Sunday, after having been closed for the month of August while the pastor, Rev. William Penner, with Mrs. Penner and their little daughter Amy, have been visiting relatives in Kansas. Rev. Mr. Penner will not return for next Sunday's service, and his place will be filled by Rev. Charles Chakerian, of Hartford Theological seminary. The service is to be held at 11 o'clock.

The members of Peter Gallan post No. 104, American Legion, and the American Legion auxiliary, are to hold open house on the evening of Sept. 18, at the Red Cross rooms in the Ponemah community building. There is to be an entertaining radio program, broadcast from Philadelphia, Pa., and other points, which is to be of utmost importance to the entire membership of all American Legion posts and auxiliary units. Information received from C. L. Bodenhamer, national commander of the Legion, states that a program is now being made up that will be of an entertaining and patriotic, for the benefit of the 10,500 Legion posts and their auxiliaries. At a meeting held recently at the home of Mrs. Patrick J. Fogarty on South Second avenue, the following committee was chosen to make arrangements for the social evening to be held in connection with the broadcast. The committee includes: Napoleon J. Pepin, chairman; Charles Natzel, Edward J. Kelly, Louis Erlbeck, Peter Fournier, Mrs. Thomas Perkins Sears, Mrs. Patrick J. Fogarty, Mrs. Clara T. Caron, Mrs. Andrew J. Frohmader and Miss Aurelie Fournier. It has been planned to have cards and refreshments prior to the radio program.

COMMUNITY FAREWELL SERVICE FOR REV. G. F. BAILEY

The church is extending a very cordial invitation to all the churches of this community to participate in this service.

NEW LONDON MOTORCYCLIST DIES FROM INJURIES AT ROUND HILL

Clyde Smith, 17, of No. 14 Fowler court, New London, died shortly after 11 o'clock Friday night at the W. W. Backus hospital, as the result of injuries received Thursday morning when his motorcycle ran head-on into an automobile on the Norwich-Jewett City road, near Round Hill, Lisbon.

Smith had a fractured skull, broken left leg, burns and other injuries.

The motorcycle he was riding at a high rate of speed crashed into a Buick sedan driven by Charles Sternberg of 120 Riverview avenue, New London, which was bound to Jewett City. State Trooper Scanlon from the Danielson barracks and Officer Potter of Lisbon, checking up on the accident, learned that Smith was traveling at excessive speed, so great that the light machine crumpled up against the engine of the heavier vehicle. Following the impact, the tank on the motorcycle burst, covering the rider with gasoline. A Jewett City witness said that the lad's clothing burned like a torch. Another eye witness, Jewett City bound, said that he noticed Smith's head was turned to one side just before the crash, evidently to escape the cutting cold wind.

An attempt was made to get the injured youth to the hospital on a truck but the ambulance from Norwich was met on Tunnel hill and the boy was transferred to the hospital vehicle. Mr. Sternberg tried to skin by the approaching motorcycle, but its driver, evidently sensing his perilous situation when too late, turned the wrong way. In an attempt to get the youth clear from the blazing wreckage, some of the flesh of one leg was torn away. Much credit is due Mr. Sternberg for his strenuous and humane attempts to prevent the motorcycle driver from burning to death on the spot.

Smith is survived by relatives in New London and Norwich.

RELEASE UNDER BONDS FOR HARTFORD MAN

Joseph D. Duggan, 26, of No. 25 Elliott avenue, Hartford, whose machine struck and badly injured Stanislaw Trasko, 49, near Taft's station Thursday night, was released on bonds Friday, pending the outcome of the injuries to Trasko. The latter is suffering from a fractured skull. Trasko was walking across the highway to make a purchase at the Taft's station store when he was hit. INSPECTED AIRPORTS AT DANIELSON, PUTNAM, GROTON

Sixteen airports in Massachusetts will be visited by M. C. Hoppin, airport specialist of the department of commerce, who has just completed a tour of twelve airports in Rhode Island and Connecticut, according to an announcement at Boston, Friday, by the aeronautical development committee of the New England council.

Communities which Mr. Hoppin has visited are, in Connecticut, Bridgeport, Danbury, Danielson, Groton, Hartford, New Canaan, New Haven, Norwalk, Putnam and Torrington; in Rhode Island, Providence and Woonsocket.

"Free inspection and advisory service will be rendered to municipalities, corporations or individuals owning or interested in developing landing fields," Mr. Hoppin explains in the statement. "This service, provided upon request only, includes advice and aid in the selection of suitable sites for landing fields and suggestions for the development and increased safety of fields already in existence. Detailed engineering service, such as is provided by professional firms of airport construction engineers, is not included in the survey.

"The department of commerce is interested in increasing the number of landing fields existing in the country as rapidly as possible and offers this service in furtherance of the movement. It is most advisable for all landing fields to be of sufficient size at the beginning to obtain the department's 'number one size rating. It is usually easier to dispose of surplus land than to acquire new land at reasonable prices. The area needed to meet the requirements is 160 acres."

Suggestions as to the improvement necessary to meet the other requirements of the different ratings of the department of commerce are also made. Application for the assignment of a rating is entirely voluntary, but interest in the rating plan is increasing because of the possible benefits that may accrue to rated ports in the future, such as reduced insurance rates, increased public confidence in air lines using such ports, and other benefits.

KELSEY KINDRED TO HOLD REUNION AT CLINTON

(Special to The Bulletin)

CLINTON, Conn., Sept. 5—Plans are on foot for entertaining the third annual reunion of the Kelsey kindred, a nation-wide association of persons of Kelsey name or blood, which will take place Sunday, Sept. 14.

Members are expected from some 20 states besides that there are a great many here in central Connecticut—becoming interested in some line of their forebears through the recent publication of the two-volume Kelsey Geneology by Earl Leland Kelsey of Torrington, a native of this place.

Everyone in any way connected with this wide-spread family will be made welcome. The first exercises will be divine service (at 11 d. s. t.) at the historic Clinton Congregational church founded in 1667 by William Kelsey, his sons and their associate "planters," all migrants from the earlier Hartford colony.

Rev. David Stone Kelsey, a native of Killingworth and nineth generation from William, himself, Patriarch of the David P. Kelsey association, will deliver the historic address at this service. His recent travels in Europe and the British Isles should furnish a theme well worth hearing. His trip included visits to both British Kenilworth (from which Clinton-Killingworth, originally one township, was named) and to Scrooby church from which the pilgrim fathers first broke away. He also viewed the Founders' monument at Southampton, England, from where the Mayflower finally set sail.

GARDEN PARTY AND SILVER TEA FOR CLUB

The May club and its auxiliary were entertained Thursday afternoon at a garden party given by Mrs. Frances Bogue at her home on Bliss place. A very pleasant afternoon was spent playing cards and the hostess furnished refreshments. It was an ideal place for a party for the gardens were lovely in spite of the season's drought, and the hostess had made it gay with pillows, beach umbrellas and tables. Friday afternoon Miss Lena Lester entertained the club and its auxiliary at a silver tea at her home on Broad street. A very pleasant social hour was spent on the broad verandas, and the hostess served supper for the party.

NORWICH TOWN

BOY BREAKS HIS LEG WHILE PLAYING FOOTBALL

John Haun, about 13, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Lee Haun of Town street, broke his leg above the knee, Friday at 12.45, while playing football with other boys on the playground at Samuel Huntington school. He was taken into the school by two of his comrades and his teacher, Miss Florence M. Bennett, assistant principal, had him immediately taken to his home. One of the teachers, Miss Elizabeth McCord, drove the boy home after two of the boys had carried him to her automobile. Dr. E. J. Brophy was called and after an X-ray had been taken of the injured leg by Don Houghton, the Backus hospital ambulance was sent for and the boy was removed to the hospital later in the afternoon. The boy, who started in the 8th grade at the opening of school Wednesday morning, is a great favorite among his playmates. It is expected that it will be several weeks before he will be on his feet again.

Dist. Supt. To Preach.

Rev. Myron E. Genter, district superintendent, will occupy the pulpit at the Methodist Episcopal church Sunday morning. His sermon theme will be "The Tragedy of a False Inventory."

Mrs. William H. Whiteman, of Norwich Town, with a party of friends had a most enjoyable automobile trip to Newport Wednesday. Others in the party were Mrs. Emily Irish and her niece, Miss Lola Bell Roath, also Miss Maria Briggs. The outgoing trip was by the Noose Hill road to Providence, thence over the King Philip Trail to Warren, through Bristol and over Mount Hope bridge. Having dinner at Newport, a ten mile sightseeing drive was taken before crossing the ferry to Jamestown, from which after a short trip another ferry was taken to Saunderstown. In continuing on the homeward route, the party passed through Narragansett Pier, Wakefield and Westerly. Just prior to reaching Groton a stop was made at a famous resort for a clam chowder supper. When crossing on the ferry at Newport, the party saw Thomas Lipton's yacht, Erin.

A Norwich Town man and his wife when returning home Wednesday afternoon from the Six Church Conference at Pachaug church, felt that they were most fortunate when passing through the narrow underpass at Newent. Before reaching this treacherous location the driver sounded his horn twice, the last time loud and for a number of seconds. This must have attracted the driver of an out-of-the-state delicatessen truck, who presumably was traveling at a fast rate of speed as he slowed down just as the two machines met exactly under the railroad tracks in this narrow pass. The out of town driver had somewhat of an egitated expression and the Norwich Town couple were most thankful for what did not prove a serious accident, as the other driver did not give any warning signal.

ARGENTINA FUNCTIONING UNDER A NEW GOVERNMENT

The Irigoyen Government Was Overthrown by An Army-Navy Rebellion Saturday Night—General Jose E. Uriburu is Acting As Provisional President, With a Civilian Cabinet—Former President Irigoyen is a Prisoner-Patient, Suffering From Pneumonia—Vice President Martinez Capitulated When Threatened With Imprisonment—15 Persons Were Killed and 188 Wounded During Fighting in Buneos Aires

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 7—(AP)—With the Hipolito Irigoyen government unseated by an army-navy rebellion last night and the aging former president held prisoner, the movement spread today to a number of other provinces in the republic.

Troops of the revolutionary junta took control of Santa Fe and Rosario the two principal cities of Santa Fe province—the 12th infantry holding Santa Fe and the 11th occupying Rosario.

Reports from the city of Santiago in the province of Del Estero, say that when the news of the revolution in Buenos Aires was received 2,000 persons paraded the streets and shouted for the new government. Police attempted to disperse them but afterward joined the manifestation.

Other demonstrations which brought the communities over to the side of the junta were held in the cities of La Plata, where Irogoyen is a prisoner in the barracks of the 7th infantry; Mendoza and Parana.

In the province of Sanjuan Lisandro Salas, who was the federal interventor in the provincial administration under orders of Irigoyen, anticipated the fall of his government and resigned, leaving a free hand to the opposition. The Irigoyen policy of federal intervention is considered one of the things that brought about his downfall.

The capital is under a strict martial regime with the leader of the revolt, General Jose Evaristo Uriburu, as provisional president with a civilian cabinet.

Irigoyen is both a prisoner and a patient at La Plata. He is suffering from pneumonia, aggravated by the excitement and discouragement which have come to him in the last few days, and has a high temperature. Two physicians were at his bedside all last night, under orders from the new government to give him all possible medical care. He was assured by Colonel Giordane, in charge of the provincial troops, that he would be guarded against violence.

The story of the former president's adventures yesterday is dramatic. He had kept inside during most of the disturbed week that brought about the outbreak and after the cabinet ran up the white flag to the oncoming revolutionaries last night no one knew where Irigoyen was. Some reports said he had fled to a cruiser for refuge.

Eventually it was learned that the president had dashed from his home in a motorcar after receiving word that the revolt had triumphed, loyal police holding up traffic near his home in the Calle Brazil for several minutes. Police on the side of the revolutionaries pursued the car and intercepted it at La Plata, where Irigoyen, so ill that he had to be helped out of the car, was taken first to the provincial capital house and then removed to the infantry barracks.

He asked immediately for a bed and after conversing for a few minutes with the officers wrote a brief resignation and handed it to the commander of the 7th infantry, Lieutenant Colonel Yrusta.

"To the Officers of the Army:

"In the city of La Plata on the seventh day of September, 1930 (it was shortly after midnight when he signed the resignation) I, Hipolito Irigoyen, constitutional president of the republic, in view of what has occurred today, present my resignation as president."

No less dramatic was the resignation of the former vice president, Dr. Enrique V. Martinez, who was president for a day after Irigoyen had "retired" under a constitutional provision Friday night.

When General Uribobu arrived at the government house last night after the revolutionary troops had taken over the city, he encountered Martinez in the presidential office, informed him that the revolution was a complete success, and demanded his resignation.

Martinez refused.

"You may kill me but I will not resign," he asserted.

"I am not simple enough to make a martyr of you," replied Emhe revolt leader, "but your resignation is necessary to prevent bloodshed. Resign or you will be imprisoned."

In a few minutes Martinez capitulated and signed the resignation.

Enthusiastic crowds swarmed gleefully through Buenos Aires all night after the exciting change in government.

One group went to Irigoyen's home and removed all furniture to the street, piled it up and burned it. The houses of former Foreign Minister Oyhanarte and of other Irigoyenist leaders also were ransacked.

Other groups raided the offices of the execution committee of the radical party—the Irigoyenist faction—and also tore up the quarters of all radical political clubs.

Hot-blooded youths, mostly students, attacked the Cafe Molino, which had sheltered a group of Irigoyenistas that opened fire on the revolutionary troops in the Plaza Congreso last night, and demolished it.

Then they visited the central police station, carrying banners and singing he national anthem. Behind them trailed a bust of the fallen president.

Other places destroyed by infuriated groups last night were the newspapers La Epoca and La Calle, Irigoyen organs. These were burned while the city firemen, loyal to the revolt movement, refused to fight the flames. The attack on La Epoca occurred after persons in the building had fired upon the advancing revolutionary troops. The troops soon silenced their assailants with machine guns and then the crowd rushed at the building to destroy it.

The provisional cabinet was organized last night and one of its first acts was dissolution of the congress and proclamation of martial law. Today it appointed army and navy officers to govern the various provinces pending eventual return of the country to civilian government. The governors chosen for seven of the fourteen provinces are as follows:

Buenos Aires province — Colonel Giordano.
Cordoba—General Pertine.
San Juan—Colonel Cuello.
Mendoza—Colonel La Forcada.
Jujuy—Commander Sueyro.
Corrientes—Commander Loredo.
Santa Fe—Commander Marquez.

The casualties resulting from last night's shooting in front of La Epoca and at the Plaza Congreso were placed tonight at 15 killed and 185 wounded. Both occurred when unidentified civilians, presumably Irigoyenistas, opened fire on the revolutionary soldiers. The troops retaliated with machine guns, spreading panic among the great crowds massed in the busy streets of the capital.

While most of the looting and ransacking was of a political nature, with inflamed crowds burning possessions of the former administration, several men took advantage of the confused situation to raid the treasury department of the state railway. When they started to allot the loot they had a shooting affray of their own.

U. S. MIGHT BENEFIT BY SHIFT OF GOVERNMENT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7—(AP)—Closer cooperation between the United States and the Argentine republic was held forth unofficially in Washington today as a likely result of the overthrew of the Irigoyen government. The latest official word received here reported only a temporary shift of authority by Irigoyen, and comment was withheld while official word of developments was awaited.

Despite occasional exchanges of courtesies between President Hoover and the former Argentine leader, a lack of cordiality to the United States by Irigoyen long had been felt here. He recalled the Argentine ambassador from Washington in 1928 and the post has been vacant since. Not only had Argentine refrained from sending delegates to several Pan-American conferences, but Irigoyen, soon after his election in 1928, had cancelled appointments of representatives to the inter-American arbitration conference made by his predecessor.

Argentina recently declared an embargo against potato imports, following the quarantine established by the United States on that country's grapes, and considerable public resentment in the South American republic has been reported following the establishment of a high tariff by the United States against several Argentine products.

A BREAK REPORTED IN THE PANAMAN CABINET

PANAMA CITY, Sept. 7—(AP)—It was reliably reported today that four members of the Panama cabinet intend to resign unless Jeptha B. Duncan, around whom a storm has been brewing for some time, quits his post as secretary of public instruction.

It was understood that those intending to resign are T. G. Duque, minister of finance; A. Robles, minister of the interior; J. D. Arosemena, foreign minister (a brother of President Florencio Arosemena); and L. F. Clement, minister of agriculture.

Observers say the attitude of these cabinet members reflects the view of the nationalist assembly, which has protested to the president against Duncan appearing in the chamber to present his report. Duncan enjoys the confidence of the president, however, and has paid no attention to demands that he resign.

DETECTIVE AND GUNMAN WOUNDED IN DETROIT

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 7—(AP)—Detective Edward Barney of the Detroit police department, and an unidentified gunman were wounded fatally in a gun battle here this afternoon.

The dead gunman later was identified tentatively as Leo Genova.

Police were sent to a residence near the suburb of Highland Park this afternoon after receiving word that the place was a "gangster hangout."

Barney, who only recently was appointed a detective, was eager to show he merited promotion, according to other officers, and rushed the rear door of the house alone. After he entered, shots were heard. Detectives who followed him in found Barney and Genova lying on the floor dying.

MAN SLAIN ON HIS FRONT LAWN IN FALMOUTH, MASS.

FALMOUTH, Mass., Sept. 7—(AP)—State detectives and local police attempted this afternoon to pick up the trail of the killer who shot Clarence A. Parker to death, on his front lawn early this morning.

Parker was shot through the heart just after he had returned from a local chain grocery store of which he was the manager. Police believed robbery was the motive, but the bandit got little in return for his death dealing shots. Parker never carried the Saturday night store receipts home with him. He secreted them at the store. It was the first murder here in six years.

MIDDLETOWN MAN SHOT AND FATALLY WOUNDED HIS WIFE

MIDDLETOWN, Sept. 7—(AP)—At least 24 hours before he fired the shot from his single barreled shotgun that fatally wounded his wife, Annie, on Saturday, John Zlatohlavek, 65, had decided the only way out of his domestic difficulties was the death of his wife and himself, police said today.

Police revealed Albert Hanus, brother-in-law of Zlatohlavek, told them the man telephoned him on Friday and asked him to come over for a visit.

"I'm goin gto kill Annie Saturday and commit suicide," Hanus told police Zlatohlavek said.

Hanus said he thought nothing of the remark until the next day when he heard of the tragedy.

Zlatohlavek will be araigned in city court here tomorrow and if bound over is likely to get a speedy trial as criminal term of superior court will convene Tuesday or Wednesday.

At the county jail, Zlatohlavek today maintained the stoic calm that has marked his actions since Saturday noon, when, after a scuffle with his 30 year old son, Anthony, he shot and killed his wife in the kitchen of their home.

He meant to end his own life, he told police, but was prevented by his son.

DIAMOND FILES CLAIM AGAINST PRUSSIAN POLICE

BERLIN, Sept. 7—(AP)—Jack (Legs) Diamond, who was shipped toward the United States from Hamburg yesterday on the freighter, Hanover, took a parting shot at the Prussian police by entering a claim for damages because he was detained.

The American gangster charged that the matter was "harmful to my credit" and demanded that he be compensated for his detention.

The claim was filed before Diamond sailed.

The claim is based on the allegation that the German police had no right to arrest a man holding a visa to enter Germany and against whom neither a warrant noran order of extradition had been issued by American authorities.

Death In New Yo[illegible] Simon Wm [illegible]auss

Noted Fina[illegible] Was One of the Pioneer[illegible]n Development of the [illegible]merican Skyscraper

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Simon William Straus, noted financier, chairman of the board of S. W. Straus & Co., died at his suite at the Hotel Ambassador today. He was 63 and had been ill for more than a year.

Generally recognized as the originator of the modern first mortgage real estate bond, he was one of the pioneers in aiding the development of the American skyscraper.

His company was among the first to finance large buildings and the banker won wide recognition through his plan for safeguarding first mortgage loans on improved real estate and making this form of security available to the general investing public.

Mr. Straus started his career in Chicago, where his father, Frederick William Straus, opened a small mortgage office.

The firm, first known as F. W. Straus & Co., became, when the father retired, S. W. Straus & Co., the son taking over the management.

Mr. Straus assumed the presidency when the concern was incorporated in 1905 after a rapid growth. He continued in this post until 1929, when he became chairman of the board. He moved to New York in 1915 and devoted the major part of his time to that office and the development of branches throughout the country.

Under his leadership the company erected the Straus buildings in New York and Chicago. He founded the Franklin Trust and Savings bank in Chicago in 1911 and in 1928 he established the Straus National Bank and Trust companies in Chicago and New York.

Mr. Straus also was president of the American Society for Thrift, which he founded in 1915. He contributed generously to charities.

He was born in Ligonier, Ind. Surviving are his widow, the former Hattie Klee of Pittsburgh, three daughters, Mrs. Louise Celestin, Mrs. Herbert S. Martin and Mrs. Vladimir S. Rachevsky, and two brothers, Arthur and S. J. T. Straus, of Chicago.

RUM RUNNER DRESSED AS GUARDSMAN KIDNAPED FISH AND GAME WARDENS

SWANSEA, Mass, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Dressed as a coast guardsman, the captain of a supposed rum runner kidnaped two Massachusetts state fish and game wardens and a local fisherman early today after they had boarded a Rhode Island fish boat caught dredging scallops in Cole's river, near the Massachusetts-Rhode Island line, the captured wardens revealed after they had been put ashore later.

The wardens, Everett Trask, of this territory and Howard Willard, of the shore patrol in Boston, and Charles O'Connell, a Swansee fisherman, had boarded the fishing boat despite efforts by its crew of five to keep them off with pike poles and shovels. Meanwhile, a large speedboat with a crew of 15, bore down on the little craft in which Wardens Trask, Willard and Daniel Ellis, also of Boston, had overtaken the Rhode Island fishing boat.

A gun fight followed. Benjamin Haydeck, owner of the smaller boat, and Warden Ellis finally eluded the speedboat by skimming across a sand bar. The speedboat put after the fishing boat which had headed out into Mount Hope bay with the two other wardens and O'Donnell aboard. Some of the crew of the speedboat are believed to have been wounded in the exchange of shots with Warden Ellis.

When the speedboat overtook the fishing boat, its captain, garbed in a coast guardsman's uniform, ordered Trask, Willard, O'Connell and the captain of the fishing boat to come aboard his boat. The wardens complied and learnd too late that they had been tricked. Finally, they were put ashore at Bristol, R. I., several miles from Cole's river.

Warden Trask declared later that the speedboat was a rum runner and probably had landed a load of liquor on the Touisset shore shortly before the kidnaping incident.

He said he bjieved the rum runner was in the vicinity to protect the fishing boat, which was dredging scallops illegally three weeks before the opening of the Massachusetts season.

COSTE AND BELLONTE HAVE ARRIVED AT WASHINGTON

The French Fliers Were Welcomed by George Akerson, Representing President Hoover—A Group of Officials and Diplomats Surrounded the Fliers As They Alighted—The Army Band Played the "Marseillaise" As the Question Mark Landed

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—(AP)—A red plane attled down easily at Bolling field today and Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte stepped out to meet the welcome of the capital.

The official welcome began even before the French Paris to New York fliers left the Question Mark. Coste and Bellonte, looking fresh and calm, sat quietly for a moment before rising to shed their flying clothes. Then, trim and neat in dark blue suits, they stood looking down and Jules Henry, charge de affaires of the French embassy, introduced Georg Akerson, representing President Hoover.

Akerson smiled a welcome and said one, too, but it was lost in the roar of the crowd which was massing about the plane. Coste smiled and responded in English:

"I am grateful that the president has sent you to greet me. Please return to him my greetings and express my appreciation."

The fliers held an impromptu reception before they climbed out of the plane was carried them across the Atlantic a few days ago. Most of the official welcoming delegation thrust up hands to them including Major General Fechet, chief of the army air corps, and Herbert Hoover, Jr.

A group of officials and diplomats surrounded the fliers as they alighted. Among the group were Clarence M. Young, assistant secretary of commerce, Pierre Del Boal, of the state department, the Belgian ambassador, Prince De Ligne and Rear Admiral William A. Moffett.

The army band had been playing at intervals before the Question Mark appeared out of the northeast and now it boomed into the "Marseillaise." Coste and Bellonte stiffened.

The crowd waited quietly enough for the Frenchmen to appear, but once the fliers were on the ground they began to swarm out toward the plane.

A little group of Frenchmen worked themselves near Coste and Bellonte and between yells of "Vive La France" called out to their countrymen. Coste and Bellonte turned and shouted.

A path was cleared for a white house car. Coste, Bellonte, Akerson, Captain Charles R. Train and Julese Henry climbed in and started to the French embassy. There they found a crowd that filled a block in both directions awaiting them. The aviators went into the building without pausing, but immediately reappeared on a second story balcony. The cheering continued without interruption and three encores were necessary to satisfy the spectators.

The fliers had been at the embassy only a little while before they decided to go for a drive around the eight mile speedway and through Rock Creek park.

Major Thenault, former commander of the Lafayette escadrille, commented that Coste was "never tired." He added that in New York, the flier was "on the go" when others were seeking chairs and beds.

The report persisted that Lindbergh would accompany the Frenchmen to Washington and the crowd which awaited the fliers at the field thought for a time a photographer's ship which flew for a short distance near the Question Mark was his plane.

Lindbergh did not come and he sent a message that he wanted to make the event "Coste's Day." This was also the explanation given for Rear Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd's absence.

Program For Today.

The program for Coste and Bellonte tomorrow includes laying a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier and an official greeting by President Hoover, followed by a luncheon at the white house.

Late in the day a reception in their honor will be given at the French embassy and they are to be guests of the Washington board of trade at a dinner in the evening. They plan to leave Washington Tuesday morning.

Those invited by President Hoover to the luncheon are ice President Curtis, Postmaster General Brown, Secretaries Adams, Hyde, Lamont and Davis, Joseph E. Cotton, under secretary of state; General John J. Pershing, Jules Henry, charge d'affaires of France in the absence of Ambassador Claudel; Major George Thenault, aviation attache of the French embassy; Raymond Bouquet of the embassy; Rear Admiral Byrd, Colonel Lindbergh, Captain Edward V. BURNS RECEIVED IN PLANE PROVE FATAL

NEW MILFORD, Sept. 7.—(AP)—E. R. Booth of New York city, one of two men injured near Washington, Conn., Saturday when their plane crashed in a wooded section, died tonight from burns in New Milford hospital. John A. Cooke, pilot of the plane, was still confined to the hospital with a broken jaw and numerous minor cuts. His condition was not considered serious.

The pair were flying from New York city to Bradford, N. H., where Booth has a summer home, and became lost in a fog over Washington. While they were attempting to get their bearings the plane burst into flames. Cooke nosed the ship sharply downward toward a small clearing but missed his mark, crashing into a tree. BELIEVES HE CAN PRODUCE POWER FROM GULF STREAM

MATANZAS, Cuba, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Professor Georges Claude, noted French scientist, succeeded today in launching a tube with which he believes he can produce inexpensive power from the waters of the Gulf stream.

The work required six hours.

This is the third tube that Professor Claude has constructed. The others were destroyed in the attempts at launching and the inventor charged at the time that sabotage by interests opposed to his scheme was indicated.

He obtained the cooperation of the Cuban government for the third attempt and soldiers guarded all details of the work. He also secured the backing of the French Academy of Sciences and adopted several suggestions for this latest experiment, which cost approximately $1,000,000.

The inventor's scheme in brief develops around the fact that the surface water in the tropics is hot the year round, the temperature averaging around 85 degrees F., while the water at the bottom of the ocean is cold—from 35 to 40 degrees. As he views it his tube will run from the shore about a mile along the ocean head and thus tap the cold water. He plans to use the hot water to operate a turbine, after it has been converted into steam by means of a vacuum, while the cold water will re-condense the steam and renew the vaccum.

WESTERLY

BARN AND 13 COWS DESTROYED IN STORM

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Sept. 7.— The severe electrical storm which on Saturday night and Sunday morning circled Westerly at times in the early Saturday evening causing electrical lights to dim, broke over the town about 3:30 a. m., with almost tropical fury. Especially severe was the storm's visit to the Washington county seashore resorts and at Langworthy's corners, on the Shore road, a barn was struck and eight valuable cows nearby killed by lightning with an estimated loss of over $1200.

While in the northern and central sections of Rhode Island the storm was especially severe with numerous buildings struck and hail stones fell on passing automobilists on the Noseneck Hill road; the town of Westerly, for the most part, escaped serious damage. At the corner of the Shore and Weekapaug roads, a barn was struck on the Langworthy farm of Clifford Langworthy. It was about 4 a. m. Sunday. Mr. Langworthy heard a particularly severe crash and on looking out could see no damage. When arising, he visited the barn, a few shingles were found ripped off the west end of the roof and in a neighboring cow yard he found eight Jersey and Guernsey cows dead. These cattle, the best of the herd, including a two-year-old heifer, were found huddled together, while the remainder of the herd came into the barn, apparently in good condition at milking time.

The north-eastern sky of Westerly, at 3:15 a. m., was illuminated by the burning barn of John Barber at Shannock, R. I. The barn was struck by lightning and six head of cattle, a bull and five cows, together with twenty tons of hay, a ton of grain, new mowing machine, hay rake and other farming utensils were entirely destroyed by fire.

The motor pumper of the Richmond-Charleston fire department, with force of firemen, were summoned but their arrival proved too late to save the barn, which was a roaring furnace. Hard work on the part of the firemen saved the adjoining farmhouse. The barn was a story and a half structure, forty feet by sixty feet.

There was an attempt made to save the livestock but the would-be rescuers were driven back by the flames. Last June, at the Barber place, three cattle in a pasture were struck and killed by lightning. Estimated amount of the damage will total nearly $10,000.

Westerly police authorities were notified on Sunday morning of a break at the Bradford post office and the large drug store adjoining. The loss in the drug store was reported as cigars, pennies and two jack-knives. The break was discovered on Sunday morning when Proprietor Joseph Monti opened his store for the day.

The burglars gained entrance through a rear window in a manner similar to a break a short time ago. Westerly Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown was of the opinion that small boys were responsible. Westerly Police Patrolman LeRoy H. Norman was detailed to investigate.

DANIELSON

POLICE SEARCH FOR TWO YOUTHFUL AUTO THIEVES

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 7.—A couple of youngsters, with no aversion at all to stealing automobiles, had a flock of state officers from the Danielson barracks out chasing them early this afternoon. At the time this was written they were unidentified, but had the theft of two cars charged up against them within a period of 24 hours.

During the early hours of this morning they abandoned, at Attawaugan, a car they had stolen in Worcester on Saturday. That particular car was at the state police barracks on North Main street this afternoon, while officers were seeking from the Massachusetts state police department information that would establish the ownership.

Where the coatless youths went after they abandoned this particular car at Attawaugan remained a mystery up to this afternoon, when they turned up at Putnam and stole another machine, parked near the business center of that city. This last car is the property of Albert Thibeault, of 18 Lee street, Putnam. News of that theft sent state officers scurying out of here to apprehend the thieves, and information relative to the affair was broadcast for the benefit of all police departments in southern New England.

Objects To Wife's Dancing

Florence Mailhot, a young woman who has been living with her young husband at 16 Oak street, stepped out to a dance last night, only to find upon her return home that her husband, Ernest, also had stepped out, taking their 3 1-2 months child along with him, and he had not returned today. The impression in state police circles this afternoon was that Mailhot and the baby probably had gone into New York state. It appears that the whole affair develops out of the fact that Mailhot felt that his wife should stay at home instead of being out dancing.

Whether or not charges will be preferred against Mailhot was not clear this afternoon. The case had not developed sufficiently at that time as to make possible a forecast as to what might be the outcome of the whole affair.

Supt. Parker's Report

The following is an excerpt from the report of Supt. W. E. Parker, superintendent of schools in Killingly, to appear in the annual town reports to be issued about three weeks hence:

Continuing its policy of modernizing the school buildings of the town during the summer of 1929, alterations were completed at East Killingly which included the installation of new lavatories in connection with the pressure water system which was installed two years ago. This work also included the installation of septic tank with the necessary drainage to provide for the sewage. During the summer of 1930, but prior to the close of the fiscal school year, there were also installed at East Killingly electric lights in both rooms and new shades for the windows. Thus East Killingly school, with its steam heat, pressure water system, modern toilets, and electric lights, takes its place with our other well equipped school buildings.

During the early part of the summer of 1930 four rooms at the Goodyear school in which the installation of electric lights had been only partly made, were wired and new fixtures added so that all rooms are now well lighted.

At the Attawaugan school the two rooms now in use were wired and fixtures installed.

At Ballouville new lavatories have been installed within the present building by making a few minor alterations, so that our school in that section of the town is now in good modern condition.

At South Killingly, the laying of a new floor and the erection of new and newer outbuildings has been completed.

Killingly has certainly done well during the past few years in the steps taken to modernize its school properties for all schools, except Killingly Center, Valley and South Killingly are now fitted with adequate modern electric lights, all except Killingly Center and South Killingly Center, Valley, South Killingly and Attawaugan are equipped with thoroughly modern toilets located within the buildings; except Killingly Center, Valley and South Killingly, all buildings are steam-heated. Except at Killingly Center, East Killingly, Valley and South Killingly all buildings of the town are fitted with new single seats. The need for new seats at the schools named is not great because of the fact that the number of pupils now in attendance is such that in [illegible] y case there is a separate [illegible] h pupil. [illegible] bove improvements have [illegible] during the past six years [illegible] or special appropriations for the work with monies saved from the annual budget by economies wherever possible.

FUNERAL

Miss Julia C. Downing

Miss Julia C. Downing's funeral was held Saturday morning from her home in Moosup, with services at All Hallows' church at 9 o'clock, Rev. Phillip Massicotte, the pastor, being celebrant of the high mass of requiem. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery at Greeneville. The bearers were James Smith, Daniel Smith, John H. Smith, Oscar Jouret, John H. Burke and John Fitzgerald. L. E. Kennedy was in charge of the arrangements.

After a suspension of operations since prior to Labor day, the Quinebaug mills, employing several hundred people here, will resume operations Monday morning. This large plant has been a mainstay of the prosperity of Danielson for upwards of two generations, and has run along very steadily during the long period of depression that has been so general in the textile centers of New England.

Chief John McFarland has now established a plan of periodically cruising around in a taxi to check on the youngsters that recently took to riding bicycles on sidewalks to such an extent as to constitute a menace to the people using them for the purposes for which they were built, and in violation of a borough ordinance. The information that the chief is checking up on them, and that arrests surely will be made of the first violators caught, has had its beneficial effect. The boys and girls have rediscovered that paved streets are not so bad for bike riding.

The hope was expressed over the week end that it may be possible to arrange a concert or two on Davis park by the Killingly high school band during the early fall season, when the public could enjoy the music in comfort. This demand largely arises because the town made an appropriation to help pay the cost of instructing the student players at the last annual town meeting, and because the people of the town would like to hear the boys and girls play, having come to appreciate what the band can do from the concerts given early last fall.

It would appear on reports from various sources that more people will be at work in textile plants in the town of Killingly and immediate adjacent territory beginning Monday than in any one week since the early summer season. Danielson is, and has been, fortunate, in the manner in which mills have supplied opportunities for work during the past year.

After a suspension of meetings during the summer season, members of the Men's club of the Methodist Episcopal church will get together Wednesday evening for the first time during which may be unofficially termed the present fall season.

Steady progress is being made on building up the shoulders at the edges of the three miles of new concrete highway between Wauregan and Danielson. That work does not interfere with the normal passage of traffic over this direct route between Norwich and Worcester.

Rev. J. Rees Jones, rector of St. Alban's parish, conducted a service at 9:30 this morning at Trinity church in Brooklyn, which is closely allied with the Danielson church.

The week now opening will bring the caucuses of the republicans and democrats in Danielson, for the purpose of nominating candidates for town offices during the coming year, meaning from the first Monday in October, when the annual town election is to be held.

And now the N. Y., N. H. and H. R. R. company has given up part of its freight station here to a business concern that has occupied an adjoining building for several years, and is transacting its own freight business in a northerly section of the structure where it has done business for upwards of half a century.

It has recently been remarked by many people who have been over that way and have been familiar with the community for many years that they do not recall when the property of the South Killingly Congregational church has looked so well as it does at the present time, following the painting and other improvement work accomplished during the past few weeks.

The flare for week end dances shows no diminution, though Labor day has come and gone and the average person regards this particular season as early fall. Attendances at dance places hereabouts Saturday was reported close to the summer peak.

Tuesday afternoon, at the Methodist Episcopal church, members of the W. C. T. U. are to meet to elect officers for the ensuing year. This will be the first meeting since the early summer season.

Today, the cells at the police station here were unoccupied for the first time in weeks on a Sunday.

Frank Barber, promoting the benefit card of boxing bouts on which real big timers of the fistic game are to appear in the interest of the Day Kimball Hospital Nurses' Home fund, said this morning that the advance sale of tickets is now in excess, rated money-wise, of $3,000. It is expected to go to $5,000 gross.

Foundations are in for the addition that is to be built to the convent on the property of St. James' parish on Franklin street. The work is expected to be practically complete before real cold weather sets in.

Telephone and electric light company linemen were out on their jobs this Sunday morning correcting damage caused by the severe electrical storm that swept over Danielson and all adjacent territory during the late hours of Saturday night. The lightning was especially vivid.

More than 30 members of the executive committee of the National Dyers' and Finishers' association and their guests were entertained at dinner at the Snake Meadow club Saturday afternoon, dinner being served at 6 o'clock. A business meeting occupied the attention of the executive committee members during the greater part of the afternoon. Committee members were representative of many large textile centers in southern New England.

For the second successive year a summer season is closing with low water in the rivers, ponds and streams all through this territory, the drought conditions approximating those of the late summer days of 1929. Rain that fell during the late hours of Saturday night went only a small way toward relieving the dry conditions.

PUTNAM

PUTNAM SUFFERS EFFECTS OF SEVERE ELECTRICAL STORM

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 7.—An electrical and wind storm which at times gained gale proportions roared out of the northwest Saturday evening at 9 o'clock, and with terrific force drenched this city with torrential downpours accompanied by hail, that left a large amount of damage in its wake. As usual, the telephone company suffered the greatest burden of the wrath of the elements. Cable service in Putnam was crippled, as a report from the exchange office at noon showed there to be 400 stations in Putnam isolated, with the number steadily mounting early this afternoon. The city fire alarm system was momentarily put out of commission when a bolt of lightning entered the switchboard at the Central station and burned out a fuse. The damage was immediately repaired by Supt. of Alarms Charles T. Thayer, on duty at the time.

The rain was so heavy that sewer outlets and gutters were taxed to their capacity within a few minutes after the storm came up and streets were converted into small canals as the water went coursing its way to the river. Several inches of water pooled under the railroad bridge on Front street, and formed a miniature lake that was impassable for several minutes, while loads of sand and cinder fill on the railroad embankment above the bridge were washed by the rushing waters into South Main and Front streets.

Telephone cables in which lines connecting the outlying districts with the local exchange were encased, were burned out at various points, disrupting service to stations on the routes of the cables. Relief forces from New London were despatched to Putnam early this morning and by noon the majority of trouble centers had been located and repair work was well under way a few hours afterward. Danielson and Moosup exchanges were not hit so hard, since the storm swirled off its course, striking these centers only moderately. The storm of Saturday evening by many degrees surpassed in intensity all previous ones of the season, and went on record as being the worst of the summer.

Until late this afternoon only one report of lightning having struck buildings in this vicinity was received here. It was said that the Farrell home in Pomfret was entered by lightning shortly after Saturday night's storm came up. Minor damage was done to the house and none of the occupants suffered any ill effects from the alarming experience.

A middle-aged woman wanted for general housework. Phone Putnam 1022 in the forenoon between the hours of 9 and 11:30 o'clock.—adv.

LOCAL CAR IS RECOVERED BY WORCESTER POLICE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 7.—For a third time today Worcester automobile thieves wanted in this city and in Worcester for the theft of automobiles were successful in eluding police, when it was reported at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon by police of Worcester that a Buick four-passenger coupe owned by Albert Thibeault of 18 Lee street, Putnam, and stolen from its parking space on School street at 1 o'clock this afternoon, had been recovered. Local Girl Improved

The condition of Agnes Bourque, 15, of Water street, was reported as improved this afternoon by officials of the Day Kimball hospital, where she has been a patient since Friday evening after police found her unconscious on a wood pile on the Thompson road near the Green Lantern Inn. The hospital ambulance was summoned to convey the girl to the hospital.

In investigating circumstances surrounding the case, State Officer James F. Carmody of Danielson barracks learned that the girl had been discharged from the Bloom Silk Co. on Friday afternoon. She is believed to have walked to Thompson, where she was seized with a fit, police explained.

The girl caused her parents considerable alarm a few months ago when she disappeared from her home and was missing for several days before being found at the home of relatives living in the southern part of the county.

The excavation for the basement was a hard job, but the members of the grange turned out with free labor and the walls were completed last week. A carload of lumber was placed on the lot Labor day. JEWETT CITY

DAVID HALE FANNING ANNEX TO LIBRARY COMPLETED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

JEWETT CITY, Sept. 7.—A copper cylinder 12x4 inches has been made, which will be placed within the granite wall of the David Hale Fanning annex to Slater library. The receptacle will contain the names of the present trustees, Dr. George H. Jennings, Edward A. Faust, Arthur D. Tripp, Alex McNicol and Earle E. Gilbert, the names of the architects, Cudworth and Thompson, Norwich; the contractor and builder, Earle E. Gilbert, Jewett City. The present librarian is Miss Mabel E. Wilcox, and the substitutes, Jean C. Burleson and Mrs. Jessie S. Hiscox.

The case will also contain a letter from David Hale Fanning to Dr. Geo. H. Jennings, which will bear the signature of Mr. Fanning, he being in many ways Jewett City's well beloved benefactor; also a copy of the issue of The Norwich Bulletin of September 8, 1930; a copy of the Jewett City Press, September 11, 1930, together with such other records and matters of interest as these papers shall contain.

The new annex, which is considerably larger than the original Slater library, and which is nearing completion, was made possible by a bequest of $75,000 by the will of Mr. Fanning, of Worcester, Mass., a native of Jewett City. The repository will contain this clause from said will—"To the Slater library of Jewett City I bequeath the sum of $75,000, this sum to be used for the purpose of enlarging the library building by an extension in the rear to be known as the David Hale Fanning Annex. In the basement there shall be fitted up a reading room for boys and girls. This room should have tiled floors and tiled walls, and be made attractive with plenty of light on three sides. The bequest is made on condition that the extension be made within five years from date of probate of this will, and the executors of my will shall pay over this amount when the trustees of the library shall formally vote to accept the same, and make the extension within the time above specified; and failing to do so this bequest shall fall into the final residue of my estate."

The trustees having faithfully carried out the wishes of the benefactor, the building nears completion, when this copper receptacle is cemented within the granite walls. The same style of architecture has been copied as appears in the original building, which was the gift of the late William A. Slater, of Norwich. Above the door which will connect the new with the old library, there will appear a bronze tablet which will bear the inscription David Hale Fanning Annex. Further library benefits were received from Mr. Fanning in the form of gifts during his lifetime. Due to the efforts of Dr. Jennings, the sum of $20,000 was raised by popular subscription which in accordance with the terms of his promise, Mr. Fanning promptly duplicated. That none, in future ages, should be at a loss to reconcile the town of Jewett City's benefactors, it is to be known that in the beautiful park that bears his name and as showing his interest in the Jewett City cemetery, his other gifts, within the limits of Griswold, have totaled a sum in excess of that received agreeable to the terms of his will.

Former librarians of the local library are Mary Fanning (Olds), Bessie V. Fanning (Levesque), Mary Y. Brown (Brewster), Mrs. Nellis (Bumstead) Hooper, Annie Chapman (Cherry), Martha Church (Tripp).

Important meeting K. of C. tonight. Large attendance desired.—adv.

William B. Bromley, who has been very ill, was reported much improved Sunday evening.

FORMAL VIADUCT OPENING WILL PROBABLY BE ARRANGED

Tentative plans are being considered in reference to the formal opening of the new Quinebaug viaduct. While it is understood that it is not the policy of the state to take any initiative in such plans, it is assured that State Highway Commissioner John A. MacDonald will favorably consider this action by such town and borough officials as become interested. Sure it is that such a grand piece of engineering skill, that has been erected at the cost of a half million dollars, that will stand as a monument of beauty for generations is worthy of the plans that will be completed for its final opening to state highway traffic.

It was stated Sunday that the M. A. Gammino Construction Co. stands ready to place $200 as a leading subscription, provided some celebration worth while can be put through. The state engineers, as well as the construction company, are justly proud of this great project, which ranks among the finest viaduct contracts in Connecticut. Friday the Lisbon approach was finished, and by Wednesday of this week, the road bed of the 2,500 foot viaduct will be completed. The cement pillars, which will carry the lighting system east from the river boundary of Griswold, have been moulded and are ready for erection. The viaduct lights will be an extension of the new Main street white way.

Played Prank On Starter.

The heavy acting by the state road men who worked all day Sunday, was preceding by a bit of diverting comedy. The big 10-ton power roller was to be put in operation, and down the street came a young Italian lad for the purpose of performing that office. Meanwhile another gent from the sunny latitude saw the operator coming, and he hid under the machine. The first boy removed the canvas cover, primed the cylinders, gave her the spark and started the engine. Then while the driver was busy with the tool box, the chap underneath reached up with a stick and closed the throttle. The engine stopped, the operator lifted the hood, tried the plugs, and started her up. Again the boy below reached up and turned off the gas. Now the engine man, invoking the aid of several Italian deities, looked into the hood again. Evidently scenting a nigger in the wood pile, and as the highly entertained gallery looked on, the lad grabbed a pail of water that stood on the foot board, and sluiced it underneath where it would do the most good. Out crawled the dripping joker, while the crowd roared approval. At noontime, both boys were eating macaroni from the same can.

Storm A Real Cloudburst.

Sunday morning at 12:50 an electrical storm of marked intensity was central over the borough. The incessant lightning display was accompanied by a small cloudburst. Nearly two inches of rain fell during the 40 minutes the tempest lasted. The state road in front of the Finn block was awash from curb to curb, the sewer basins being entirely inadequate to carry away the torrent that roared down the street. Several of the electric discharges connected at nearby points, without wait or delay.

The big circuit breakers at the power station kicked out, a tree limb fell on the Lisbon circuit near Paul Geist's. This, with burned out transformers at several points in the local system, kept the borough electricians and linemen busy the balance of the night.

W. A. Richardson, president of Jewett City Twilight league, has completed arrangements for a chicken supper for all those who helped to make the local ball season such a grand success. Seventy-five will be present at Pachaug Grange hall to partake of the supper, to be served by the women of the First Congregational church.

THE DIARY OF ANDREE

There came a time in the last days of August Andree when he realized that his chances of getting back to civilization were slim. He had lost his two companions and in all probability realized that it was only a matter of time before he would join them in death.

While escape from the frozen north was uppermost in his mind, he naturally thought that in the case of death and the subsequent finding of his body those directly concerned in his expedition, and the world in general, would be anxious to know what befell them. Unless his body should be found there could be no expectation that any account of his experiences would be discovered, but he placed due importance upon keeping and preserving his diary, the story of what happened on his balloon flight which might live even if he died.

Andree planned in the hope and expectation that his body and his diary would be found. Though all hope of such a development had long since been abandoned, the expected has happened. Andree took much care in the preservation of the written record, but it must have been without any thought of a controversy developing 33 years later over the possession of it.

It appears to be Swedish law that rights over any written or printed matter extend over a period of 30 years. Thereafter it becomes public property. Andree and his diary have been on White Island for 33 years, three years longer than the law covers, which apparently makes it possible, under a legal interpretation, for the government to lay claim to the documents. Aside from a scientific interest there is bound to be interest in such a story as Andree was able to tell in those last days of life. Just how the contents will be given to the public has not been determined. Needless to say, there should be an authentic account, which seems to be assured by the position which the government has taken in the matter, but if there is any attempt to commercialize the story, it would seem that the explorers' heirs, or those who made possible his expedition, should get the benefit of it. The situation is one which, in all probability, was never expected to be covered by the Swedish 30-year law.

IGNORING THE LEADERS

It is a common demand in connection with the operation of criminals that the higher-ups, those who are the real but hidden leaders, should be secured. It is understood that the hirelings are many but that the brains of criminal activity are vested in a comparative few, and in order to strike a successful blow the authorities should get the guiding forces.

Crime has brought Chicago into much prominence and, in an effort to correct conditions, Judge Lyle of that city urged the police captains of the central district to bring in all known gangsters and professional crooks. He expected that it would be part of a real clean-up. His expectations were not realized. It doesn't appear that the police reported that the real leaders couldn't be found. They appeared in court, however, with 56 persons charged with drunkenness, gambling and disorderly conduct.

There were enough in the contingent to make quite an impression if numbers counted. It didn't impress the judge, that is, didn't impress him favorably, for he brought in the police captains themselves, pointed out that what they had done was the easiest kind of effort, that there were no real crooks, dangerous criminals, gangster leaders, among the nearly three score. They were the ones he wanted, the ones he knew the polic were aware of. He wanted to know where they were, but he got little satisfaction.

Such cases as that do not reflect favorably upon the Chicago police force. They tell their own story to the judge who tried to arouse the police to their duty to the public; they tell their own story to the public.

Gangster conditions and serious criminal activity are not going to be overcome when the police spend their time and efforts getting the minor breakers of the law and turn their backs upon those who are the leaders in the real important offenses against law and order. Perhaps the answer in Chicago is that conditions are the way they want them.

ILLINOIS' CAMPAIGN

While much interest has surrounded the choice of United States senator in Illinois from the time when it became apparent there was a contest for the republican nomination in the primary, the situation has continued to develop new turns and to attract greater attention.

Mrs. McCormick secured the nomination after a hard campaign and the expenditure of much money. That was the signal for a senatorial investigation which disclosed the sum spent and later developed in the disclosure that detectives were working for the committee and for Mrs. McCormick in counter efforts.

Though Mrs. McCormick entered the primary and secured her nomination as a dry, for which the drys claim partial credit, she has proclaimed that she will stand and work for whatever is demanded by the people of the state in the coming referendum concerning prohibition. This doesn't please the drys. They are immediately resentful. They claim that after their assistance has been obtained they have been thrown overboard. Their dislike takes the form of naming an opposition candidate, Mrs. Lottie H. O'Neill, who is a dry and who will run as a dry.

This creates a nice kettle of fish. With Mrs. McCormick alone in the field as a republican candidate, her prospects seemed good. All she had to contend with was a democrat. It is true that he is wet and will make his campaign as a wet, expecting no small amount of support from both parties because of that. While the McCormick willingness to abide by the referendum might have prevented some republicans from flopping to the other side, it appears to have antagonized the drys to the point where they are out to defeat Mrs. McCormick. They hope to do so by keeping the dry votes in a column by themselves. This may mean some losses for the democratic candidate, J. Hamilton Lewis, as well as for Mrs. McCormick, but the division in the ranks of the republicans promises the more serious result. It is a division which threatens just the same outcome as followed in Pennsylvania and New York, where the introduction of a dry candidate brought about the choice of a sopping wet senator. Evidently the democrats and the wets in Illinois have no objection to the entrance of a dry republican candidate.

DRS. BUTTERFIELD AND McCRACKEN

As the result of resignations, Connecticut receives two new educational leaders this month, Dr. Ernest W. Butterfield, who comes to this state from New Hampshire as the state commissioner of education, and Dr. C. C. McCracken, who begins his duties as president of the Connecticut Agricultural college at Storrs.

These are important positions and Connecticut expects much from the administrations of the new officials. They come to their places with a full understanding, it is to be supposed, of the work that was done by their predecessors, with the knowledge that anyone holding such places must expect to face various problems, and with the expectation of giving the state the service needed.

They have been chosen because they have made a success in their particular fields in other states and because of the belief that they will prove to be the men needed to deal with their respective duties in a manner that will be gratifying to Connecticut. It is to be hoped that their work will be of that high character that will lead to long service and increase their records of accomplishment. The expectations are that they will do their best to keep the educational system in state and agricultural college at the present high level with such improvements as can be shown to be needed. The situation in Connecticut doesn't stand in the way of betterments when it can be shown that they are desirable and necessary.

With a knowledge that they have an opportunity to do much for the state, it is expected that the years they are commencing will prove beneficial to all concerned.

BOULEVARD STOPS

Many automobile accidents occur at intersections. There is invariably the claim of right of way, but insisting upon right of way has too often been the cause of a fatality, or a bad smash, from which little real satisfaction can be gained.

On main thoroughfares there is a demand for the traffic to move along at a good pace. This doesn't necessarily mean speeding, but it is apparent that if the number of cars on such roads are going to be moved expeditiously they must be kept going at more than a snail's pace.

In order to do that, and with the idea of preventing many needless crashes, the idea has been adopted in many cities nad some states of requiring all machines entering such a thoroughfare to come to a full stop. It make no difference which way they are to turn. Signs are erected warning all drivers on the side streets to stop before going onto the main highway, or boulevard, as it is frequently termed.

This prevents cars from side streets dashing into a busy street without first seeing what the conditions are and whether there is an opportunity for them to get into the line of faster-moving vehicles. It brings those cars under control so that their drivers can guard against accidents. To swing quickly from a side road into the main highway at a fast clip, even though going to the right, isn't always a wise thing to do for those who are seeking safety, and especially at blind corners. The boulevard stop is expected to, and will, when properly respected, prevent the needless and numerous accidents at such points. It gives recognition to the main road where there is heavier and faster travel, but in so doing it eliminates that haphazard method of putting drivers into competition to see which will be successful in fighting out the senseless insistence upon the right of way regardless of what may happen.

EDITORIAL NOTES

This is the day when Maine points the way politically.

The rain without the noise and fireworks would have been just as welcome.

Some souvenir hunters seem to think that transatlantic flights are made for their special benefit.

If fairs are sure producers of rains, Eastern Connecticut ought to get liberal attention during the rest of the month.

Probably the democrats will attribute that food riot over in Hungary to the republican administration at Washington.

That flight to Dallas for $25,000 wouldn't have been so difficult if it hadn't been necessary to first make the crossing from Paris

THE YODELER

In the midst of the shipping room clatter, the thump of packages, the ejaculations of tobacco-mouthed drivers, something rebellious had blossomed. A blossom isn't supposed to be rebellious, but this one was.

Firm-figured, cheerful Anna had been boss of the department ever since it was nothing but a long table, a thick roll of brown paper and a ball of string. And the thing happened when she suddenly felt the crinkly daintiness of a lacy coverall apron being shipped to some winsome bride in a brick bungalow.

Up to the age of 31 she had manfully boxed and sent out lovable little pots and pans, luncheon sets of old rose, soft cushions of satin, with never an emotion entering her sound, sensible soul.

But the lacy dab of apron was too much. And just as she was wondering over the flutter of its blue ribbons, how perfect a lemon cream pie ought to turn out when it was administered to by an apron like that, the Yodeler appeared in the roofed-over alleyway outside. The Yodeler drove the express wagon, and was tall and weathery and smiling, like a piny breath of western out-of-doors.

"Whoa, there, Nancy; whoa there, I say."

Then a little interval as Nancy came to an impatient rest; the Yodeler clearing his strong throat; the familiar Swiss melody:

"Ooh, la ooh layee,
Ooh la, ooh lay,
Ooh la ooh lay."

It swelled up and down the cement-bound alley as if from a mountain top, bounded back and forth like a musical ball.

Soon the stiff red head of Tom appeared in the window. Down at the other window were the wriggling tips of Nancy's ears, in equine meditation.

"How was that, Anna?"

"Oh, pretty good," she acknowledged, and flushed because she couldn't help it. "You don't expect me to be always handing out pansies to you, do you?"

He leaned tranquilly on the sill while Nancy held the wagon in precise position below.

"What's the matter, girlie?" he asked dumbly. "Don't you like yodeling any more?"

"Of course I do."

"How much?"

"What's that got to do with it?"

"Oh, nothing, only I could improve a lot if you liked yodeling a lot."

A pause.

"What's that you got?" The playful little apron fluttered from her hands. She held it up, quickly conscious that its frilly fanciness was becoming to her own cheeks.

"Something to help one cook lemon cream pies better." He leaned excitedly across the sill.

"Say, can you cook lemon cream pie, Anna—honest-to-goodness lemon cream pie?" She admitted the ability.

"Heavens, girl, they're my favorite fruit. I've been searching for the original lemon cream pie plant since I was 16 and left mother's cook stove. They don't grow here in the city. The air of the eggs don't agree with them, I guess."

On and on he went. "Say, you're a pretty smart girl—good to look at, too."

With the sudden realization that Tom would go on and on without coming to a climax forever and the feel of the soft, ribbony apron in her fingers, courage stole up her spine.

"Wait a minute." She visited her lunch box, the big ball of twine the window where Nancy's ears twitched like agonized gray mice.

"Well, I guess it's time to be goin'," again commented Tom, just like he'd been commenting for years. But the "ing" ended in a startled yelp, sharp with reproach, as he clung frantically to the sill. "Whoa, there, Nancy! Whoa, there, I say! You wouldn't desert a pal, Nancy."

But Nancy found business further on.

Nor did Anna call for assistance, but in the big, capable heaves of muscled arms she dragged the anxious Tom to the floor. He rubbed his elbows and there were sadness and admiration in his eyes.

She thought he looked like nothing so much as a big, concerned boy with an inclination to run to mother for sympathy. Carefully, as though a major operation had just held the breaths of the surgical world, she bound up the scratches, bathed the bumps and kept up a soothing sirup of "There, there."

"Gosh, Anna, you'd be a darn handy person to have around the house. Honey, you're a wonder."

"Whose house?" And she liked the illumination in his face.

"Why—er—our house, of course."

"Excuse me," she said happily, and hurried to the window, where Nancy's ears, now much further advanced, vibrated. Snip, snip went something. Nancy whinnied gratefully. There was no doubt about it—the delicious fed apple was certainly easier to nibble at from the ground.—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

Associated Press Staff Writer

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7—The role of General Pershing as chairman of the Washington cathedral project which aims at completion of that structure by the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington is rather a striking one for a soldier.

Yet examining more deeply into the personalities around which the cathedral building movement turns you discover an even more typically American background for what has been accomplished.

There are other notable laymen in the group associated with Pershing, former Senator Pepper of Pennsylvania, for one. But the real driving power that has converted the dreams of 150 years into the splendid structure that already bulks grandly on Mount St. Albans lies deeper than that.

Business Men

Glance through your who's who for the name of Bratenahl—George Carl Fitch Bratenahl. You will find him a Clevelander by birth—that he was "clerk in warehouse, wholesale dry goods firm, New York, 1883-86;" that he was London representative of a New York manufacturing firm, 1888-93.

Not until 1896 did he turn to religious life, becoming a deacon in that year and a priest of St. Albans parish in 1898. For 14 years now he has been dean of Washington cathedral.

Now look up Bishop James Edward Freeman. If you are a radio listener you already will know him. His sonorous tones fill the air of a Sunday as they have since the infancy of broadcasting.

They are moderns, these two leading clergymen of the cathedral circle. And in the book you will find that the bishop spent 15 years in the legal and accounting departments of a grat railway system before he turned to religious life. Not until 1921 did he come to Washington and not until 1923 was he consecrated bishop.

Washington's Dream

There is much unwritten in the brief, colorless picture of his life that Dr Bratenahl has set down. He is a modest man, shunning publicity for himself, eagerly seeking it by every modern means for the sake of the cathedral propect.

Far back in his commercial life in London, he became inbued with a love for the tradition of the English high church that has been built by stone into the very structure of Washington cathedral.

So it falls out that a professional soldier, one of the world's great captains of battle in the hour of its greatest warfare, and two clergymen who had been successful business men and knew the American commercial doctrine of hustle and accomplishment are joined now to bring George Washington's dream of a national cathedral to realization.

Dieting, A Self-Inflicted Punishment

By I. W. Held, M. D., New York
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Today it is said that the female (this is true also of the male) often conforms to the dictates of the modiste. Everyone knows how futile it is to try to fit a "nine" foot to a "three" shoe. The Chinese women tried for centuries and succeeded, too, but who desires to suffer the miseries caused by those deformed, twisted feet? This may sound horrifying to the American woman, but what pinching did to the foot, dieting can very easily do to the body.

Kraus, one of the great medical scientists, once remarked, "There are three kinds of fat people—the enviable, the laughable and the pitiable." By enviable he indicated the individual so well proportioned that moderate additional weight is well carried; by laughable he meant the big eater, with a moon-like face, whose comic appearance induces laughter. By pitiable he meant the unfortunate person who is so stout, due to some disturbance of the organs of internal secretion, that he puffs at each step, and moves the onlooker to pity.

The pitiable type needs diet as does the laughable type, but when the enviable type restrict their diet for the sake of fashion, the medical profession protests, for such a procedure obstructs the path of preventive medicine. If dieting were done under competent medical supervision little harm would result, but the great majority of the enviable type listen to fadists or make up their own diet lists.

Dangerous disproportion usually characterizes the fed diet. Starch foods are converted into fat, true, but it must be remembered that this is the only kind of food, a certain proportion of which is directly converted into dynamic energy. Starchy foods keep stationary the sugar content of the blood and maintain glycogen in the liver for reserve, to say nothing of supplying the fuel for immediate activity. Yet they are the first to be reduced, even eliminated, by diet cults. Depriving the body of this fuel results in extreme exhaustion. Fainting spells, due to low sugar content of the blood, are not uncommon.

Fat is another article of food that is limited arbitrarily forgetting that the individual's resistance to infection is diminished with the diminution of fat intake, and should infection set in a very dangerous situation arises, threatening the dieter's very life. Proteins are generally increased with the reduction of fat and starches, with the result that the kidneys and blood vessels may be weakened to the point of disease.

Uncooked vegetables and raw fruits are taken in abundance, with the result that the digestive organs are overworked. Vitamins are present in cooked foods, provided they are not overcooked—that has been proven, so the argument there is weak. The importance of mineral and vitamin content of vegetables is not denied, but those who advocate extreme vegetarianism often do not base their arguments on actual scientific facts but on superficial impressions. These people are usually thin, they accomplish their daily routine with fair measure of success, but they do so by draining their vital physical reserve.

So, let the healthy individual continue his varied diet. Let him remember that foods should be equalized, otherwise the tissues suffer. Excess gain in weight should be a danger-signal and the victim should consult his doctor at once.

By rejecting the temptation to reduce, the man or woman allured by diet fads will avoid many dizzy spells, improve his or her mental activity, and escape the nervous strain that is the fate of those who try to run their bodies with insufficient fuel.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Impy Falls in Love

In anger there is seldom gain,
But often not a little pain.
—Old Mother Nature.

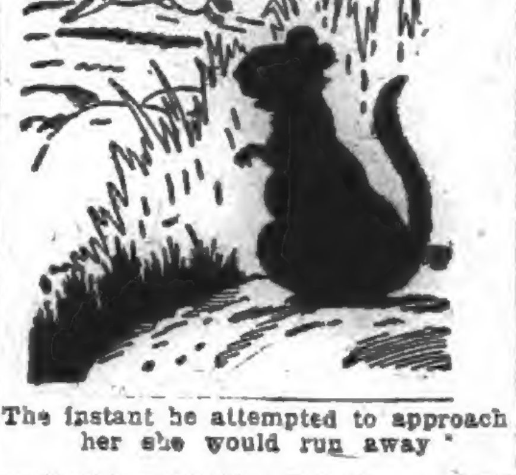
Impy the black Chipmunk didn't know what was the matter with him. Something was wrong, but he didn't know what. He lost his appetite. He had more dreams than usual; and curiously enough, these dreams were all about Miss Frisky, the pretty little Chipmunk whose acquaintance he had recently made. Impy would start out to get something to eat and the first thing he knew he would be looking for little Miss Frisky instead of for something to eat. Whenever he found her, he would be supremely happy. When he failed to find her, everything seemed wrong.

Now, little Miss Frisky was very shy. She was timid. Impy wasn't the least bit bashful, but little Miss Frisky was bashfulness itself. She never would let Impy come very near her. The instant he attempted to approach her, she would run away. Then Impy would fly into a terrible rage; that is, he would sometimes. He would become very, very angry. Other times he would be most forlorn and slowly go back home, looking as if he had lost his last friend.

Now, all such things have a meaning. Perhaps you know what that meaning is. In Impy's case it meant that he was in love with little Miss Frisky. He didn't know he was in love, but he was. If she came over near him and sat long enough to talk to him a few minutes, he was supremely happy. If she just flirted that pretty little tail of hers in a saucy manner and ran away, the day was spoiled for him. He looked for her the first thing in the morning and he looked for her the last thing before going to bed at night.

A great idea occurred to Impy. Yes, sir, a great idea occurred to Impy. He would invite little Miss Frisky to see his new home, of which he was so proud. So the next time Miss Frisky had courage enough to let him talk to her, he invited her to come to visit his new home. "It's a very fine home," said Impy. "I don't believe you've ever seen a nicer one. I made it all myself. I had no help at all. It's got a bedroom and two storerooms; and I don't believe you ever would find the doorway. You see, it's beautifully hidden."

"Yes, I know it is," said little Miss Frisky. "It is very nicely hidden. I couldn't have hidden it better myself."



The instant he attempted to approach her she would run away.

Impy opened his eyes wide. "What do you know about it?" he demanded.

"Oh, I found it long ago," replied little Miss Frisky in a most demure way.

You should have seen the look on Impy's face. "I don't believe it," said he.

Now, that wasn't at all polite on Impy's part. Little Miss Frisky looked offended. "I don't ask you to believe it," said she. "Facts are facts, whether you believe them or not. Those ferns over there could tell you whether or not I know where the entrance to your home is. I don't like people who don't believe what I tell them." With this she whirled and started away. Impy started after her.

"Please don't go!" he begged. "Please don't!"

Little Miss Frisky didn't so much as turn her head. She ran as only she could run and she disappeared as only she could disappear. When she disappeared, it was just as if jolly, round, bright Mr. Sun had hidden behind the clouds, as far as Impy was concerned. All the joy had gone out the day. You see, Impy was in love. He was very much in love.

CHILD TRAINING

Abiding By Consequences

Edith L. Reid

"Mother, I can't be in the pageant because I was late to practice today and missed one rehearsal last week," cried Elizabeth who had rushed into the house and now burst into tears.

"Who said so?" Mrs. Tilton inquired.

"Miss Merton. She said—it—was—the rule," sobbed Elizabeth.

"What made you late today?" her mother asked.

"I stopped—to look—at Lucy's new tricycle,—and I was riding it—and forgot—to go—to the church."

As the discussion went on, Mrs. Tilton recalled that Lucy had chosen last week to go on an all-day picnic, knowing she would miss the rehearsal. "Didn't you know about the rule for those in the pageant?" she asked.

"Yes," Lucy acknowledged, "but I thought I would only miss rehearsal; I didn't know I'd be late afterwards—but—I was!"

"And I have your costume more than half done. I was talking to Patsy's mother this morning, and we thought we would finish the costumes for you girls tonight."

"Patsy'll be in it and I won't," was Elizabeth's next thought, followed by, "Oh, Mother—do something—go and coax Miss Merton to let me be in the pageant anyway! Please do, Mother."

Mrs. Tilton looked very serious. The pageant was an important annual affair. All the lovely and specially talented little girls were to appear. She had felt proud to have her own little daughter chosen. But Elizabeth was of a careless disposition, and needed to be taught the meaning of consequences.

"No, I don't think I shall speak to Miss Merton about this. You see, if a pageant is to be a success it takes much time and effort, and the teachers and leaders must know which girls are dependable. There must be fixed rules to govern such undertakings."

At this decision the wails broke forth anew and lasted far past supper time. Elizabeth sulked for a day or two, but her mother, true to her convictions, finished the costume and presented it to Miss Merton for the use of the little girl who was to take Elizabeth's place.

The mother knew that there was a principle involved that was wider in scope than might appear on the surface. The great and relentless law of consequences dominated the situation. Since consequences are on hand to be reckoned with in all of life's activities, the wise course was to give a lesson in results although it was temporarily not pleasant.

Several months later, when two of Elizabeth's teachers told Mrs. Tilton that Elizabeth was much more prompt to act and more considerate of rules and suggestions than she had been in the past, and inquired about the course of discipline she had been following, the mother felt that she had won a worth while victory. Yet how many parents would have had her courage? An excuse, a patched-up plausible explanation of why Elizabeth had to miss rehearsal or be tardy, would have won a pardon in the case of as influential a family as hers, but how great would have been the loss to Elizabeth!

Moscow is to have a state museum showing the history of military defense in Russia from the fourteenth to the seventeenth centuries.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

Amos D. Bridge's Sons, Inc., Hazardville.

In 1875, Amos D. Bridge left the employ of the Hazard Powder company and started the varied enterprises which still bear the stamp of his name and business foresight. He first made powder kegs in the factory between Main and Oak streets in Hazardville that had been used by the Hazardville Bonnet company for making Shaker bonnets. On this spot the large brick gristmill, grain store and boxshop of the Amos D. Bridge's Sons now stands. From that time until his death in 1906 he expanded his operations with great success. Many of the elm trees lining its streets were set out by him, and in 1892 he organized the Hazardville Water Co., which supplies water of unusually high quality to both Hazardville and Scitico.

In 1895, Mr. Bridge built his first piece of road construction from Hazardville to Scitico, this being one of the first projects of the newly born Connecticut highway department. Since that time his organization has completed many hundred miles of highway work all over New England and New York state at present doing over $1,000,000 worth each year.

After the death of Mr. Bridge in 1906, his five sons and one nephew incorporated the business under the name of Amos D. Bridge's Sons, Inc., starting business January 1, 1907. At its Hazardville headquarters many varieties of wooden boxes and packing cases are manufactured for textile and other industries, and for the large number of tobacco growers and packers throughout the Connecticut Valley. Apple boxes and vegetable crates are made in large quantities, as well as silos sold to dairy farms far and near. Racks, pallets and other special items of brick yard equipment are made and sent throughout New England and to the Hudson river and New Jersey brick yards. In recent years many wooden reels of all types have been made for copper, wire and other companies, as well as other wooden specialties.

In 1911, the directors of Amos D. Bridge's Sons, Inc., formed the Mountain View Orchard company which now owns and operates three large farms on the Somers mountains with many acres of apple, peach and other fruit trees. Charles G. Billings, as manager, has developed this orchard to a high degree, the quality of the fruit being unsurpassed, as is shown by the extraordinary number and amount of prizes won by Mountain View fruit at many large shows, expositions and fairs each year. Mr. Billings recently served a term as president of the Connecticut Pomological society.

In 1923, after the death of William A. Bridge, its vice president and Allyn G. Bridge, its treasurer, the insurance business which the latter had bought from the estate of Franklin Smith in 1899, was taken over by Amos D. Bridge's Sons. The Bridge Insurance agency, now writes about $75,000 of premiums annually in the best and strongest companies.

For over two years this corporation has had the dealership in northern Hartford county for General Electric refrigerators and Merrill H. Bridge, in charge of this department has already sold nearly 200 in this territory. The first local air delivery of merchandise was made from Hartford to Enfield in September, 1929, for the Bridge concern, a G. E. refrigerator coming in a biplane.

Besides its manufacturing, building, retail and real estate departments, a large herd of over 50 pure-bred Holstein cattle, including many prize winners, is owned; part of the milk is retailed in Hazardville and part is wholesaled through the Connecticut Milk Producers' association. Large and varied farming operations are conducted and logging and wood cutting is done each winter.

The officers and directors of this corporation are: H. Stephen Bridge, president; David A. Bridge, vice president; Homer E. Bridge, secretary; Charles A. Bridge, treasurer; Amos D. Bridge, 2nd, assistant secretary; Robert P. Bridge, assistant treasurer

"Christian Leder, a Norwegian explorer, said Eskimos told they saw the balloon come from the sky and saw smoke and thunder come from strange sticks which "two devils" carried. One of the "devils" they killed with their arrows, but when the other made signs that he was not hostile, that he was hunting birds only, the tribesmen realized that they had killed a human being and fled in fear. They saw no more of the other man."

When this "sky-devil" leaped from out the skies,
Was it a wasted life to make men wise?
Or what cost Wisdom! was it one life more
To add a diamond grain to the scant store?
Is this the cost the march of light demands;
Blind Leader, answer— we are in thy hands!

Out of the darkness Wisdom thus replies:
Listen, our phantom world shall fade from sight
As fades "the Northern dawn" in blackest night,
Your mountains shall dissolve, your oceans rise
In their primeval vapors—lift your eyes
Still sails your pioneer, erect, elate
Above the tumult, still defying fate!
As he defied the ice, the polar sea,
So shall he dare outsail death's mystery;
And, spite of coward blood and futile fear,
Become for man your polar pioneer!

COVENTRY CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH REJOICES IN IMPROVED PROPERTY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 7.—Noting the completion of extensive improvements which have served to beautify the building to a gratifying degree, a rededicatory service was held at the First Congregational church of South Coventry today with special programmes for the morning worship at 10:45 and the evening service at 7:30 o'clock.

The pastor, Rev. Charles G. Johnson, was assisted by a group of church members and friends in making the 1930 rededication of the structure, which was built in 1849, a most impressive event. The pastor and Louis A. Kingsbury, chairman of the redecorations committee, received the plaudits of the many visitors in the splendid results achieved. The church, with a membership of 200, has long been a power for good in the community that was Nathan Hale's birthplace. Rev. Mr. Johnson has been in charge of the pastorate for the past ten years and in doing creditable work in his calling has endeared himself to the townspeople.

Morning Worship

The programme of the morning worship, during which the pastor gave the principal address on the subject, "God in the Beautiful," follows:

Organ prelude—"Fountain Revery," Fletcher, played by William Smith of Willimantic, organist and choir director.

Call to Worship—Minister: O Worship the Lord in the Beauty of Holiness. People: We praise Thee, O God, we acknowledge Thee to be the Lord. Minister: I was glad when they said unto me: Let me go into the House of the Lord. People: Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in Thy sight, O Lord, by Strength and my Redeemer.

Gloria Patri. Invocation in unison. Invocation by the minister. Answer by choir. Scripture lesson. Hymn 209—"The Church's One Foundation." Dedicatory prayer, Rev. James Atwood of North Coventry. Anthem—"Holy Art Thou," Handel. Notices. Offertory—"O For the Wings of a Dove," Mendelssohn. Quartette selections by New York city vocalists. Greetings from friends. Solo, by New York vocalist. Address, "God in the Beautiful," by Rev. Mr. Johnson. Benediction and choral amen. Postlude.

Evening Service

A colorful historical pageant depicting the arrival and early American life of the Pilgrims and an historical address by Curtis Dean were the features of the evening service. The pageant was executed by children of the church school and was under direction of Mrs. Agnes Armstrong. The complete programme: "All the World's Filled with Praise" (W. E. Judefind; "Sing of His Goodness" (W. E. Judefind); march and song, "Sunshine Days"; prayer, minister; Council—Indians and Early Settlers; Life in Pilgrim Time; song, "Our Exiled Fathers"; historical address, Curtis Dean; The Robin's Song, the beginners' class; remarks, minister; offering and song, "We Bring Our Offerings"; drill, Religious Education; song, "I Love Thy Church, O God," school and congregation; benediction.

The Church

The First Congregational church of Coventry was founded in 1712 and has continued to prosper throughout the years. The present edifice, constructed of wood, was erected in 1849, being the successor to other structures that had been destroyed either by age or fire. Rev. Henry B. Blake became the pastor in 1850 and remained for five years. The list of succeeding pastors to the present time follows: Louis E. Charpiot, 1859-1861; Samuel W. Brown, 1862-1864; Alpheus Winter, 1864-1868; John P. Hawley, 1869-1875; E. B. Huntington, 1875-1877; William D. Morton, 1877-18-?; J. H. B. Headley, 1881-1882; F. E. Jenkins, D.D., 1882-1886; A. J. Quick, 1887-1892; B. F. Perkins, 1892-1897; S. H. Barret, 1897-1899; Nestor Light, 1900-19-?; W. I. Eaton, 1918; H. C. Beebe, 1912-1920; Charles G. Johnson, 1920-1930.

Rev. Mr. Johnson was born in Norway, coming to this country at an early age. He was educated at Northwestern and Boston universities and assumed his first pastorate in Westport, Mass. Later he went to Scituate, R. I., and then left for an extended tour of Europe. Upon his return he lectured for a time and then became pastor at Cape Cod and East Jaffrey, N. H., leaving the latter place to accept a call to the church in Coventry. His wife is a granddaughter of the late John Conant, prominent as a silk manufacturer with the Holland Silk Co. They have two children.

Property Improvements

The First Congregational church of South Coventry, just recently beautified by modern tradesmen, is typical of those historic New England churches that bring to pretty little villages an atmosphere of serenity and good will prevailing in men of faith. The colors used in redecorating both the exterior and interior of the edifice are most appropriate. The outside has been painted a pure white that comes into pleasing contrast with the green of neighboring lawns and great trees. This color scheme was carried to the very top of the 150-foot spire which is surmounted by a gilt weathervane. New bases were constructed for the six stately Corinthian columns fronting the portico. There has also been a general improvement of the grounds, especially in the rear, where the sheds that once housed the dutiful family horses have been razed and the plot graded for the parking of the modern conveyance of church-goers—the automobile.

REV. CHARLES G. JOHNSON
Pastor

The interior walls have been finished in a light green tint with the columns and galleries done in old ivory. The pews and the gracefully winding staircases leading from the main corridor to the galleries are in old English oak with mahogany trims. A softly blending change in color has been carried out on the ceiling, which is painted a light cream. The pulpit carries an Italian marble effect, as do a set of handsomely carved wooden wings flanking it on either side. These wings were found by Mr. Johnson in the belfry some time ago and investigation revealed that at one time they had led to the staircase winding up to the pulpit which at that time occupied a high position over the nave. A pastor's ante-room has been constructed in a convenient location to the pulpit.

The huge blinds which had shaded the unpainted windows have been removed and replaced in the interior by a score of attractive mohair draperies of antique ivory. The quaint old electric lighting fixtures are solid black in color. This same color has been used in refinishing a fine sunburst cluster suspended from the ceiling. This cluster was presented to the church a number of years ago by the late Addison Kingsbury and his son, Louis A. Kingsbury. Yet more work remains to be done in the vestry in the basement and when the entire task is completed the edifice, which has a seating capacity of 650, will be one of the most attractive and imposing of Connecticut village churches.

Hale Family and the Church

The family of the patriot, Nathan Hale, were early members and staunch supporters of the First Congregational church of South Coventry. Richard Hale, father of the hero, was a deacon of the church, and it is with great pride that present members point to a tablet, a gift of George W. Seymour of New Haven, owner of the birthplace of Nathan Hale, which occupies a prominent position on the west wall. The tablet is directly opposite, a splendid bust photograph of the Nathan Hale statue at New Haven. It bears the following interesting inscription: "To the Glory of God and in Memory of Richard Hale, Esq., 1717-1812, sometime deacon of this church, justice of the peace, member of the general assembly. An active patriot throughout the War of Independence, and of Captain Nathan Hale, his son, who was born in this town, June 6, 1755, and resigned his life a sacrifice to his country's liberty at New York, Sept. 22, 1776, Etatis 22nd." The inscription closed with the stirring quotation by Richard Hale: "A son I set much by and he is gone." Mr. Seymour made the presentation of the tablet in 1924.

LIGHTNING FIRED SHED AT STARR STREET PLACE

At the height of the severe electrical storm that swept over Norwich early Sunday morning, lightning struck a small shed off Starr street, near Asylum street, causing estimated damage of $250. At 1:30 o'clock, Felix Worski, owner of the shed, saw the fire and pulled in box 315, Asylum and Starr streets. A few seconds after he pulled the box, Mr. Worski, impatiently waiting for the apparatus to appear, evidently thought something had gone wrong and so he tried to pull the box again before the alarm was through ringing. The result was somewhat of a mixup, as far as the alarm was concerned.

However, the first round had registered at the stations and the apparatus was on the way to the fire at the time. Engine No. 3 laid a line of hose and the flames were quickly squelched. In order to reach the fire the firemen found it necessary to lay 700 feet of hose across lots. The loss is covered by insurance.

Shortly after 3 o'clock the watchman at the Plaut-Cadden store, Main street, notified Central fire headquarters by telephone that he could detect the odor of smoke in the store and thought an investigation should be made. Deputy Chief D. J. Brennan went to the store and found that the smoke was coming from burning insulation in a fuse box. The insulation had evidently been set on fire by lightning or else the wires had become overheated through some defect in the wiring. There was no damage other than to the insulation.

CHURCHES GIVE FAREWELL TO REV. G. F. BAILEY

Sunday evening, at the Central Baptist church, the service was of a special character in an expression of farewell to Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey from the ministers and churches of the city as Rev. Mr. Bailey has resigned and concluded his pastorate at the First Congregational church, Norwich Town where he has been the pastor for ten years.

Seated upon the pulpit with Rev. Dr. David A. Pitt, pastor of the Central church, were Rev. C. H. Ricketts of Greeneville Congregational church, Rev. Joseph Cooper of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, Rev. P. A. Kilmister of First Baptist church, Rev. Alexander H. Abbott of United Congregational church, Rev. Dr. Theodore M. Shipherd of Park Congregational church, and Rev. A. N. Foster of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Universalist, with Rev. Mr. Bailey who gave the address of the evening. Archdeacon J. Eldred Brown of Trinity Episcopal church, was unavoidably detained from attending.

The hymns were announced by Rev. Mr. Kilmister, who presided, Rev. Dr. Pitt led in the responsive reading, Rev. Dr. Shipherd offered prayer, and there were two anthems by the church quartet.

In opening his address, Rev. M. Bailey spoke appreciatively of the service held in the city church, which was central in so many things besides its name, and went on to say that if a nine-mile radius were described from this point it would include 39 Protestant parishes, in 31 of which the pastors have changed since he came to Norwich. Only four, who were in pastorates when he first came here, are still serving the same churches, these being: Rev. Rickett, Brown, Abbott and W. J. Reynolds, the last named at Lisbon. Forty-six years ago, said the speaker, he first came trudging up the streets of Norwich, a country boy intending to get an education at the Norwich Free Academy and the cordial reception he received from Principal Hutchinson was one of the most encouraging things he ever knew, while a cherished memory is that of the keen, black-eyed Miss Miriam Blackman, who knew so well how to look through and help a young man in his hour of need.

That was the beginning of friendly thoughts for Norwich, said Rev. Mr. Bailey, and ten years ago he came back here, and he spoke of the wholesome and exhilirating fellowship he had enjoyed in the ministry here. Referring to his 38 years in the ministry, he spoke of the four pastorates he had filled, beginning with a crossroads country parish, then a shore parish with its changing congregations, then a pastorate in a vigorous business community and lastly the old suburban church of conservative ways, a simple trust in God, a wholesomeness and a kindly spirit that could be depended upon by the man who ministered to it.

The first text from which he ever preached a sermon, Rev. Mr. Bailey said, was "Except ye abide in Christ ye can do nothing," and in the passage of the years he had seen nothing to make him want to change his choice of his first text. He spoke of the goodly leadership enjoyed by the churches of Norwich, under men of initiative, intelligence, originality and of congenial spirit. Follow them, trust them and sustain them, he advised, and besought those who listened to him to pray for him as he would pray for them as he closes his ministry here.

The services in the church auditorium came to a close with the hymn, I Love Thy Kingdom Lord, and the congregation then went into the assembly hall where there was a brief social period and informal reception for Rev. Mr. Bailey, during which ice cream and wafers were served.

In concluding the service, Rev. Dr. Pitt called upon several pastors to speak. Rev. Mr. Ricketts, who is moderator of the New London Association of Congregational Churches and Ministers, spoke of Rev. Mr. Bailey's relation to that body of which he has been scribe and treasurer. Rev. Mr. Cooper, president of the Norwich Council of Religious Education, referred to Rev. Mr. Bailey's work as his predecessor in this office, and Rev. Mr. Foster, formerly chairman of the Norwich Ministers' association, referred to Rev. Mr. Bailey's relations to his co-workers in the ministry.

Rev. Mr. Abbott pronounced the concluding prayer and the benediction.

BARBER SHOP OWNER BEATEN AND ROBBED

BETHEL, Sept. 7—(AP)—Louis Ohweiler, proprietor of a barber shop here, was knocked unconscious late last night and robbed of $150 by two men near his home.

Ohweiler told police he was stopped by one robber who ordered him to put his hands up. When he refused, he said, he was struck from behind by another man and knocked unconscious. Upon regaining consciousness he found his money gone.

WOMAN DROWNED HERSELF; GARDNER SHOT HIMSELF

BOSTON, Sept. 7—(AP)—Mrs. Rose Alcazar, 34, of Boston, drowned herself in the Charles river today and Peter Asci, 30, a Concord gardener, shot himself on the bank a short distance away, but police decided tonight that the two suicides had nothing to do with each other.

The body of Mrs. Alcazar was not identified for several hours. She was the mother of three children and was known to be despondent because of quarrels with her husband. Asci was found dying from a bullet through his head. The revolver lay beside him.

COACH BRIGHAM ACCEPTS POSITION IN WORCESTER

Earle E. Brigham, successful baseball coach at the Academy for seven years and playground superintendent for six, has resigned both positions to become director of athletics of Worcester high schools, it was announced Sunday by Mr. Brigham. He will assum his new duties on October 1 when he and his wife and daughter, Barbara, will move to the Massachusetts city, of which city he is a native.

The position carries with it a salary of $3,100 a year and, according to the Worcester papers, the appointment was made to answer criticism that Worcester high school teams in recent years have not reached a standard proportionate to their size.

"We do not feel that athletics in the schools at present are fully organized, that teams have the necessary equipment, nor that the high schools have sufficient enthusiasm for athletics," said Supt. of Schools Young. "It will be Mr. Brigham's task to change all this."

If anyone can reorganize and build from the ground floor up it will be Mr. Brigham. When he came to the Academy in the fall of 1923, after two years of successful work at Plainfield high upon graduation from Conn. Aggies in 1921, the local school was in the athletic doldrums. Victories were few and far between in the sporting life of N. F. A.

It took Mr. Brigham just one year to get his system firmly established and then he began to produce results. The following record of Academy baseball teams speaks for itself, showing 107 victories against 27 defeats for Brigham in his seven-year tenure of office here. Here is the record:

Year	Won	Lost
1925	13	5
1926	16	3
1927	17	3
1928	19	1

His masterpiece was his 1928 team, which won the state championship easily, losing one game on a stiff 20-game schedule. Against Bulkeley, ancient Wildcat rival, he has competed 14 times and won eight and lost six. He had a run of seven straight from the second game in 1928 until 1930.

His boys, past and present, were as one Sunday when they heard news of his departure in wishing him continued success in his new post although sorry and some moved almost to the point of tears to think he is to go.

Brigham's work on the playgrounds has been just as successful. He has not only helped greatly to put the various playcenters at their present high standard but was also the guiding hand behind the now strong City league, which is sponsored by the recreation commission.

Nolle in Kearns Case

A nolle was entered in the city court Saturday morning in the case of Edward Kearns of Occum who had charges of drunken driving, evading responsibility and reckless driving against him because of an accident on Aug. 31 in Taftville. The case had been continued several times in court, but Saturday two witnesses were heard who testified they could not say Kearns was under the influence of liquor. His machine struck a telephone pole and ran onto the lawn of Sacred Heart church.

WEST'S HOME RUN IN EIGHT GIVES CITIZENS 2ND VICTORY OVER N. L. KACEYS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 7—Big Tony West's home run over the right field fence with one away in the eighth inning and the score tied gave the Polish Citizens of Norwich their second straight victory over the local Kaceys in the inter-city series between the champions of the two cities at Mercer field this afternoon and gave Boots Greene, young right hander, a well-earned 3 to 2 decision over Joe McInniss.

The fans who saw the first game in Norwich Labor day which the Cits won 2 to 1 thought they would never again see a battle its equal but today's clash fooled them for it again saw two evenly matched teams fight through nine innings of beautiful baseball and the game be decided only by the narrowest of margins.

Narrow margin or not, however, the Cits are content with their victory and plan to wind it up with a third straight next Saturday at the Academy campus in Norwich. The Cits are taking especial delight in tripping the once "unbeatable" Whaling City title-holders for reasons all their own.

Again today as was the case in Norwich, the Cits had to fight from behind to win. They handed the locals a pair of unearned runs in the fifth and sixth innings and went into the seventh leaving their followers with some slight misgivings as to their ability to get this one.

The Cits, however, are fighters and game to the core. Finn led off with a sharp single past third. Johnny Greene responded to the pleadings of the fans with a solid two base smack over Paddy Ryan's head in centerfield, the ball hitting the center field fence. It moved Mr. Fin around to third. Gaudette hit one to third and when McInniss made a low throw to the plate, Finn scored, Greene going to third, Boots Greene fanned and Gaudette was caught stealing for a double play but Cimikoski beat out a hit to short and Johnny Greene came in with the tieing run. Then, after Lamory had grounded out in the next inning along came Tony and applied the finishing touches.

The Kaceys had scored one in the fifth, first on an error by Finn which allowed Ham to reach first, a base on balls to Joe McInniss and when Ryan forced McInniss at second, Whiton, by nice base running kept coming all the way from second and scored when Lamory dropped Leo Jarvis' throw. In the sixth inning Barry and Coyle singled. Smith hit to second who made a forced play at second but missed a double at first and Barry raced home.

Both pitchers were in nice form. The Kaceys were the best hitters, 7 to 6, but Greene was strong with men on the paths, especially in the second when with two on and one out, he fanned the next two men. It gave Boots some measure of satisfaction for the defeats he suffered while pitching for the Academy against Bulkeley last spring. This game showed what Boots can do with some support.

The fielding features were provided by Johnny Greene, the rival shortstops and Tony West.

PLAINFIELD WINS OPENING GAME OF BIG SERIES

(Special to The Bulletin)

MOOSUP, Sept. 7—In the opening game of a five-game series to decide the championship of this section, Plainfield defeated Moosup here today by the score of 6 to 1 in one of the best games seen in Moosup for some years. Plainfield, led by Cotnoir and Ouillett, started in the first inning to hit the offerings of Eno and continued to touch him up throughout the game, piling up a 6-0 lead which stood until the ninth when Moosup saved itself from a blanking bee on a base on balls and two singles.

Clocher, on the mound for Plainfield, was master of the game at all times, holding the Moosup batters helpless until he eased up in the final inning when Moosup tallied. Clocher fanned six men.

The Plainfield team, as a whole, played good ball, making three fast double plays at opportune times to cut down whatever chances Moosup had to score. Eno, although hit hard, pitched well but did not receive the support that the Plainfield team gave Clocher. Stevens and Silva made five errors between them and this kept Eno in a hole the greater part of the game.

Gagnon and Raymond handled the game very well. There was a crowd of about 800 on hand. The second game will be played at the old ball grounds in Plainfield next Sunday. Score:

Ashland Accos Defeat Waterbury

The reenforced Ashland baseball team handed the Waterbury Colored Stars a 4 to 2 beating in a game played at Ashland park before a large crowd Sunday afternoon.

A pitching sensation in the person of De Young made his initial appearance for the Accos and all he did was to strike out 8 men in the three innings he appeared on the mound.

He is said to hail from New Jersey where he has played on several semi-pro teams.

The game itself was rather listless, but was pepped up by the comical antics of the visiting players.

Johnny Burda and Juber fielded brilliantly for Ashland, both making nice plays during the game, while the hitting honors went to Pete Sekula with two hits out of three tries.

Tony West had the better of Sackett in a close pitching battle at the State Hospital diamond Saturday afternoon and the Riverview club won 3 to 2, from the Tunix club of Winsted. West worked a slow ball effectively and was strong in the pinches. Sackett pitched a nice game and also featured with a home run in the third inning. The score:

The New London Fort Trumbull Stars defeated the Montville Independents in a hard fought game at the Gair diamond at Uncasville Sunday afternoon by a score of 4 to 1. DUWELLS BEAT ELKS IN JUNIOR LEAGUE TILT

In a hard-fought and exciting game, the Duwells defeated the Elks Saturday afternoon at the Academy campus. The score was 3 to 1, and by losing, the Elks were eliminated from the Junior league pennant race. The Duwells have now eight victories and one defeat, not counting their game with the Rotary club last Tuesday, the result of which still remains undecided. This game was protested by the Rotary, based on a misinterpretation of the rules, and is to be decided upon at a meeting to be held at the Duwell club tonight. If the league's executive board rules the game to be played over, the Rotary can tie the Duwells if they win, which will necessitate a play-off.

Coming back to Saturday's game, Stephanik, star Duwell pitcher, and Fuller of the Elks engaged in a pitching duel with Stephanik having the edge. The Elks gathered but four hits in seven frames off the Duwell pitcher, while Fuller was touched for six safeties. Fuller, however, led with strikeouts, fanning nine as against six for Stephanik.

Both teams scored one run in the first inning. The Duwells in the first half started off by Sadusky walking. Zavistosky forced him at second, Kos beat out a single to short, Zavistosky taking third. Slonsky grounded to third, Sadusky scoring on the play. DeBarros closed the inning with a strikeout.

The Elks tied things up in their half of the same frame on a walk to Ulewicz and singles by Carter and Dugas.

There was no further scoring until the fifth, when the Duwells pushed across two more runs, which proved enough to win the game. With one away, Sadusky got a life on Gallivan's error and went to second on the misplay. Zavistosky shot a long triple to the scoreboard in center, scoring Sadusky. Kos hit to Ulewicz and when the latter fumbled Kos was safe at first and Zavistosky scored. Slonsky forced Kos at second and DeBarros grounded to Ulewicz for the third out.

The Attawaugan baseball team evened the count with the Baltic Sacs by the score of 6 to 4 in a hard-fought game played at Sayles field, Baltic, Sunday. When a man gets too fresh he is spoiling for a fight.

The Old Timer was taking a rest on the club porch after a somewhat hectic round of golf and discussing the match in no uncertain terms. "You know," he confessed, "I cussed more in today's round than I have since the days I used to play with Dr. ...... up on the course off Rockwell street. Those were the days. On that course the bunkers were stonewalls and the rough was thickly tangled bramble patches."

"And speaking of cussing, I remember a three-some we used to have up there. There was Dr. ...., Rev. .... and myself and we used to play every Tuesday rain, shine or snow for 52 weeks in the year. As might be expected on a course such as that there were times when a few good healthy cuss words relieved the tension that is so detrimental to golf. Doc was one of those people who consider that the utterance of words like "damn" and "Hell" is a one-way ticket to the place that abounds in fire and brimstone. He would admonish me for the occasional utterance of these words saying that 'if I had no thought of my spiritual welfare I might at least consider the sensibilities of the Reverend.'"

"Well I curbed myself as well as I could and Doc went about never uttering a single cuss word. Then came a day when Doc was sure he was going to hang up a record. For a number of holes he was shooting par golf and it looked like he was going to turn in the best card of his career. He was cheerful and bubbling over with enthusiasm. All was right with the world as far as he was concerned. With but two holes to go and two fives needed to set a new mark Doc drove one of those weird drives, the ball coming to rest about three feet from the good high stone wall. Doc grunted but said nothing although he looked as though he could speak volumes.

"Grabbing an iron from his bag he addressed the ball. He swung and the ball spanked the wall and fell back just about where it was before. Doc got red in the face and his eyes snapped fire but he still had control of himself. Again he addressed the ball and the result was the same. I thought Doc would drop dead of apoplexy. A third time with determination in his face he swung at the ball which hopped against the stone wall and bounced back at his feet. Then the floodgates of speech were opened and from those lips that had admonished me for an occasional "damn" or two tumbled the most choice collection of cuss words I ever heard. 'I'll knock this G.... D.... Blankety blank ball over this G.... D.... Blankety Blank stonewall if it takes me all the rest of the day,' gritted the Doctor between his teeth. The reverend had turned his back when the stampede of cuss words broke loose but I could see his shoulders shaking just the same. As for me I just laughed right out loud. Then taking a nice easy swing the doctor sent the ball sailing over the wall straight to the green and dead to the pin.

"Doc never said a word about cussing from that day on,' concluded the Old Timer.

LEFTY DUGAS RECALLED FROM WICHITA CLUB TO PLAY WITH PITTSBURGH PIRATES

Norwich has its second big league ball player since the days of Danny Murphy and Hobe Ferris! For Lefty Dugas, native son, who went out to the Western league and, playing right field for Wichita, led that loop in batting in his first year, was recalled by the Pittsburgh Pirates Saturday and joined the club as they met the Chicago Cubs in Chicago Sunday afternoon. Lefty did not break into the lineup but expects to before the week is over.

The other local big leaguer of recent years was Eddie Murray, who played with the Browns for a spell about eight years ago.

Word of Lefty's rise to the big top reached the city in the form of a telegram to Jim Troland, former Taftville A. A. manager, and the man who has had quite a bit to do with Dugas' rise in baseball. It stated that Lefty would be in Boston the latter part of the week when the Pirates tackle the Braves, and Lefty asked Jim Troland to meet him there. Troland, along with Charley Lamory, Polish Citizens catcher, Middy Dugas, Lefty's cousin, and a few others, will make the trip. It is expected that other fans will also be there to greet the local boy, who has certainly made good in a big way. Others will tune in on Stations WNAC or WEAN and hear Fred Hoey tell about the games in the hope that Lefty will get a chance during the series.

Lefty finished the Western league season with a mark of .370, well ahead of his nearest contender for the clouting crown. Lefty was second in home runs, walloping out 26 to 33 for Keyes of Des Moines.

Dugas is the second of the Wichita players to be sent for by the Pirates. The other was Charley Wood, the sensational southpaw pitcher, who within a couple of weeks after arrival turned in a pair of shutout victories. Let's hope Lefty makes good in as fine a manner.

Norwich is proud of Dugas.

BRAVES AND PHILLIES SPLIT EVEN IN DOUBLE HEADER

BOSTON, Sept. 7—(AP)—The Braves and Phillies split a double header of pitchers' battles here, today. After Philadelphia won the first game, 1 to 0, the Braves took the second 2 to 1.

The reverse was true in the second game, when Ray Benge outpitched Socks Seibold. Benge allowed only five hits to Seibold's eight but his bases on balls to Rabbit Maranville and Buster Chatham were fatal, for each of these diminutive infielders scored. The score:

The steady pitching of Dazzy Vance and spectacular fielding support accorded the Brooklyn star were features of the game. The Giants used Pruett, Heving and Hubbell, but conclusive rallies in the first and seventh innings settled the issue.

YANKS END HOME STAND BY DIVIDING WITH RED SOX

NEW YORK, Sept. 7—(AP)—The Yankees ended their final home stand by splitting a double header with Boston, losing the first 5 to 3 and winning the second 5 to 2.

Roy Sherid pitched a nice game in the night cap till the eighth, when two hits drove him to cover. Pipgras retired the Red Sox in order in the last two frames.

Ed Durham pitched well enough, but the Yanks hit him timely. Lou Gehrig hitting his 39th homer, besides a single and two bases on balls. Three lightning double plays helped the Yanks out of many tight places.

In the opener Milton Gaston pitched as well as batted the Red Sox to victory. He allowed the Yankees but 4 hits but his 7 bases on balls, three of which came in the ninth prevented him from finishing, MacFayden retiring the last two atters.

The Yanks scored first, but the Sox tied it up, only to lose the lead, but came back later to even matters. Gaston's single sent the winning runs over in the seventh. The Yanks scored in the ninth but MacFayden came to the rescue to save the game for the Sox. The score:

BILLINGS MEETS YOUNG IN DANIELSON AMATEURS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Sept. 7—Gene Billings, the Goodyear boy who flashed a sensational comeback a fortnight ago after nearly three years of absence from the ring, will again be seen in action at the North street Arena next Wednesday evening, this time facing Eddie Young of Worcester. Since his last bout Billings has been training steadily, and he will step into the ring Wednesday night weighing close to 148 pounds, several pounds lighter than he was a week or so ago. Young rates a tough customer up Massachusetts way, and should be able to give Billings such a battle as fans go miles to see. The Billings-Young affair is to be the star bout of the evening.

For the semi-final, Matchmaker Peloquin has framed up another buzzer, for it brings together Patsy Flynn that pile-driving hitter out of Worcester who has won two decisions here from Russell Martin of Webster, and Jack LeBrun of Warwick, R. I. Now this LeBrun is a lumberjack, and is just the type of fighter to extend Flynn to the limit. When LeBrun hits them on the button something usually drops, and he is not at all bashful about piling in and shooting them through fast and furious. These boys will battle at around 137 pounds.

Kid Tourney, Webster, in the 112 pound class, comes back to the wars on this card to meet Bruno Batazo of Worcester. Both of these boys are tournament prize-winners in central Massachusetts territory. Tourney cleaned up at Webster last week, and Batazo won a tournament for 112 pounders up at Fitchburg, two weeks ago. They are evenly matched, and both good performers.

Other bouts on this card will bring Ray Landry of Danielson and Leo Paradise of Moosup together. Landry has won five out of his last six starts here. This will be a grudge fight, for Landry, some time back, put Paradise away with a one-round knockout.

Anselm Bernier will meet Young Plasse of Webster. Plasse beat Bernier in the latter's first ring battle. It'll not be so easy for the Webster boy this time.

Kid Casavant of Webster will battle Al Levesque of Warwick. William Leo, K. H. S. student, will meet Gene Moore of Webster, and Kid Brouillard of Danielson will take on Danny Roy of Worcester. Still another bout will be between Young Rabidoux of Danielson and Billy Edwards of Warwick.

In case it should rain Wednesday evening, the bouts will be held the following night.

NORWICH GOLFERS SWAMP THREAD CITY CLUB

The Norwich Golf club team swamped the Willimantic Country club team 53 to 18 in the first of the two annual matches between the clubs at the Norwich course Saturday afternoon. LOCAL MILLERS HAVE THIRD LOW GOLF SCORE

HARTFORD, Sept. 7— (AP) —The sporty Wethersfield Country club course gave the central Connecticut pro golfers and their amateur partners a stiff test today, not one of a field of 52 equalling par figures and three combinations breaking it with their best ball.

Scores:

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

Lon Chaney, man of a thousand faces, made his talking picture debut only after he was convinced that the microphone could do as wonderful things with his voice as the screen did with his various characterizations. "The Unholy Three" now playing at the Palace theatre, where it will be shown through Wednesday of this week, is the last work which the famous actor left the motion picture world.

The story of "The Unholy Three" concerns the nefarious activities of three side-show performers of a circus. A ventriloquist, a giant and a midget who find that pick-pocketing does not bring them sufficient gain, hit upon the robbing of homes in which the ventriloquist's voice allows him to impersonate an old woman who is the owner of a pet shop.

Dramatic spots in "The Unholy Three" include the fight in the pet shop after the ventriloquist attempts to pick the pocket of an on-looker, the mysterious murder on Christmas eve, the scene in which the embittered midget lets loose an orang-outang so that he can attack the side-show giant, and the final scene in the court room where Chaney reveals himself by tearing off the old woman's disguise.

No one will want to miss "The Unholy Three," which was the late Chaney's most remarkable production and the last in which motion picture patrons will ever see and hear this great actor. Audiences all over have clamored to see this picture and the patrons of Norwich should avail themselves of the opportunity.

Broadway Theatre

Cliff (Ukulele Ike) Edwards just can't seem to land a role that will fit into some portion of his personal experiences like most acting folk.

In making his movie debut in "So This Is College," Cliff was a glee club leader. Then he went into "Marianne" as a doughboy and switched to a cowboy part in "Montana Moon." Now he's in "Good News," gone collegiate as a football trainer.

"I've never seen the inside of a college, don't know which end of a gun to shoot out of and don't know which part of a horse the bridle goes on," he wailed. "Can't somebody be satisfied to let me be just another ukulele player?"

Bessie Love has the leading role in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of the famous stage hit which is playing at Warner's Broadway.

Included in the supporting cast are Mary Lawlor, Stanley Smith, Dorothy McNulty, Lola Lane, Gus Shy, Frank McGlynn, Billy Taft and Tom Jackson. Edgar MacGregor and Nick Grinde co-directed.

FURTHER SIGNS OF BUSINESS AND TRADE RECOVERY NOTED LAST WEEK

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—(AP)—Further signs of business and trade recovery were apparent in the records of the past week, but the improvement was less uniform than that noted in the preceding fortnight, and the outlines were blurred a little by the influences of the Labor day holiday.

Slight improvement was again reported in the steel industry. "Iron Age" estimated that ingot production had reached 55 per cent of capacity, the third gain of one per cent in three weeks. The mercantile reviews were a little more cheerful over wholesale and retail trade activity. Reports on building operations and electric power consumption, however, were disappointing.

Freight car loadings, as reported for the third week of August, showed another substantial gain. It was notable in the third week, however, that most of the improvement was in the movement of coal.

Particularly cheering has been evidences of greater stability in commodity prices. The past week saw further depression in wheat for new lows for the period since 1914, but there was a marked rally. Indices for August showed little change.

SEVEN ARE IN NEW LONDON HOSPITAL AFTER THREE-CAR CRASH AT NIANTIC

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 7—A three-cornered automobile crash occurred in Niantic Saturday night, and seven men and women were injured, all being taken to Lawrence-Memorial hospital, suffering from lacerations and bruises. Two of the cars were wrecked and the third, which was but slightly damaged went on the flats of Niantic river after crashing through a highway fence. In the hospital are Carmine Cutillo, Hope street, Niantic; Mrs. Frank Power, 556 Bank street, this city; Clyde Crouch and wife and Mary and Josephine Gada, Black Point and Mrs. James Buck, Pennsylvania avenue, Niantic. They will be detained at the hospital but a few days. Cutillo will be arrested on a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor as soon as his condition is such as to permit his discharge and will be tried in the East Lyme justice court. Cutillo was driving westerly near the Niantic river flats and hit the auto driven by Frank Power, which was proceeding in the opposite direction. The collision caused Power's car to go to the opposite side of the highway where it crashed head-on with Buck's auto. Cutillo's car plunged to the opposite side of the road and crashing through the fence, landed in the flats at the edge of the river.

Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh is having his vacation of two weeks.

Roland Gruthier, 8, and James Sarayusa, 6, both of Montville, are missing from their homes and the police of this city have been requested to make a search for the boys.

An automobile owned by Wilfred Coture, 127 Norwood avenue, was stolen from its parking place on Huntington street this morning.

A laborer with a long police court record for intoxication, was arrested Saturday midnight by Patrolman Joseph Sullivan charged with vagrancy, being found asleep in a doorway of a store on Howard street.

TAMPERED WITH STORE DOOR, STOCK NOT DISTURBED

The entrance of the Economy store, 157 Bank street, was discovered open at an early hour this morning and with the padlock removed, but none of the stock is reported missing. The store was closed about 11 o'clock Saturday night and the manager is positive that he secured the entrance with the padlock. There is no signs of the lock having been removed by force, which would leave the only other theory of its missing as having been taken by means of a duplicate key. The stock was not even disturbed.

KEARNEY SPEEDED AWAY, GORDON HUMPHREY CHARGES

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 7—William Kearney, 26 West High street, was arrested Saturday night by Sergeant John Courtney and Motorcycle Officer Clarence Martin charged with evasion of responsibility and was released upon furnishing a surety on his bond of $200 for his appearance in the police court tomorrow. Kearney was driving on Church street earlier in the evening and when crossing Huntington street, the auto crashed against a car driven by Gordon Humphrey, stationed at the submarine base and in which were three companions. The latter auto was overturned. Kearney, instead of stopping to render assistance, speeded away and disappeared through Broad street. When Humphrey reported the accident at police headquarters and furnished the numbers of the markers of the colliding auto, Kearney was quickly arrested.

Missing Brother Located

Miss Mabel Eccleston, 69 West 130th street, New York, requested the New London police Saturday to assist her in ascertaining the whereabouts of her brother, Luther Eccleston, who was discharged from the navy some time ago, but who has not communicated with his relatives. It was learned that Eccleston is married and is residing at 8 Home street. This information was forwarded to Eccleston's sister.

Two Norwich Drivers Tagged

The police were busy Saturday night enforcing the traffic laws and as a result drivers ordered to present themselves in the police court Monday included: Harry Libby, 28 Fanning avenue, Norwich and Clara H. Amburn, 36 Dunham street, Norwich, parking overtime on State street; Royal V. Carley, 93 Terrace avenue, Bridgeport, parking overtime on Pearl street; Charles R. Alling, 42 Lee avenue, parking overtime on State street; Michael J. Finnegan, 30 Grantcourt, Norwich, parking on Pearl street, Margaret Downes, 253 Ridgefield street, Bridgeport, parking on Pearl street.

The home of Jacques Hugh, colored, of 16 High street, was raided Saturday night by Motorcycle Officer Clarence Martin. Hugh was arrested on a charge of being the proprietor of a house of assignation and Clotilda Mason, also colored, was arrested charged with being a frequenter. Hugh furnished a surety on his bond of $200 for appearance in the police court Monday and the young woman furnished a surety on her bond of $50 to assure her court presentation.

Mrs. George Andrews and infant daughter, 295 Colman street; Mrs. Raymond Potter and infant daughter, 27 Waller court; Mrs. James Hewitt and infant son, Mystic; June, James and Yvonne Lord, Essex; Mrs. Melville Brown, 25 Huntington street; Miss Eva Ryley, Noank; Miss Elsa Richter, Mystic, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged Saturday.

The window in the front entrance of the store, 308 Main street, was discovered broken last night by Patrolman John Clifford. The break indicated that it had been done with a stone.

Mrs. K. L. Miller, Harrison street, reported to the police Friday night that a man had been in the vicinity of her residence three times during the afternoon and evening and from his actions it would appear that he was demented. An officer was sent to the Miller home, but the man had disappeared and did not return.

FUNERAL

Harold T. Norton

Funeral services for Harold T. Norton were held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at his residence, Dimmock road, Waterford, and were attended by a large gathering of mourners. Rev. Harry P. Brothwell, pastor of Waterford Baptist church, conducted the services. The body was forwarded to Bath, Me., where burial was in Oak Grove cemetery today.

OBITUARY

Eugene B. Scribner

Eugene B. Scribner, 63, died suddenly Friday night at his home, 34 Brainard street. He is survived by his widow and six children, Mrs. John Morgan, Poquonoc Bridge; Mrs. Margaret Lowe, New Haven; Mrs. Leroy Lamb, South Manchester; Milton Scribner, Detroit; Raymond V., Waterford, and Willard Scribner, of this city. Mr. Scribner had not been employed for three years and during that time he had been a sufferer with a weakened heart. Friday night, while ascending a flight of stairs, he suffered an attack and collapsed, expiring before medical aid could be summoned. He was a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Methodist Episcopal church. Prior to the heart affliction causing the retirement of Mr. Scribner, he was employed as locomotive engineer. Mr. Scribner was born in Maine, but had resided in New London many years.

Dr. Thomas A. Woodruff, 44 Mott avenue, and John Wilbur, Ocean avenue, returned to this city Friday, having spent five weeks in Europe.

Miss Sheila Crane, Niantic, and Miss Genevieve Main, Noank, patients at Home Memorial hospital, were discharged Saturday.

A deed transferring title in the Aimetti Shoppe, 86 State street, from Josephine Aimetti to her husband, Otto Aimetti, has been filed for record at the office of the city clerk.

Joseph Silva has had property of John J. and Sylvia L. Silva on Goddard street attached in the sum of $400. Papers effecting the attachment were filed for record Saturday at the office of the city clerk.

The New England Furniture Exchange, Louis Siff, proprietor, has filed a trade name with the city clerk.

Vacates Appeal—Pays Fine

Patrolman Patrick Sheehan Saturday vacated the appeal taken in the police court a week ago when he was fined $50 and costs on a charge of breach of the peace in attacking and beating two submarine base sailors, Leland Flanagan and Frank Storey. At the time of the imposition of the penalty, which was the result of the attack two weeks ago, Sheehan said that he would fight the case in the court of common pleas, but since then he has changed his mind as was evidenced by the payment of the fine and costs. City Manager William A. Holt will now have Sheehan tried on charges of conduct unbecoming an officer and will undoubtedly give the officer a hearing during next week.

Watterson Hearing Today

Patrolman Harry Watterson, who was suspended Wednesday by Captain Charles A. Pinney on charges of violation of the police rules and regulations, will be given a hearing Monday morning at 9 o'clock by City Manager William A. Holt, in the office of that official in the municipal building. The witnesses in the case will probably be no other than the accused officer and Captain Pinney and Desk Sergeant William T. Babcock, although there is a possibility that Watterson may produce a witness or two. Watterson was given permission to take Monday and Tuesday, last, off duty, and he was supposed to report for patrol duty last Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. At 11:30 o'clock Watterson telephoned police headquarters that he was in New York and that he was to enter a hospital for the removal of his tonsils. He went to police headquarters Friday and was then formally acquainted with the fact that he had been suspended. It is a violation of the police rules and regulations for an officer to leave the city without permission and his failure to report for duty when supposed to do so is another infraction of the rules.

Clyde R. Smith, Jr.

As noted in Saturday's Bulletin, Clyde R. Smith, Jr., 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde R. Smith, 11 Fowler court, died at W. W. Backus hospital, Norwich, Friday night, as a result of extensive injuries including a fractured skull, internal injuries, compound fracture of the left leg, and burns, the automobile in which he was riding colliding with a car driven by Charles Sternberg, 120 Riverview avenue, this city, on the Jewett City road, Thursday morning. Besides his parents, he is survived by four sisters, Mrs. E. W. Thompson, Hudson, Mass.; Mrs. R. J. Hancock, New London; Mrs. John MacDonald, Astoria, L. I., and Miss Callie Smith, of this city; also by two brothers, Duncan R. Smith and Escott O. Smith, also of New London. He was a student and was en route to New London from Hudson, where he had been making a brief visit with his sister, when he sustained the fatal injuries.

FINED CONNELLY AND FARRAH $600 OF PROFITS

Joseph Connelly and Habab Farrah, occupants of the building, 205 Main street, were in the police court Saturday morning, each charged with violation of the liquor law. Connelly, the proprietor of a club room, was fined $400 and costs, and Farrah, proprietor of a pool room, drew a fine of $200 and costs.

Nine men and women were presented on charges of violation of the city zoning law, in converting premises used or owned by the accused at Ocean Beach for commercial purposes. The charges, however, were nolled. The accused were arrested a month ago and, with Labor day ending the season at he beach, the men and women have returned to their homes in Hartford. The men and women arrested and the charges against them were: M. Zimmer, 21 Midway place, soliciting for patrons of bathhouses and dispensing soda water; Abraham Newman, 22 Midway place, charging 50 cents for parking automobiles; Nathan Rosen, 3 Westerly place, selling candy and soda water; Mrs. P. Lubchansky, 9 Boardwalk, soliciting patrons of bathhouses; Esau Stanley, 19 Easterly place, providing pony for hire and charging for the parking of automobiles; Mrs. Neistat, 18 Boardwalk, charging for parking of automobiles; Harry Zankow, 8 Midway place, and Mrs. Levy, 16 Boardwalk, charging for parking of automobiles.

Milton Gordon, New York, charged with blocking traffic on State street Friday, failed to appear in court and his bond of $7 was forfeited.

Edward Gilchrist, 56 Spring Garden avenue, Norwich, charged with reckless driving, had his case continued another week. Frank Botchis, 7, of 78 Woodbridge street, struck by the Gilchrist truck has been a patient at Lawrence-Memorial hospital since the accident and will recover.

Joseph and Mary Zielinski, husband and wife, were arrested at their home this evening by Patrolmen Frank Philopena and George Bruhns, charged with breach of the peace and intoxication, were locked up and will be in court tomorrow.

PARENTS SHOULD DIRECT TRAINING OF THEIR CHILDREN

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7—Mrs. Ray Lyman Wilbur, wife of the secretary of the interior is a classmate of Mrs. Hoover. They were in college together and have always been warm friends since those earlier days. The women of the Hoover cabinet are all friendly with each other yet offer quite a wide variety in taste, preference and personal appearance. They are all attractive, well bred and well poised, but represent various types.

Mrs. Wilbur is extremely domestic. She believes the woman with a family should make her first and chief interest in life, the care and welfare of that family, especially the younger children. Not so long ago when asked about the girls of today, and their different up-bringing from the girls of a generation ago, Mrs. Wilbur said she recognized the wide difference, but found the girls of today "worth while, and capable of rising to an emergency and meeting it with success". She added it is a good thing to have girls study world wide problems, and remarked that even when she was a girl in California, interest was beginning to develop in having girls know more about what was going on in the world, than had been the custom only a few years before. That forecasted the progress which now has materialized. And Mrs. Wilbur endorses it.

Mrs. Wilbur believes every girl, no matter how long the purse of her parents may be, should learn some profession or trade, and be able to earn her own living, if it ever became necessary. Mrs. Wilbur also feels the education and training, which broaden the mind will equip a girl to meet almost any situation that develops.

Parental Supervision

One strong point Mrs. Wilbur makes regarding family life, is that the parents should have intimate and personal supervision of training the children. She feels it all right to have a nurse or governess attend to certain of the details of daily life, but the trend of education that marks the molding of character should not be trusted to any one. It should rest personally in the hands of the father and mother. "The responsibility of the child's future rests with its parents. I cannot think it wise to turn over that responsibility to any one else". Mrs. Wilbur takes great interest in all educational work pertaining to children.

She has three sons and two daughters. The daughters are both married and live out in California, which is their native state. Of the sons, two are practicing physicians, and the youngest is still in school.

Mrs. Wilbur is extremely attractive. She has beautiful white hair, and dark blue eyes, and she has lived much abroad, and is cosmopolitan in taste, although she is, or rather, has reared her children in a simple American fashion.

Not Out of Politics

Mrs. Louise Dodson, the recently resigned director of the woman's division of the republican national committee wants it understood she is not "out of politics" although she does not desire to immediately assume a position of responsibility. Mrs. Dodson made an excellent and popular official. She had had much political experience. A county position, that of recorder, was won by her out in Des Moines, Iowa, as her first political office. She campaigned lustily for that office, speaking in halls, livery stables, garages, and on street corners. And she won the election hands down. Mrs. Dodson says all she wants now is a chance to go canoeing—and picks out the Susquehanna as her choice. Then she proposes to take a real rest up in her country home in Pennsylvania which boasts the somewhat unusual name of Shickshinny.

Mrs. Dodson believes more votes are won from women, over the tea cups than by stiff necked political speeches. "That's a part of the feminine psychology" she says. "But women will quickly realize the power they possess politically and will more and more enter into it, but till that time comes we must work along lines that will attract those not politically minded."

FALL BRINGS SMART MODES FOR COLLEGE MISS

NEW YORK, Sept. 7—(AP)—The college girl who starts in quest of her B. A. this fall also will hope to acquire a B. S. (Bachelor of Style), for the clothes she wears to class will be as important to her as the marks she receives.

The campus girl of 1930-31 may not wear her winter woolens underneath her frock as her grandmother did, but they will be an outstanding note of her class and playtime wardrobe, nevertheless.

Wool frocks, three-piece suits and coats will be the things she generally dons when she trips to class on frosty mornings or to football games on sunny afternoons.

Her campus coat may be of monotone tweed in green, brown, black or blue, collared with raccoon and lined with dyed rabbit, say style experts of John Wanamaker's which has opened a department catering to needs of the college girl.

Or she may choose a belted model of alpaca pile, lined with gay polka dot crepe.

If she can have a fur coat, too, to wear to afternoon teas and such, it may be a semi-fitted model of krimmer or lapin, belted or not as she likes. It may be short, reaching the hipline, or long enough to cover her skirt, according to her figure and her taste.

The frocks she wears to class and games may be chosen from models galore.

There are knitted jumper frocks, combining white and brown, green or blue in a zig-zag weave; tweed knits topped by double breasted boleros and finished with patent leather belts; three piece jersey suits with a neat little pointed vest of contrasting color; or a wool tunic frock with a leather belt.

When she wants to dress up a bit for that afternoon date she is apt to choose a frock of wool lace, a new fabric of the winter season, or one of the colorful silk crepes.

There are crepes of green, red, brown and blue, plain or shot with silver and gold threads, and designed with tunics, boleros and the fitted waistline and modified flaring skirt that mark the winter mode.

A black crepe frock, lightened by touches of white at the neck and cuffs, will not come amiss in her afternoon wardrobe.

The campus girl's hat generally will be small and chic, worn pulled back to make a frame for her face and tilted a bit to one side to reveal her softly-waved hair.

It may be a beret of velvet or felt to match or harmonize with her coat, or a close-fitting felt rolled up a bit in front and finished side or back with a jaunty feather.

COATS LEAD OWN STYLE LIVES NOW

PARIS, Sept. 7—(AP)—Coats now have style lives of their own.

They are no longer just part of the ensemble, although they may have matching dresses or skirts.

One way to tell this winter's coat from a last year's model is by its sleeves.

Another is by its hemline, usually two o rthree inches shorter than the dress, provided the dress is made of the same material or is the same color.

Only on dressy afternoon coats or for bona fide travel or sport coats is the hemline the same length as the hem of the dress.

General utility coats tend to be straight and belted with a generous wrapover on the skirt. Fur collars are varied, with detachable fur cravats much favored. Shawl collars seem to favor lynx over fox this winter.

Sport coats are mostly straight and there are many belted backs and polo-coat collars with or without flat fur.

Dress-up coats are more flared. For the more formal coats Paris prefers dull black above everything and concentrates on interesting sleeve treatments.

Triple cap sleeves, bishop sleeves which gather into a fur cuff, melon-shaped foresleeves of fur and separate fur sleeves which reach to the elbow are all new and used by important designers.

TRIAL MARRIAGE IDEA OLD STUFF IN DESERT

RABAT, Morocco, Sept. 7—(AP)—Trial marriage, offered as a modern idea of few years ago, is standard practice in many desert tribes.

It is dying out under the French plan of civilization here, or, at least, the authorities think it is.

Recently, however, a pair which hadn't heard of modern law contracted to live together for a year and a half. Each retained the right to leave at will, carrying off whatever goods were contributed to the household.

Wed in Church Grandfather Built

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7—(AP)—A church built by the bride's grandfather 40 years ago at Sorrento, Me., was used for the wedding of Ellen Cox Wing of New York to Thomas Stone, second secretary of the Canadian legation.

Tie-On Travel Rugs

PARIS, Sept. 7—(AP)—Ocean going coats made by a travel inclined dressmaker here, have accompanying travel rugs cut with strings at the top for tying around the waist as a preventive of drafts.

Women Earns Degree At 56

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 7—(AP)—Not to be outdone by her husband, two sons and a daughter-in-law, all of whom hold college degrees, Mrs Grace Roth Johnson sought one herself, and was graduated this summer from the University of Kentucky.

Frivolous Marabou

PARIS, Sept. 7—(AP)—Evening coats lined with marabou and dance dresses with wide bands of marabou around the bottom are among the unusual models shown for winter.

Marabou is not taken very seriously as a triming material, because of its fragile and frivolous character. Paris dressmakers have not used as much of it as they do now, for many seasons.

Eton Collars of Sealskin

PARIS, Sept. 7—(AP)—Eton collars of fur are now on youthful suits.

One such model of green mixture has a black Alaska seal collar and a cloth bow of the suit material.

Small turnover collars of the suit fabric are also used, particularly by a dresmaker who likes basque bodice suit coats buttoned al the way up the front.

Champagne Chiffon

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7—(AP)—A bridal dress of champagne chiffon and lace was chosen by Miss Ethel Eleanor Mowatt when she became the bride of James Laurence Darby.

It was made with tight-fitting bodice and long, full skirt. Her large picture hat, her moire slippers and silk mitts were all champagne color.

White Crepe Dance Frock

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7—(AP)—White and green seems a popular combination theese days for both afternoon and evening frocks.

Miss Anne Dangerfield wore a dress of white crepe embroidered in small green figures at a recent dance. It was tight fitting and plain with long skirt.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Fresh spinach should always be washed thoroughly, first in hot water and then in cold.

To keep the kitchen range as bright as when new, rub it frequently with a coft cloth moistened with vaseline.

The creaking of a door can be stopped immediately by rubbing the hinges thoroughly with a piece of soap.

When steel pens are clogged with ink, dip them in a strong solution of ammonia water. This softens the ink and it can be easily wiped off.

Add a pinch of soda to the tomato soup before the milk is stirred in to prevent curdling.

Use linoleum instead of oilcloth to cover the kitchen and laundry tables. It will last much longer and will be far more satisfactory in every way.

Ink spots on the fingers may be instantly removed with a little ammonia. Rinse the hands after washing in clear water.

Wash your egg-beater as soon as you are through with it. Let the water from the faucet run over the metal part, then dry with a dish towel.

When you pour water off boiled potatoes save it and use it instead of water or milk for your bread, sponge or coffee cake. If the water is salted you will require a little less salt when mixing dough.

Watermelons and cantaloupes do not keep well after they are cut, but if carefully covered with waxed paper and set on ice they can be served a second time.

To make liquid glue, fill a glass jar with broken glue of the best quality, then fill the jar with acetic acid, or vinegar. Set the jar in hot water for a few hours until the glue melts. The result will be an excellent glue, always ready.

CANDIED PEEL

Candied orange, grapefruit or other peel is delicious served in hot tea, and gives a fine flavor to rice pudding and adds something to a cold beverage.

THREE-IN-ONE

For breakfast, no bread can be better than rolls made with little round bits of bread dough, baked three together in one compartment of the muffin tins. They look like shamrocks and are crusty and delicious.

TO CLEAN THE SINK

When the sink becomes greasy, especially one of those made of glazed ware, put a little kerosene oil on a piece of flannel and rub. It will remove all grease, saving much time and labor. The smell of kerosene can easily be removed with hot water and soap and then flushing with cold water. At the same time this will also clean the pipes.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

The best time to water-wave the hair is the day after a shampoo.

For rough skin on the arms and legs apply some bland oil with sufficient frequency to keep the skin soft and pliable.

A shingle-cap should always be worn over permanently waved hair while a hot bath is being taken. The heat tends to spoil the waves. The same precaution should be taken with water-waved hair.

Brush your eyebrows with an eyebrow brush morning and night. It promotes their gloss and trains them into shape. If they need to be darkened use an eyebrow pencil.

SOMETHING DIFFERENT.

Very different from the usual negligee is one that ha a long slip made of silk very finely pleated and warranted to stay in pleat, no matter how carelessly the slip is handled and packed. Over it is worn a coat of the same material stenciled in gold or silver. The colors are exquisite.

FOR THE BATH

A bath set that is well liked consists of a box containing dusting-powder, a large wooden bowl holding the finest English soap, and a stiff brush with which to apply the soap.

Frequently when hanging a picture, nails are driven into the wall either too high or too low. To avoid this, mark the spot for the nail with a lead pencil having first held the picture in position to determine the height at which it should be hung.

JEWELED KEY RINGS.

Jewelery suited to business needs is among the new styles launched in Paris for the coming season.

The jeweled key ring is one of the features of Rue de la Paix jewel shops these days. It is made of silver, in simple design, with a pointed clasp set with semi-precious stones. The designer claims that its purpose is to make an ornament out of a practical accessory, so that any woman may take her key ring out of her bag or carry it in her hands without marring the smartness of her costume.

Another type of key holder, designed for feminine handbags, is a little case something like a cigarette box or a powder vanity. It is fashioned of gold or silver and is fitted on the inside with linked hooks to hold several keys.

DICTATES OF FASHION.

When lingerie details are omitted on fall frocks, there is usually a collar and cuff of self fabric.

Flat crepes and dull fabrics have the call at the moment, but satins are expected to be revived for fall.

Metals are playing extremely important roles in multicolor effects and in less colorful but nevertheless rich treatments.

Velvet is important in groups of afternoon and evening dresses, with both Lyon and transparent types accepted.

Laces trim many afternoon and evening gowns of chiffon, shallow scalloped finishes in various widths sometimes being combined in one model.

FOUR SEAM SLIPS.

It requires four seams instead of two to make the better-fitting costume slips hug the form without a wrinkle. For none other than the princess line looks well beneath the current frocks. Crepe de chine still is the favored summer medium.

DOTTED FABRICS IN VOGUE

For the semi-tailored fall dress there will be no woolen smarter than a fine hairline checked crepe in, say, light brown and white. Sometimes rayon threads in wavy lines pick up the lustre.

Shadow dots of white on autumn colors will continue the dotted pattern into fall and winter costumes.

SPORTS PURSES

A severe squared envelope of yellow pique has three block initials note in sports purses. Quite unique in the realm of bags is one of checked or plaided linen, also an envelope with a plain gingham strap. Beach and shopping bags of glazed chintz take the pouch form with strap handles of the same cotton. Such bags are carried with fabric gloves or slip-ons in pastel shades.

NEWEST HEMLINES

Evening hemlines have had such difficulty in deciding whether to be long or short that at last they have reached a compromise and many of them are shorter in front and long in back. This is a decidedly new feature of evening fashions after a summer of long-all-around frocks. New fashions of back fulness and intricate drapery make this hemline a logical development of the new mode.

LAUNDRY HINTS

Light, airy clothes closets equipped with hangers for dresses and coats and racks for shoes and hats lengthen the life of clothes and save time and expense in caring for them.

Iodine stains will usually wash out when the garment is laundered. However, should they prove obstinate, peroxide will remove the stains from white materials.

Avoid overloading the washing machine. If the clothes can move about freely during washing the cleansing action is more effective and there is less strain on the machine.

Sometimes an ironing board warps but you can correct that defect easily. Just turn your board around to the other side for a while. You will find that it will soon straighten itself out, and remain straight. You can then use it on either side.

HANG THE YARDSTICK

There will be no annoying questions of "who's got the yardstick or ruler?" if you have a case for either measuring stick hanging in some convenient place. Cut two four-inch strips of colorful oilcloth a yard in length and sew the edges together with narrow rickrack braid, leaving an opening at the top through which to slip the sticks. Attach a ring at the top for hanging purposes.

MATCHING WALL TO WOODWORK

The heavenly twins of every room are walls and woodwork. We can not select or decorate one without considering the other if we are to have a harmonious home. They may be painted in contrasting or harmonizing colors or decorated in the same color but in any case their finish must be coordinated to make an appropriate background for the furnishings.

TO EVERY DOG HIS DAY

A much-traveled dog would appreciate the gift of a black box that contains brushes, combs, play bones, soap, etc., in fact, everything to keep him well groomed.

WHAT'S IN A NAME!

A good deal when it is on a handkerchief, for then the chances of recovering it are much greater. A round box that contains a dozen different colored handkerchiefs with the owner's first name embroidered in the corner will fill a long-felt want in the accessory wardrobe of the well dressed woman.

HOME CHEER

If your budget can possibly stand the strain, purchase a half dozen spring flowers once or twice a year for the table at meal time and for the living room at other times. There is nothing like the fragrance of a few spring blooms.

SOUVENIR SPOONS.

If you belong to an age when souvenir spoons came home from every trip you took, get them out of the attic and shine them up. They are in vogue again. The older and quainter the better.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Marguerite P. Drew, a school teacher, is Hawaii's first and only woman pilot.

A motorcycle club for women has been organized in Adelaide, South Australia.

Princess Juliana of Holland is only 22 years of age and has an income of $80,000 a year.

Native women in the Philippines are making a great success of social welfare, club and professional work. There are women lawyers, dentists, pharmacists, and doctors in Manila.

Women won their 62-year fight to be ordained ministers of the Gospel in the Presbytery of New York, thus giving them the same privilege there accorded them by many other Presbyteries in the United States

SHELF SET

You can get an unusual pantry shelf set by saving your coffee and cocoa cans and painting them in modernistic and original design.

USE RUG TO KNEEL ON

An old rug or a piece of carpet doubled twice and tacked to a small piece of board gives excellent protection from dampness when kneeling in the garden.

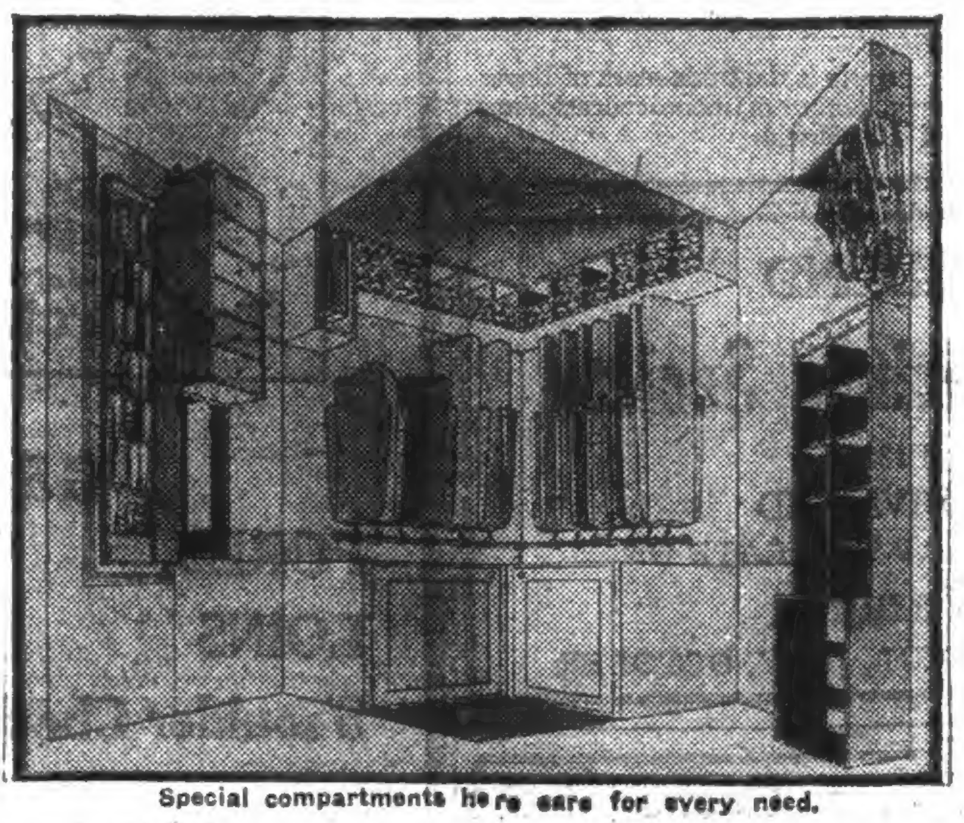
RECIPES

Cake Filling: Heat slowly to the boiling point without stirring three-fourths cup of sugar and four tablespoons of milk, then boil slowly for five minutes. Cut into small pieces one-fourth pound of marshmallows and melt in a double boiler. Add two tablespoons of hot water and cook until the mixture is smooth, then add hot sirup gradually and stir constantly. Beat until cool enough to spread. Add one teaspoon of vanilla.

Coffee-Nut Dessert: Pound in a mortar one-fourth pound of blanched almonds and moisten them with a little rose water. Place in a large bowl and pour over one quart of freshly made strong black coffee, flavored with a few drops of almond extract, and add one cup of powdered sugar. Cover closely. When cold stir in four tablespoons of rich milk or cream. Add a pinch of powdered mace and allspice. Strain through cheesecloth. Place in the refrigerator to ripen. This will take about two hours. Serve in sherbet glasses, adding to each serving one tablespoon of finely cracked ice and one teaspoon of whipped cream.

Cocoanut fruit salad: Serves six. One-half cup coccanut, two bananas, three oranges, lettuce and mayonnaise. Spread the cocoanut in a flat pan and brown delicately in a moderate oven. Peel bananas and scrape with a silver knife. Peel oranges, remove all white membrane and slice. Arrange two or three slices on lettuce on individual plates. Cut bananas in two lengthwise, then across. Roll each portion in browned cocoanut and place on orange slices. If any cocoanut remains, sprinkle it over oranges. Serve with mayonnaise.

MODERN CLOSET IS PERFECTLY ARRANGED



Special compartments here care for every need.

By Elsie Drew Kennedy

From venture into the business world the modern woman has learned a valuable lesson in efficiency.

In closets especially has she put her newly-won knowledge to work, in the interest of time and space saving arrangements. No longer are they gloomy storerooms, but roomy, well lighted and perfectly arranged.

From an architect's drawing we have visualized this closet, for exampie, just as it might appear after the master and mistress of the house have taken possession. Along two walls are the clothes poles, providing ample room for large wardrobes.

Directly under them are two layers of convenient little boxes to hold shoes, slippers, and at the man's side on the end a tall box has been constructed to hold riding or fishing boots.

Over the clothes poles are two huge cupboards made of light-weight panels of cedar—perfect for blankets and the overflow from the linen closet.

Of course, a cupboard within a door is neither necessary nor practical in the home, but the space on the back of the door may be used for a narrow cupboard-like arrangement with racks for ties, belts or other accessories.

Next to the door on this third wall there is room for a chest of drawers for underthings. The mirror, over the chest, is a serviceable addition.

On the fourth wall a group of shelves has been constructed, divided into sections to hold hats and these also may be equipped with doors.

Even the space under the shelves has been filled with a box in which umbrellas rub shoulders with golf clubs and walking sticks.

Not a little of the efficiency of the closet is due to its color scheme. The strong light in the center of the ceiling is reflected into every corner by light cream walls. The cupboard, shelves and chest of drawers are painted light beige, and accents of vivid orange are introduced in the mirror frame and in the inside of the shoe and hat boxes.

Guiding Your Child

By Mrs. Agnes Lyne

Children fail at school for all sorts of reasons, but seldom only because they have been badly taught.

The average school curriculum has been worked out for the average intelligence. The average child can absorb the school material he is required to learn without too much difficulty, even if his teacher is far from skillful.

Children fail at school because they have not been properly placed or because they have been required to carry a schedule too heavy for their mental abilities.

The increasing use of mental tests which help to guage the academic load a child is fit to carry gradually is making this type of failure a thing of the past.

Another cause of school failure is a home background which causes the child to feel chronically inferior and unhapy. The emotional problems of parents often are reflected in their children's poor school grades.

Parents who are over-ambitious to have their child excel sometimes bring so much pressure to bear upon him that he becomes worried, over-anxious and unable to learn at all.

Sometimes the excessive desire to be popular with his classmates causes a child to make frantic efforts to win their approval at the expense of proper interest in his work.

Past failures tend to make for failures in the future. The child who has failed or done poor work last year is apt to start this one in a discouraged and unhappy frame of mind. This inhibits his learning ability and make him forget quickly the things which have been drilled into his head.

It is important, therefore, that a child who already has failed once be given every sort of help and friendly encouragement so his confidence in himself may be restored.

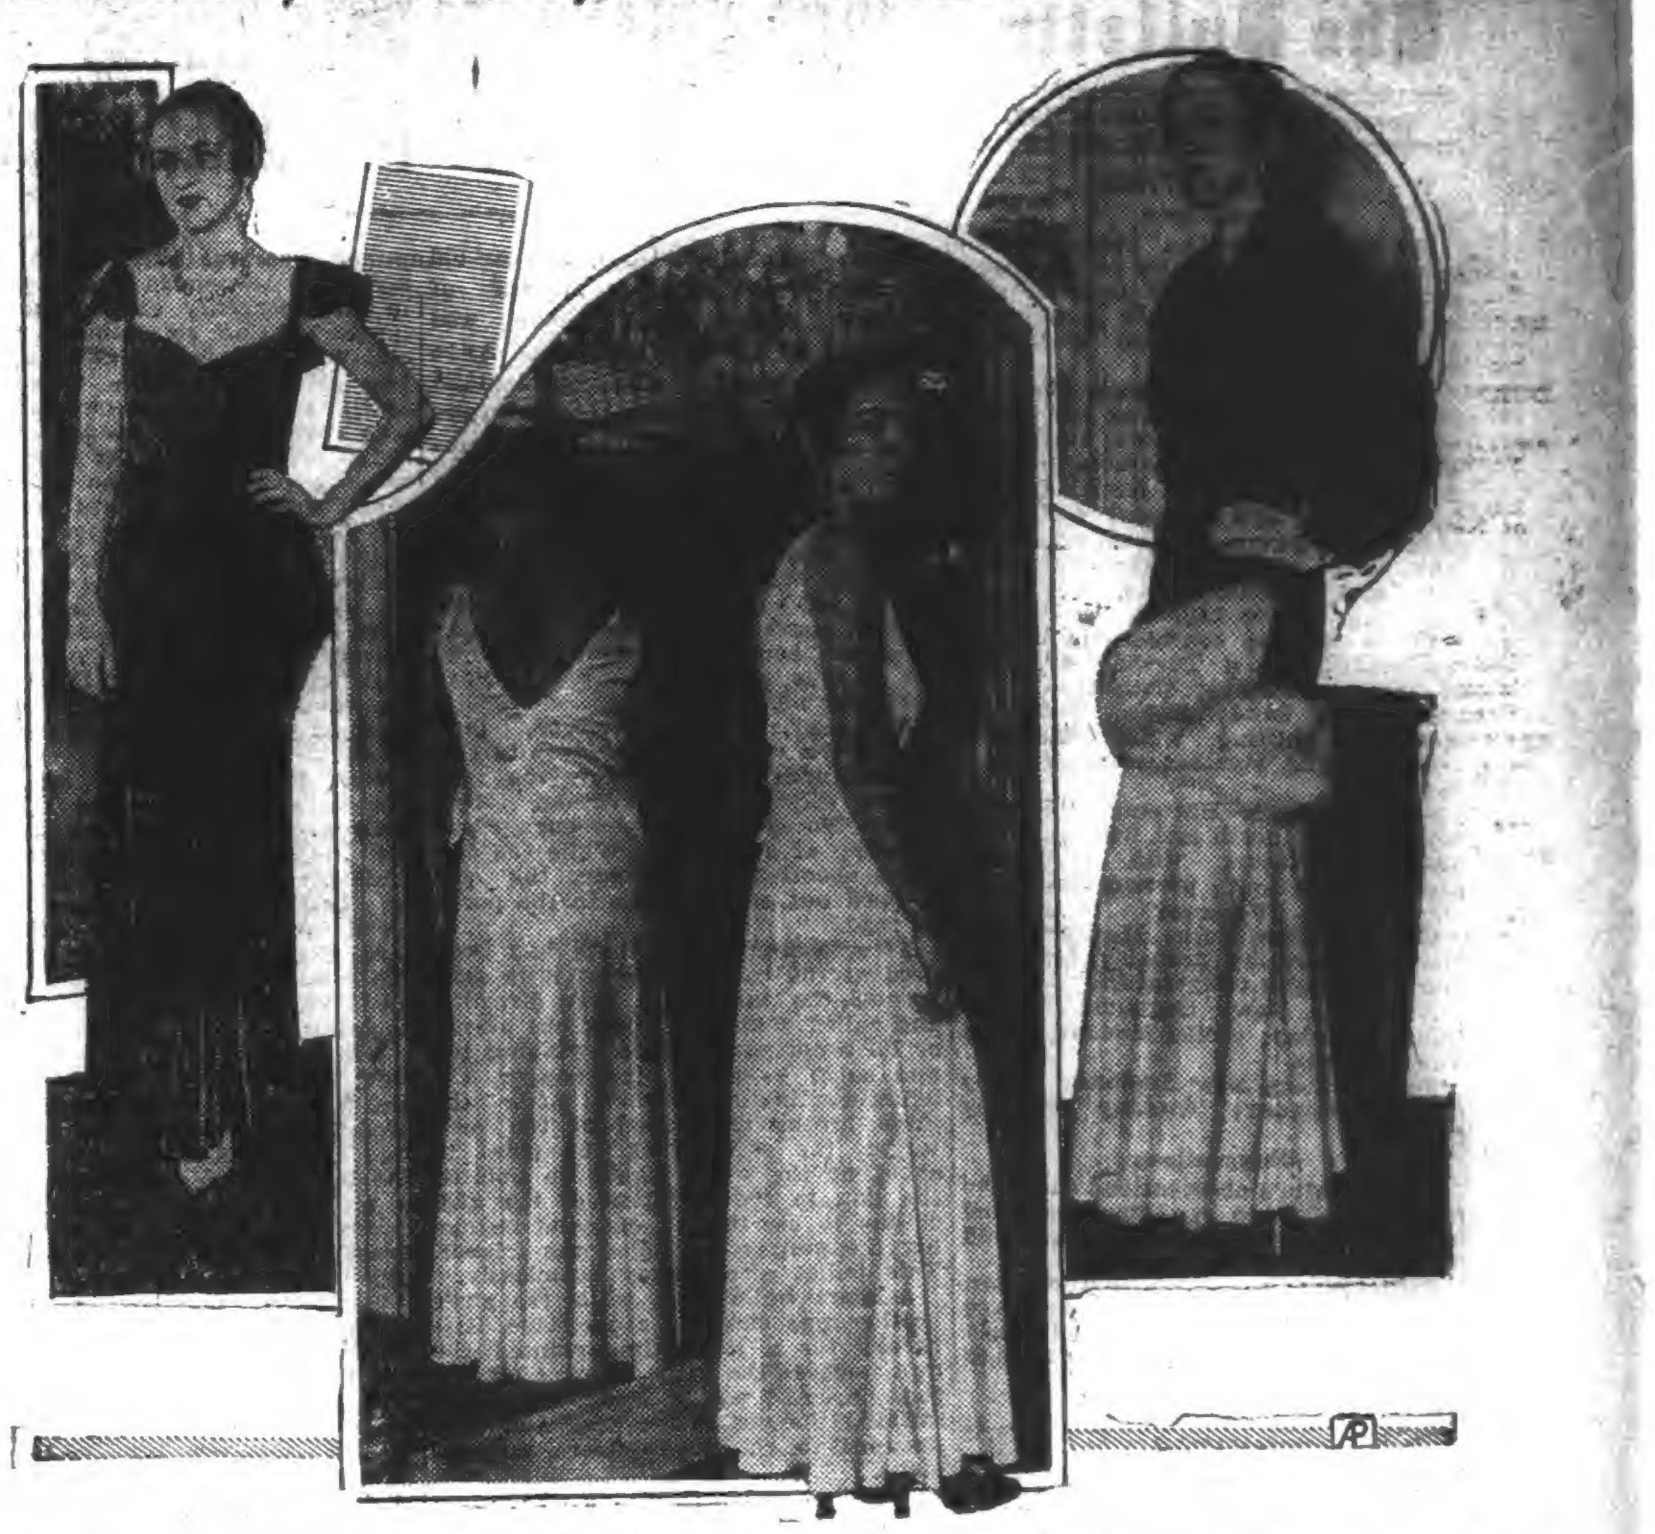
COEDS WILL SWIRL IN COLORFUL ROMANTIC GOWNS AS SATINS, VELVETS, SOFT WHITE FUR LEND ALLURE



Many a campus heart will thump out of time when these frocks for college girls brighten the dance floor. Vivid in color and line is the gown (left) of red transparent velvet. It is accompanied by silver slippers rhinestone necklace and earrings. The formal white satin gown (center), with its low decollette, is accompanied by a necklace of rubies and rhinestones, red satin slippers with jeweled buckles. Right is a wrap for it of black transparent velvet in the new length, banded with white fur and lined with white satin.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7—(AP)—When the college girl steps fraternity danceward this winter, her heart may be as light as her heels, for the frocks she wears will be the most romantic and colorful she has donned in several seasons.

Satins and velvets and soft white fur, revealing her shoulders and swirling about her insteps will give her a sophistication she has longed for.

And the accessories she may choose—turquoise, crystal and onyx necklaces and such—will add much to her allure.

"Satins promise to be one of the most popular frocks when the campus girl goes dancing," says Mrs. Bettie Frear of Best & Co.

"In soft pinks, greens and blues, rather fitted at the waist and hips and flaring about the knees, they will be seen at many a fraternity party.

"Many of them are marked by intricate seamings at the waistline, others are finished by peplums about the hips. The decolletage, generally dipping farther in the back than in front, is lower than last year."

White satin promises to be more popular with the college girl than the ivory tones affected by those a little older, fashion leaders predict.

Crepe frocks in white and soft colors will also be a definite part of the college evening mode, they say, as will velvet and lace. The latter, although smart, will be less worn by the college girl than by her older sister.

Black velvet coats, long or short, trimmed in white fox or hair are expected to be one of the most popular of evening coats for the younger girl.

For those who want colors there are blue and green velvets, generally collared and cuffed in white hair, and for the girl who must have a fur evening wrap, there is a jaunty little hip-length model in white lapin.

The Sunday night frock, filling the gap between afternoon and evening dresses, will be a definite part of the college girl's wardrobe, according to Best's.

Black and brown velvets trimmed in ecru lace and often short sleeved promise to be popular for restaurant wear, and colored crepes flecked with metal threads will also be part of the Sunday night mode.

SAILOR'S PLAY WITH RIFLE BRINGS FATALITY TO LAUREL HILL GIRL

Marie Rosabelle Woods, 16-year-old Norwich Free Academy student of No. 277 Laurel Hill avenue and daughter of William and Mrs. Anna (Wieman) Woods, was accidentally shot and killed late Saturday afternoon at her home by Stephen Kubrosky, 20, U. S. N., stationed at the submarine base. Kubrosky disappeared after firing the fatal shot from a .22 calibre rifle which he had been using in target shooting in a yard adjacent to the girl's home. The shooting occurred about 4:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon and the girl died at the W. W. Backus hospital about 11 o'clock Saturday night.

Kubrosky, it is understood, purchased the rifle and cartridges in this city Saturday and went to the yard where, with the girl's brother, Robert Bruce Woods, 14, he was engaged in shooting at a tin can. While the two were shooting at the can, the girl stepped out of her home to the porch to read.

After a number of shots had been fired at the can, Kubrosky, it is said, pointed the gun in the girl's direction and called, jokingly: "Look out Marie, or I'll shoot you." Then swinging the gun aside he pulled the trigger, the bullet landing harmlessly. After the girl's brother had fired at the can target, the sailor took the rifle to shoot at the can. Again he pointed the gun in the direction of the girl, calling to her to look out, and swinging the gun aside, pulled the trigger. This bullet also landed harmlessly.

A short while later, while the girl's brother was cleaning a cartridge, Kubrosky for a third time pointed the gun towards the girl. It went off before he could pull it aside, the bullet striking the girl in the head and she dropped to the porch floor unconscious.

A nurse, who lives in the same house and who went to the girl's side, exclaimed, "She is dead" and Kubrosky, who it is said, heard the nurse's remark disappeared and had not been located up to Sunday night.

Dr. C. C. Gildersleeve, medical examiner, who was hurriedly called, immediately responded and at once sent in an emergency call for the ambulance. Within six minutes after the call was sent in the ambulance, with two attendants and a nurse arrived at the house and the unconscious girl was rushed to the hospital.

The seriousness of her condition was at once realized and an x-ray taken. Four surgeons went into consultation but because of the jagged course the bullet took through the brain, it was an inoperable case. The bullet entered the left eye, tore through to the nose, crushing the bones and tore through the brain, lodging about an inch from the back of the head. The immediate cause of death was pressure on the breathing center of the brain.

Mrs. Harold Botham accompanied the girl's mother on the trip to the hospital in the ambulance and Mrs. Ida Richardson also rendered valued assistance to the grief-stricken mother. Undertaker C. A. Gager was given charge of the body. Officers Clifford Crary and Patrick Murphy, of the local police department, conducted an investigation shortly after the shooting.

Miss Woods was born in Norwich, Aug. 24, 1914, the daughter of William and Mrs. Anna (Wieman) Woods. She graduated from the local schools and was a member of the class of 1932 at the Norwich Free Academy. She was a member of the Central Baptist church and also a member of Norwich grange, No. 172, Patrons of Husbandry.

Surviving are her parents, one brother, Robert Bruce Woods, 14; one sister, June Larose Woods, 18, and the following uncles and aunts: Carl Wieman of Hallville, August Wieman of Norwich Town, Fred Wieman of Mystic, Rudolph Wieman of New Hampshire and Paul Wieman, Ide Wieman and Mrs. Walter Ink, all of Rodando Beach, California.

Miss Woods was popular with her many friends and acquaintances and was universally liked. The sympathy of all is extended the bereaved family in their great loss.

STATE DELEGATION PARADED AT V. F. W. NAT'L. ENCAMPMENT

The delegates to the 31st national encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, representing Gold Star post, No. 1724, returned to Willimantic Saturday. The encampment, which was held in Baltimore, Md., was reported as the biggest event in the history of the organization. The delegates experienced some difficulty with the unusually warm weather and sickness resulting from the after effects of a crab feast held at Annapolis, the government college for naval officers. Many notables attended the encampment, including President Hoover, Governor Ritchie of Maryland, Mayor Broenig of Baltimore, General Hines, head of the veterans' bureau, Secretary of War Hurley, a past senior vice-commander of the V. F. W., Rear Admiral Coontz, present junior vice-commander, Tox Mix, movie star and a member of Universal City post. Mix was accompanied by a galaxy of cowboy V. F. W. men in full regalia, even to a pair of six shooters.

The Connecticut delegation of over 200 appeared in the parade dressed in white and received a big ovation all along the line of march. In the absence of Department Commander Albert M. Simons, who was ill, the Connecticut division was in command of Department Junior Vice-Commander James J. Lee. His aides from this end of the state were Leo Jacques of Norwich, commander of the fourth district county council, Herbert Burdick of Norwich, a past junior vice-commander, F. N. Normandin of Willimantic, deputy chief of staff, Joseph Perrone of New London, a member of the council of administration. Gold Star post received more recognition in the appointment of its commander, James J. Lee, to the national committee on foreign service and publicity. The chairman of this committee is H. F. Miller, department commander of the District of Columbia, and a prominent publisher. Other members are Charles S. Penbroke, publisher and newspaper man of New York, Fred 3. Burnett of Detroit, Mich., and Rear Admiral Robert S. Coontz. Four other Connecticut men received assignments to national committees, John R. Kelly of Bridgeport to be chairman of the poppy committee and John B. Ryan of New Canaan to the committee on Americanization. James F. Daley and George S. French retained their respective positions on the hospitalization and orphans committees.

FREED FROM CHARGE OF RECKLESS DRIVING

At the city court session Saturday morning a reckless driving charge against Miss M. Evelyn Whitehead was dropped after testimony from several witnesses had been heard. Miss Whitehead was originally charged with manslaughter in causing the death of Nicholas Peterson, late of Worcester, when her machine crushed him against a telephone pole on Main street near Park street, August 11th. Coroner Edward G. McKay exonerated her from criminal liability in a finding recently made public.

In court the manslaughter charge was dropped and a reckless driving charge brought by City Attorney Charles W. Cassidy. Witnesses who testified Saturday morning were Dr. William T. Driscoll, Harry Ford, I. Cramer and Officer John Carroll. The latter investigated the accident for the police department. Attorney V. P. A. Quinn represented Miss Whitehead.

Miss Whitehead was driving her mcahine through Main street, August 11th. At the time there was a piece of ice on the seat beside her. The ice started to slip and Miss Whitehead attempted to push it back on the seat. In doing so she lost control of the machine and it mounted the curbing, striking and pinning Peterson against the pole. The man died at the W. W. Backus hospital.

FOREIGN MISSIONS BOARD WILL MEET IN WISCONSIN

For 120 years a New England institution, the American board of commissioner for foreign missions Boston, goes to the middle west for its 121st annual meeting, which comes October 21-23 inclusive at the First Congregational church of Madison, Wis., in which church and city the board met 36 years ago. Workers from the four corners of the world will bring fresh messages of work and progress in the Orient and Near East, while Congregational and Christian laymen and clergy from all parts of the United States will face frankly the whole problem of foreign missionary service under the general theme, "Major Concerns in Foreign Missions."

Speakers from China, Africa, India, Japan, Turkey and the Philippines will sound key notes for a series of open forums (a new method for such conferences), which will raise and discuss such questions as, "Has Christianity Really a Message for the World?" "What kind of a religion are we trying to export?" "Are our missionaries wanted?" Are the home churches too weak to support the standards sustained by the American board?" Nationally known educationalists, ministers and American board officers will conduct these discussions. Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter, D. D., dean of Hartford Theological seminary and president of the board, will preside.

The American board held its last annual meeting at Bridgeport, Conn. It now serves under 13 flags with a total property valuation on the foreign field of $7,500,000. Supported by the Congregational-Christian Churches of America, it conducts 26 hospitals, 56 dispensaries; 10 educational institutions of college grade or higher; 27 training schools (normal, agricultural, industrial, home economics, theological, nursing); 72 secondary schools; 1,236 primary schools; and numerous social service settlements and playgrounds. Its roll of missionaries numbers 701, of whom 47 are doctors.

PASTOR'S CONFERENCE IS TO HAVE THREE SESSIONS

The thirteenth annual pastors' conference for clergymen of all denominations in the Connecticut valley, including western Massachusetts, will be held under the auspices of the Pastoral union of Connecticut and the Hartford Seminary foundation on Tuesday and Wednesday, September 16 and 17, in Hartranft hall of the Hartford Theological seminary at 55 Elizabeth street, Hartford.

The leader will be Rev. Francis John McConnell Ph. D., D. D., LL. D., resident bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church, New ork city. His general theme will be "Present-Day Expressions of Age-Old Religious Tendencies."

Three sessions will be held on Tuesday, the first beginning at 11 o'clock, daylight time, and two sessions will be held on Wednesday. Lodging without charge will be provided up to the dormitory capacity for those who apply in advance. The conference is in charge of a committee consisting of Professor W. D. Barnes, chairman; Rev. W. S. Archibald, Rev. Harold Brennan, Rev. I. H. Benedict and Professor Charles S. Thayer who is secretary to the committee. Past conferences have been largely attended, and the leader's contribution as well as the discussion periods have been interesting and challenging as a preliminary to the fall work of the ministry.

COTTON MILL MEN TO ATTEND TEXTILE FORUM

The textile forum, conducted by the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers for discussions by men in the mill of problems they encounter in their work, will open Tuesday, Sept. 16, for a series of meetings in the Boston chamber of commerce. The meeting will start at 10:30 in the morning and will continue through the day with luncheon being served at 12 noon.

Last year representatives of 87 mills attended the forum and indications are that this year the attendance will be much larger. Meeting dates have been arranged as follows: Overseers of carding, Nov. 18; overseers of spinning, Dec. 9; master mechanics, Jan. 13; overseers of warp preparation and weavers, Feb. 10; overseers of dyeing, bleaching and cloth room, Mar 10. No session of the forum is planed for October as on Oct. 10 and 11 the annual meeting of the association will be held at Poland Springs, Me.

Details of the forum are in charge of a steering committee which includes John F. Reardon, agent of the Grosvenordale company, North Grosvenordale.

NEW TAXPAYERS' LEAGUE TO BE HEARD FROM TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 7.—The first of the two city elections for the purpose of electing four members to the city council, three members of the board of school visitors and three selectmen, will be held tomorrow. The election will mark the advent of the New London Taxpayers' league in politics, for the organization has endorsed the candidacy of four of its members, also is supporting the candidacy of another for member of the board of school visitors. The candidates of the league for member of council are E. Frank Morgan, Edwin Cruise, Edward Prentis, Jr., and Ray C. Smith. The league's candidate for member of the board of school visitors is William T. May. The other candidates for office of councilor are Robert Bishop Chappell, David A. Connors, Francis DeGange, William C. Fox, James H. Murray, William M. Nordenhold, Malcolm M. Scott and Emily C. Spiers. The candidates for board of school visitors other than Mr. May are Rosemary O. Anderson, Cecil P. Cankins, Ellen C. Kelley and Ernest Nibbs. Those seeking office as selectmen are: Lawrence S. M. Cook, Leo B. Reagan, William L. White and Ralph Wetmore. As it will be necessary for the candidates to obtain a majority of votes cast in order to be elected, it is doubtful if any of the office seekers will be elected tomorrow. Another election will be held in two weeks when a plurality will assure election. As the Taxpayers' league has a membership of nearly 800 if the members support their candidates it would appear that the candidates will be elected at one of the two elections.

Norwich Produce Market

Furnished by Bureau of Markets
Conn. Dept. of Agriculture

The Connecticut peach crop is rapidly approaching the peak of the market season judged by the rate at which supplies have increased on the farmers' market during the past week. Georgia Belles were very liberal and Elbertas fast coming in line. Quality is good and no one can afford to pass by this fruit at the prevailing low prices.

Apples continued liberal and slow selling especially in ungraded stock. Bartlett pears, native grapes and muskmelons were in adequate offerings.

The vegetable situation was little changed. Tomatoes were fully as dull and low priced as for the past week. Sweet corn was showing an improved market tone with moderate stocks available. Potatoes were reported firmer and higher at important shipping centers, but locally the market was unchanged.

The market for high grade, full sized eggs was firm and in some cases prices slightly higher, but pullet eggs were on the increase and moving slow.

The theme was, "Christ's Universal Appeal." Luke 4:22 was the text; And all bear Him witness, and wondered at the gracious words which proceeded out of His mouth. Mrs. Howard Lucy and Miss Louise Sterry sang the duet, Be Thou My Guide. At the close of the morning worship the September communion service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Dierlamm, the deacons assisting. A good-sized congregation partook of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Several out-of-town friends were in the congregation. Rev. Mr. Dierlamm was accompanied to Norwich Town by his wife. Rev. and Mrs. Dierlamm paid a visit to the session of the church school. While in town over the week-end, they were guests in the home of Senior Deacon Dwight W. Avery and Mrs. Avery, of West Town street. Under the heading of Planning New Work, the theme of the Young People's C. E. service Sunday evening in the chapel was "Our Crusade Plans." This was a consecration meeting; Exodus 33:12-15.

Several members of the Congregational parish attended services at the Central Baptist church Sunday evening, when the message of the evening was by their former pastor, Rev Gurdon F. Bailey, in whose honor the farewell community service was held.

FLOOD WATERS HAMPERING DOMINICAN RELIEF WORK

Cargoes of Supplies Are Held Outside By Rushing Water in the Ozama River—Planes Are Transporting Food, Fresh Water and Medical Supplies—More Than 2,000 Bodies Have Been Buried or Cremated—Wreckage is Being Removed in an Effort to Forestall an Epidemic—Officials Prevented Food Riot

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic, Sept. 8.—(AP)—The appalling task of saving from death by disease more than 1,000 badly injured victims of last week's hurricane today confronted the relief administrators of this city where 4,000 are dead and virtually all shelter has been destroyed.

To facilitate this end President Trujillo today was invested with all of the powers of the Dominican government by the legislature. His first act was the most important. He ordered the streets and other danger spots thoroughly cleaned immediately to forestall an imminent epidemic due to lack of sanitation.

Convicts, lay citizens and uniformed firemen joined together in the Herculean job of cleaning up conditions which, if permitted to continue another day, must add heavily to the death toll.

Desperate efforts continued today to bring to Santo Domingo by water cargoes of supplies awaiting landing but held outside by the rushing flood of water in the Ozama river. The Ozama raced seaward at 15 miles an hour today and there were no boats available capable of making a speed greater than that so they might force their way up the tide.

The whole situation hinged upon the ability of airplanes, of which about a dozen were available, to land from far and near points the necessary food, fresh water and medical supplies, the latter vital in the treatment of nearly a thousand serious cases of infection reported by the sanitation staff. This phase of the aftermath of the hurricane was made evident by the report of one army surgeon who in a few hours performed 50 amputations when he first landed in the devastated area.

Airmen have obtained a well-defined picture of the scene of desolation, which covers a path 20 to 40 miles wide and about 50 miles in extent toward the mountains. The high, steep range deflected the gale upward so that areas further along on what had been its path escaped destruction. Today's survey showed that Santiago, Vega and Boca valleys, in which there is plenty of food if it can be transported, were unharmed.

Most of the refugees had not had a meal since Wednesday, when the hurricane struck the city.

Food distribution, however, is becoming more efficient, under the direction of the Red Cross and the Dominican government.

MORE THAN 5,000 INJURED: OVER 30,000 HOMELESS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.— (AP) — Rafael Brache, Dominican minister to the United States, today received the following cable from President Rafael L. Trujillo, of Santo Domingo:

"Magnitude of the devastation caused by the hurricane is being found increased hourly. Over 2,000 bodies have been buried or incinerated. There are over 5,000 injured. Help is being received from the United States, Porto Rico, Cuba and Haiti, consisting of foodstuffs, medicines, medical equipment, doctors, nurses and experts. Mexico, Belgium, Venezuela and Curacao also helping. Conditions disastrous and aggravating each minute. Over 30,000 homeless. Development of epidemics feared. President Trujillo."

FOOD RIOTS AMONG HUNGRY POPULACE

SANTO DOMINGO, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Food riots among the hurricane-stricken and hungry populace of this city broke out today but were suppressed by soldiers of the Dominican Guardia with United States sailors standing by. A hundred persons rushed the wharf where relief supplies were being unloaded from the U. S. destroyer-mine-sweeper "Grebe."

NEAR RIOT IN RUSH FOR FOOD AT SANTO DOMINGO

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Only the coolness of officers of the Dominican Aroy and of the United States mine-sweeper Grebe saved hurricane-stricken Santo Domingo from a food riot today.

Hundreds of men, women and children, many of whom had not eaten since the city was destroyed by a hurricane last Wednesday, tried to seize provisions which were brought by launches and other light craft to wharves along the banks of the river Ozama, which divides the city. The Dominican and American officers quickly posted their men in such strategic positions as to hold back the crowds until speakers could assure them that rations would be distributed as soon as possible.

Government authorities and Red Cross workers took up the difficult task of keeping the hungry people orderly while food was doled out at impromptu canteens set up in churches, government buildings and some of the old Spanish stone houses which withstood the hurricane. Rolling kitchens weer used for cooking the food.

Food stuffs, medical supplies, nurses, doctors and relief workers were brought today by the S. S. Ruth Lykes from Ponce, Porto Rico. The S. S. Tryton arrived with a cargo of rice from Europe.

The S. S. Catherine tried to enter the raging Ozama today but was forced to return to its anchorage at sea.

More than 1,200 seriously injured patients are receiving treatment in 13 hospitals. Many of them suffer from gangrenous infection, and almost all have infections of some kind. Those in the hospitals are in addition to the hundreds of injured who are receiving treatment in churches, schools, homes and public buildings. Doctors declare the number of injured outside of hospitals far exceeds the 1,200 shown in the survey.

Water, the city's greatest immediate need, probably will be available tomorrow morning. An aqueduct has been repaired for bringing water from inland sources and tonight President Rafael Trujillo and American Minister Charles B. Curtis were informed that the water was flowing toward the city and that a plentiful supply could be expected within 15 hours. Instructions were immediately issued for the closing of all water taps in the city.

SEN. WALCOTT ADDRESSED WOMEN'S CLUBS CONVENTION

NEW LONDON, Sept. 8.—(AP) —U. S. Senator Frederick C. Walcott cited the importance of conservation of natural resources tonight, in an address before the New England conference of State Federations of Women's clubs convening in Hotel Griswold, Eastern Point. About 250 delegates representing every state in New England attended the opening sessions today.

Senator Walcott pointed out the dangers of depleting natural resources of America and urged the conference cooperate in preventing their waste.

Samuel High, of Boston, editor of the Christian Herald, spoke on America's growing interest and influence on international matters. Isolation of the United States from the rest of the world now is impossible, he said.

Mrs. Omeron H. Cooldige, chairman of the conference, presided at the afternoon and evening sessions.

Speakers in the afternoon were Howard Braistreet, director of adult education in Connecticut, who spoke on traditions of New England and Mrs. Alice P. Merritt, of Hartford, former state senator, whose topic was "The Spirit of Youth." Dr. Katherine Blunt, president of the Connecticut College for Women, entertained the delegates at tea on the college campus.

Tomorrow's speakers will include James H. Taylor, highway landscape supervisor, department of public works, Massachusetts, and Luther M. Keith, of the Connecticut forestry department.

PROHIBITIONISTS TO WORK AT STATE CONVENTIONS

HARTFORD, Sept. 8.—(AP)— Eleven Connecticut organizations devoted to the cause of prohibition will go before the state conventions of both major parties this week and next to urge adoption of campaign planks calling for strict law enforcement. A central committee, the "Connecticut committee of organizations supporting the 18th amendment," has been formed to represent the interests of the eleven.

Mrs. Mary E. Welles, of Hartford, president of the Connecticut Woman's Christian Temperance union, is acting chairman of the central committee, which since its organization has held three meetings here. A subcommittee will be named to present the resolution.

Besides the Woman's Christian Temperance union, the committee will represent the Sons of Temperance, the Temple of Honor, the Independent Order of Good Templars, the Connecticut Temperance union, the Connecticut Temperance and Anti-Saloon league, the Connecticut Prohibition committee, the Connecticut Federation of Churches, the Connecticut State grange, the Woman's committee for law enforcement and the Connecticut Christian Endeavor union.

DEPORTATION FACES GREENWICH GARDENER

HARTFORD, Sept. 8.—(AP) — Patrick Gilroy, 27, of Greenwich, will probably be deported after a hearing in this city on September 24, officials of the United States immigration service announced today. Gilroy, a native of the Irish Free State, is charged with illegal entry and residence. It is claimed that he came to Canada from the Irish Free State in 1926, and a year later paid a professional smuggler $25 to be brought into the United States by way of Malone, N. Y.

Gilroy came eventually to Greenwich, became engaged as a gardener at a large estate there, and married a Greenwich girl. He was arrested last week by immigration inspectors and is now free under $500 bonds.

GOVERNOR OF LOUISIANA UNDER ARMED GUARD

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 8.—(AP)—On the eve of the primary which will decide whether he or United States Senator Joseph E. Ransdell shall be the democratic candidate for the United States senate, Governor Huey P. Long was under armed guard tonight.

In addition, Battery A of the Louisiana national guard artillery was ordered out for "overnight," although Adjutant General Ray Fleming denied that the militia was being "mobilized."

These precautions followed an exciting day for the governor, in which he testified in federal court about the disappearance of two men planning to bring suit for slander against him, and received a punch in the nose and mouth from a newspaper reporter.

TO ATTEMPT FLY TWICE AS HIGH AS MT. EVEREST PEAK

AUGSBURG, Ger., Sept. 8—(AP)—A tall, lank, quiet physicist hopes to take off this week in the largest balloon ever built, and fly twice as high as the peak of Mount Everest to make scientific observations in the stratosphere, as the unexplored upper region of the earth's atmosphere is called by scientists.

Auguste Piccard, a disciple of Albert Einstein, will attempt to fly these heights with a companion, Charles Kipfer, and will risk his life to make observations in atmospheric levels never before visited by man

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain, Sept. 8.—(AP)—With the general strike ended as suddenly as it had flared up, this city was tranquil yesterday—the first day of the presence of the king, the queen and the royal entourage for the summer court season.

HAIFA, Palestine, Sept. 8—(AP)—The Jewish telegraphic agency says that Jamal Bakhi, editor of the Christian-Arab newspaper Al Zamer, was killed and six other persons were injured in a fight between Moslems and Catholics in the streets of Haifa.

Dr. Vass, a Roman Catholic priest and former professor of theology at Budapest university, was also deputy premier. He died of apoplexy.

KIDNAPERS' EMISSARY DETAINED AS PRISONER

DES MOINES, Ia., Sept. 8.—(AP)—A story of kidnaping and counter-kidnaping tonight occupied police investigating the case of James Sheridan, wealthy retired business man, reported abducted from a downtown street last week.

Sheridan, according to information to authorities, was released today after his wife paid ransom of $10,000. He had not re-appeared here, however, and Mrs. Sheridan tonight denied she had effected the release.

The story told officers, presumable by friends of Sheridan, was that after the abduction, the kidnapers sent an emissary to them with a demand for $50,000 ransom. The latter retaliated by taking the emissary prisoner and demanded Sheridan be given his liberty in return for that of the man they held.

After prolonged negotiations, according to this report, the abductors of Sheridan agreed to reduce the amount demanded to $10,000 if their agent were released. This being mutually agreeable, Mrs. Sheridan was reported to have paid over the amount and both men were liberated.

Because of Sheridan's failure to arrive home and Mrs. Sheridan's denial of the deal, however, police admitted their information lacked verification. They have learned definitely, they said, the names of three men who took part in the abduction. One is a former resident of Des Moines and the others Peoria. (Ill.) racketeers. They are being sought.

EUROPEAN FEDERATION GOES TO L. OF N. ASSEMBLY

GENEVA, Sept. 8—(AP)—Aristide Briand's plan for a European federation went definitely into the state of public discussion today after the first session of the league of nations council.

Without a dissenting voice but after a long and warm discussion of methods, representatives of 27 European states decided to submit the plan to the league of nations assembly, bearing their adhesion in principle. They adopted a resolution to that effect and asked M. Briand to place the whole matter before the league.

That means that before the close of the present assembly session the French foreign minister will explain in public the extent of the organization he deems necessary for real collaboration of European powers in both the political and economic field.

The meeting of the European conference followed a brief and more or less formal first session of the league council at which the question of the Palestine mandate was buried without any fireworks.

MAGISTRATE HELD ON CHARGES OF EXTORTION

NORRISTOWN, Pa., Sept. 8—(AP)—Magistrate Frank J. Clark, prominent in political circles here, was arrested today at the direction of the September grand jury and held in $2,000 bail on charges of extortion, conspiracy, obstructing justice, and malfeasance in office.

The arrest was ordered while testimony was being taken by the grand jury in the case of three alleged detectives who entered Montgomery county in June "to clean up the liquor situation for a temperance society."

The alleged detectives, Fred W. Borgmann, Stephen Matte and Granville L. Kern, were held in $2,500 bail each on charges of extortion and conspiracy to commit extortion.

County authorities charged the three men "arrested" E. C. Sissolde, proprietor of the Hatboro inn, on liquor violation charges and then "shook him down" after he was alleged to have been held for a further hearing by Magistrate Clark.

A SUIT FOR $14,525,000 WAS FILED IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(AP)—A suit for $14,525,000 against Harry Wardman, Washington hotel man and real estate owner, and several other individuals and banking houses was filed today by Gustave Nassauer.

The plaintiff demands, his attorney said, that stock of the Wardman Real Estate Properties, Inc., now held in trust by the Irving Trust company, be turned over to him, or that the alleged value of the stock, $12,025,000, be paid him. In addition, Nassauer demands payment of $2,500,000 for the detention of the stock, which he maintains was rightfully due him under an agreement with Wardman made in 1927.

The plaintiff, his attorney, Emil K. Ellis, said, also demands an accounting and alleges fraud and conspiracy on the part of Wardman, his partner, James D. Hobbs, and the firm of Rogers Caldwell and company.

FITZGERALD OUT OF RACE FOR MAYOR OF BOSTON

BOSTON, Sept. 8—(AP)—John F. Fitzgerald, former mayor of Boston, announced from a hospital bed tonight his retirement from the race for the democratic nomination for governor of Massachusetts.

Fitzgerald, who rose from a sick bed to make a radio speech Saturday, was ordered by his physicians to give up his campaign. His condition is not serious but they said his vitality is very low.

Fitzgerald's retirement leaves only Joseph B. Ely, of Westfield and John J. Cummings, of Boston, in the field for the democratic nomination to oppose Gov. Frank G. Allen, or Mayor John J. Devir, of Malden, who seek the republican nomination.

Darien, Ga, Placed Under Martial Law

Following Lynching of a Negro Who Slew An Officer in a Gun Fight

DARIEN, Ga., Sept. 8.—(AP)—Under martial law, invoked after lynching of a Negro who slew an officer in a gun fight, streets of this little town were cleared of armed civilians late today.

Brigadier General Robert J. Travis, commanding the 55th brigade, field artillery, of which the 118th field artillery is a unit, this afternoon telegraphed the adjutant general of the Georgia national guard, suggesting that martial law be declared in Darien.

General Travis communicated his recommendation in the following words:

"As mob lynched the first Negro captured, it is quite likely they will seek to lynch the second captured. If lynching of the other Negro upon capture is to be prevented, believe specific orders should be issued and martial law be declared to protect military in this event."

Colonel W. R. Neal, of Savannah, commanding national guard units, took over the situation after a proclamation by Governor L. G. Hardman at the instance of civil authorities.

All persons idling or loitering on the streets with weapons, were ordered to disarm, but a group of armed civilians remained on the banks of the Altamaha river which courses by the town. This group was permitted to stay to aid in preventing possible escape of a second Negro sought for the slaying.

National guardsmen patrolled the streets and the situation was believed well in hand. Excitement was subsiding but many persons still gathered in groups on the street to discuss the day's incidents.

RESTRICTIONS IN WILL OF MRS. FREDERICK DENT GRANT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(AP)— The will of Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant, daughter-in-law of President Grant, filed in the District of Columbia supreme court today for probate, creates two trust funds to continue through the lives of her two children, their children and for 21 years beyond the life-time of her youngest grandchild.

Mrs. Grant widow of Maj. Gen. Frederick Dent Grant, died September 5. No estimate of the value of her estate was made.

The will, executed in 1926, divides her personal estate equally between her children, Lieut. Col. Ulysses S. Grant, III, and Princess Julia Grant Cantacuzene, except that Col. Grant is to receive the letters and papers of his father and grandfather, President Grant.

Bonds, representing the estate Gen. Grant left his widow, are divided equally between Col. Grant and Princess Cantacuzene with the request that each share be held intact and passed along to their children. The daughter is left $50,000 outright and the son gets Mrs. Grant's Massachusetts avenue home.

The residue of the estate is to be divided equally and the two trust funds to last until 21 years after the death of the youngest living grandchild created

MAINE ELECTION STRONG REPUBLICAN VICTORY

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 8.—(AP)—The state of Maine, often considered the "bell wether" in politics, was carried by the republican party by a substantial majority with 512 precincts out of 632 reported tonight.

Late returns cut into the large republican majority set up in the early count and brought down a better than two-to-one majority considerably.

Representative Wallace H. White, Jr., republican, seeking the seat from which United States Senator Arthur R. Gould, of Presque Isle, is retiring, was ahead of his running mate, Gov. William Tudor Gardiner.

Frank H. Haskell, Portland attorney, senatorial candidate, and Edward C. Moran, Jr., of Rockland, running for the governorship, rolled up a democratic vote which on a percentage basis was far better than in the past several campaigns.

The vote for the 512 precincts was:

For United States senator:
White	61,924
Haskell	36,745
For governor:
Gardiner	58,523
Moran	43,552

Uriburu Heads New Govt. Of Arg[illegible]na

Warships in B[illegible] Aires Harbor Op[illegible]uns On Governme[illegible]use

BUENOS AIRES, [illegible]ept. 8.—(AP)—The regime elevated into power by a military upheaval Saturday officially became the government late this afternoon with administration of the oath to the provisional president and his cabinet.

Great crowds of citizens, happy because of the national holiday which had been proclaimed for the formal induction of the government, massed about the historic government house as General Jose Evaristo Uriburu took the oath as provisional president of the Argentine republic.

Demonstrations, some of them with women, were formed to march through the streets and hail the revolution which ousted the aging Hipolito Irigoyen. The city was more lively than in one of its famed national fiestas.

Others who took the oath were military officers, provincial officials and the soldiers in the ranks.

The government took time out for this ceremony but was extremely busy the remainder of the day in reorganizing the administrative structure. General Uriburu said the entire country had swung to the banner of the revolt and that the provinces rapidly were being turned over to picked men, principally high army officers.

Other officers who have been loyal to the revolutionary chieftains are replacing those who were Irigoyen adherents. General Jose Marcilese today was given command of the first division of the army. Captain Leon Scasso has succeeded Vice Admiral Ramon Gonzales Fernandez in charge of the first naval region.

Many of the Irigoyen supporters have fled to Uruguay and other neighboring countries but a large number have been arrested.

The aged Irigoyen still lies ill in an infantry barracks at La Plata. He is not a prisoner, so the government says, and the chief of the Seventh infantry today was ordered to give the former president every courtesy and ample medical attention.

While the country in general has accepted the revolt, news of scattered disorders continues to reach the capital. A clash in the vicinity of Rodeo resulted in the killing of the chief of police of the department of Iglesias. His wife also was killed and a police sergeant was wounded.

The cabinet which took the oath today is made up as follows:

Enrique Marina, vice-president.
Ernesto Bosch, foreign secretary.
General Francisco Medina, war.
Rear Admiral Renard, navy.
Enrique Perez, finance.
M. Sanchez Sorrondo, interior.
Dr. E. Padilla, public instruction.
Horacio Barela, agriculture.
Octavio Pico, public works.

President Uriburu, General Medina, Rear Admiral Renard and the cabinet secretary, Lieutenant Colonel Emilio Kinklein, are the only military men in the new government.

SPLIT IN DRY RANKS IN ILL. SENATORIAL CONTEST

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—(AP)—The dry ranks in the Illinois senatorial contest today split on the question of the prohibition referendum to be submitted to the voters in the November election.

The Women's Christian Temperance union and six other women's dry organizations decided to campaign for "no" ballots on the referendum and declined to endorse any candidate. Last Saturday the Illinois Anti-Saloon league urged voters to ignore the referendum and endorsed the candidacy of Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill, ardent prohibitionist and independent candidate.

Mrs. O'Neill opposed Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, republican, who though personally dry has announced she will abide by the will of the electorate in the referendum, and former Senator James Hamilton Lewis, democrat, who is running on an anti-prohibition platform.

U. S. GUNBOAT SILENCES COMMUNISTS IN CHINA

HANKOW, China, Sept. 8.—(AP)—A sharp encounter between the American gunboat Tutuila and a band of roving communists occurred on the Yangtse river 80 miles from Yochow, Runan province, late today. Dispatches said the American vessel suffered no casualties.

The reds fired upon the Tutuila as the warship cruised along the river, using machine guns and trench mortars.

Returning the fire with three-inch rifles and machine guns, the gunboat quickl silenced the attackers, destroyed their mortars and dislodged them from their position.

Dispatches failed to state whether the reds suffered any casualties.

EIGHT PERSONS KILLED BY OIL SHIP EXPLOSION

ATHENS, Greece, Sept. 8. — (AP) — Eight persons were known to have been killed tonight when a sailing vessel, filled with oil, exploded in front of the Standard Oil depots at Drapetsonias harbor.

The vessel was blown to pieces by the blast and its flaming fragments set fire to 18 other sailing boats and one steamship which burned rapidly.

The crews of the burning ships threw themselves into the water but it is feared that many were fatally burned.

The Standard Oil depots on the shore apparently were safe

HOOVER WELCOMED FRENCH FLIERS AT THE WHITE HOUSE

Lindbergh, Byrd and Rickenbacker Gathered Around President Hoover As He Greeted Acoste and Bellonte—The Chief Executive Called the Flight of the Frenchmen a "Return Visit" of Lindbergh's New York to Paris Flight—Lindbergh's Greeting of Acoste and Bellonte Was Animated

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.— (AP) — President Hoover today in the quiet beauty of a white house rose garden gave the official welcome of the nation to Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte, French aviators.

Gathered around the chief executive and the men who flew from Paris to New York only a few days ago were three of America's most famous aviators—Lindbergh, Byrd and Rickenbacker—General Pershing, Vice-President Curtis, Jules Henry of the French embassy and other government representatives.

The greeting by the president and the response by Coste climaxed a day of of official tribute to the two fliers which included a white house luncheon, a pilgrimage to the tomb of the Unknown Soldier and calls at four government departments.

"We wish the people of France to know that our welcome of their two heroes is warm and spontaneous and universal," the president said. "We rejoice that this brilliant feat has been accomplished, we are delighted to honor these two men who have thus dramtically recalled Colonel Lindbergh's call."

The name of Lindberfh recurred constantly throughout the president's welcome. Mr. Hoover called the flight of the Frenchmen a "return visit" of Lindbergh's New York to Paris flight. He said the pride and happiness of the nation in Lindbergh's safe landing were "redoubled when we heard of the magnificent reception given to him by the government and people of France."

Lindbergh stood, face to the front and expressionless, only a few paces to Mr. Hoover's right. His greeting to Coste and Bellonte, however, was animated.

The president's remarks were broadcast over the United States, England and France. As he finished, Coste stepped forward a pace and began reading his response. It was in French and the first words were low, but his voice mounted as he went on until its ring could be clearly heard by a little group of spectators at the executive offices a few yards away.

"Three years ago France had the great honor of receiving and hailing two of the glories of your country—Lindbergh and Byrd," Coste said. "Their exploits gave to the French people the opportunity of proving to the American people the deep affection which we had fostered for more than 150 years.

"The welcome which has just been given us is a token of the reciprocal of the American nation."

Rear Admiral Byrd spoke a few words of praise for the Frenchmen after Coste ended. A little later, he gave them a tri-color which had been presented him in France and which he carried on his flight over the south pole.

Byrd walked into the white house executive offices, unaccompanied and unannounced, a few minutes after Coste and Bellonte arrived. A policeman did not recognize him. He asked if Byrd were with the fliers' party. The Virginian smiled but before he began his explanation, the policeman blushed. "Pass on, Admiral Byrd," he said.

Coste and Bellonte were up early and started for the tomb of the Unknown Soldier just as the rush of downtown traffic was thickest.

At the amphi-theatre leading down to the tomb, they paused, holding the wreath between them, while the army band played "La Marseillaise." Then they stepped forward and placed the circlet carefully on the stone slab. An army bugler played "Taps."

Leaving the state department, where Acting Secretary Cotton received and congratulated them, Bellonte lagged a few paces behind as they started to visit the office of Frederick H. Payne, acting secretary of war. The little flier was immediately surrounded by a group of girls. He grinned and side-stepped like an alert broken field runner, until he was on Coste's heels again.

They were greeted at the navy department by Secretary Adams and at the commerce department they found Lindbergh waiting for them in the office of Secretary Lamont.

A reception at the French embassy for Coste and Bellonte followed the white house luncheon but their schedule was not yet completed. A dinner at the Washington board of trade in the evening ended the capital's welcome. They planned to leave for New York tomorrow.

NANNETTE GUILFORD WINS A MEXICAN DIVORCE

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.— (AP) —Nanette Guilford, sometimes referred to as the Baby Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera company, has obtained a Mexican divorce from Max Rosen, violinist, her lawyer announced today. The grounds were incompatibility and non-support and the suit brought in Sonora, was uncontested, the attorney added.

Rosen said he had not received notice of the decree but hoped the divorce would be a good thing for all concerned. Rosen and Miss Guilford were married two years ago after the most casual of proposals.

"Really," she said at that time, "I think I am the first bride ever yawned into matrimony. We'd just finished luncheon, after our morning music studies, and were walking in Seventh avenue. Max yawned as though he were bored to death.

"'Ho, hum, he said, 'What do you say to getting married this afternoon.'"

So they continued their stroll to city hall and got married.

SUES FOR HELPING CAPTURE OF SWEETHEART DEFAULTER

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(AP)— Irene Milinkovitch brought suit today for $5,000 she claims as reward for "turning up" her sweetheart, an absconding bank employe, to the authorities.

A year ago Charles P. S. Westergaard disappeared with $60,000 belonging to the Chatham and Phoenix bank. Miss Milinkovitch says representatives of the National Surety company and the William J. Burns International detective agency, coming to her because she and Westergaard were engaged to be married, promised her one-tenth of all the money recovered if she would give them information leading to the fugitive's arrest

Shortly afterward, the complaint asserts, Westergaard was arrested by officers cognizant of the information Miss Milinkovitch had supplied and $52,000 was recovered. No reward was paid. The bank, the surety company and the detective agency are all named defendants.

BODY OF ANDREE PLACED IN CRYPT IN TROMSOE

TROMSOE, Norway, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Beneath half-masted flags, a reverent crowd gathered in and around the little Tromsoe church today during funeral services for Salomon Auguste Andree and Nils Strindberg whose bodies recently were brought from an icy grave on White Island where they died 33 years ago.

After a hymn by a mixed choir, Dean Nissen delivered a moving sermon in the course of which he recalled that two years ago memorial services were held in the same church for Roald Amundsen.

The relatives of Andree and Strindberg, representatives of the Swedish-Norwegian commission, the crew of the sealer Bratvaag, which discovered the bodies, and members of Dr. Gunnar Horn's expedition attended the services. Petty officers and sailors from warships in the harbor paraded to the church as a final tribute.

After the services the coffins were carried, by Norwegian sailors, to the southern corridor of the church, which will be used as a provisional crypt.

SHASI, CHINA, HAS BEEN CAPTURED BY COMMUNISTS

What are your chances of baking success?

Greater . . . with Calumet . . . because it acts twice!

MAKE THIS TEST—See for yourself how Calumet Baking Powder acts twice to make your baking better. Put two level teaspoons of Calumet into a glass, add two teaspoons of water, stir rapidly five times and remove the spoon. The tiny, fine bubbles will rise slowly, half filling the glass. This is Calumet's first action—the action that takes place in your mixing bowl.

After the mixture has entirely stopped rising, stand the glass in a pan of hot water on the stove. In a moment, a second rising will start and continue until the mixture rises to the top of the glass. This is Calumet's second action—the action that takes place in your oven. Make this test today. See Calumet's Double-Action which protects your baking from failure.

WHEN you bake with Calumet, the Double-Acting Baking Powder, you can feel sure that your cakes and quick breads will be perfect every time.

For Calumet acts twice, not once. Its first action—in the mixing bowl—starts the leavening: Its second action—in the oven—lifts the batter high and light—even though you may not be able to regulate your oven temperature accurately. Bake a Calumet cake or some quick bread and see why Calumet has become the most popular baking powder in the world.

Only One Level Teaspoon of Calumet to a Cup of Sifted Flour!

That's the usual Calumet proportion. Be sure to follow it even though you may have been using nearly twice as much with other baking powders. You'll be delighted with this economy! And more than delighted with the results Calumet gives you. Perfect texture! Perfect flavor!

All baking powders are required by law to be made of pure, wholesome ingredients. But not all are alike in their action. Not all will give you equally fine results in your baking. Calumet is scientifically made of exactly the right ingredients, in exactly the right proportions to produce perfect leavening action—Double-Action. Get a can of Calumet from your grocer today. DANIELSON

DETAINED BY POLICE FOR DISTURBING SCHOOL

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 8—The sole prisoner occupying the police station today cried and complained bitterly over his detention, because no charges had been filed against him and because he had done no harm. Chief John McFarland treated him with the utmost consideration, not forcing him to occupy a cell, but allowing him out in the cell room, where there is more light and air.

The prisoner, name unknown, was taken at the graded school building this morning, by Chief McFarland, after he had been several times ejected and as persistently returned. He appeared to have a deep affection for the children assembled there for study and a great desire to remain with them.

But dogs are not allowed to attend school here, and friendly dog the prisoner is, because they are about certain to distract the pupils from their work. The dog, which has a collar, but no tag, is an intelligent, friendly animal that has been playing about the streets for two or three days past. Two boys that he was following to church Sunday morning, said that he belongs up Connecticut Mills way. He is the police dog type, black and tan, with some indications of having a strain of Airedale in his makeup. Unless his owner can be found the dog will be turned over to Dog Warden Charles E. Ayer of Dayville, and it will be just too bad if it becomes necessary to kill him. He's a nice dog and loves children.

His friends here heard today from Carl Abbott, who with Mrs. Abbott, is on a two years' motor trip through the United States and western Canada. Mail received from him today was postmarked at Jenny Lake, Wyo. During last night out on the Danielson-Brooklyn highway, about two miles east of here cars operated by John McKiernan, a detective sergeant of the Hartford police department, and Howard F. Foberg, also of Hartford, were in collision. The car Sergeant McKiernan was operating is owned by the Andrew Button company of Boston. William J. Stainton of Providence achieved the rare feat of breaking 100 straight targets at yesterday's meeting of the Danielson Rod and Gun club's registered shoot on the club's grounds at the Dyer place on the Danielson-Wauregan state road. PUTNAM

JUDGE RUSSELL ELECTED TO STATE COMMITTEE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 8—Republicans of the 28th senatorial district marshalled their forces in this city today and in convention held at the Putnam Inn at noon made the first important move of the campaign by re-electing Miss Katherine Byrne of Putnam as state central committeewoman and electing Judge Sabin S. Russell of Danielson to succeed John F. Reardon, Sr., of North Grosvenordale, as a member of the committee. Mr. Reardon's retirement from the committee, as was stated, was voluntary.

As a matter of record, absolute harmony reigned during the convention, but opposition to the Russell candidacy developed when Judge M. H. Geissler of this city, in an address, nominated Attorney Irving H. Miron of Putnam as a candidate for the district berth on the central committee. In his speech of nomination, Judge Geissler explained that he offered Mr. Miron's name in view of the fact that the party position had been promised him two years ago. Mr. Russell's candidacy was officially disclosed by a brother member of the bar, Attorney Harry E. Back of Danielson, who nominated him.

When the matter came to a vote the Putnam delegation, composed of Judge Geissler, Sam Rich, David O. Breault and A. A. Brodeur, stood firmly behind the Putnam lawyer. The remaining delegations formed a bloc in support of the Russell candidacy, and it being impossible to move the strength of either side, Judge Geissler addressed the chair and upon being recognized entered a motion to make Attorney Russell's election unanimous. The motion was then carried out in full and the order of business was resumed.

Miss Byrne and State Senator Walter C. Brown of Ashford were elected delegates-at-large to the state convention to be held in Hartford, Sept 15. Delegates elected to membership of organization committees were: John F. Reardon, Sr., of North Grosvenordale, committee on permanent organization; Irving A. Paine of Woodstock, committee on credentials; A. A. Brodeur of Putnam, committee on rules; William S Hunter of Killingly, committee on resolutions.

Following the adjournment of the convention, the attending delegates were the guests of Miss Byrne, vice-chairman of the state republican central committee, and Judge Russell, newly-elected central committeeman from this district at a luncheon served at the inn. Towns represented at the convention were Putnam, Thompson, Eastford, Ashford, Killingly and Woodstock.

Alderman Robert T. Chadwick, a member of the common council and intimate friend of Chief Thurston, visited the municipal official last week and conveyed the city government's expression of hope that he experience a quick recovery.

NEW BUSINESS NOT TO LOCATE IN PUTNAM

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 8.—Failure of officials of the Advertising Corp. of America, located in New York city, to reach satisfactory terms with the new industries committee of the local chamber of commerce, has resulted in the firm's announcement of a decision not to remove its manufacturing apparatus to a plant in this city, Arthur E. Smith, chairman of the industries committee, said today.

In disclosing the outcome of the chamber of commerce's negotiations with the novelty manufacturing concern, Mr. Smith stated that requirements of the officials which would have to be fulfilled before they would consider removal to Putnam, were too great and entirely out of the question. He said that the New York corporation sought financial backing as a paramount inducement to locate here when they requested that the committee take steps to raise $60,000. If such a movement would have been possible, the management of the concern stated it would buy the bonds off during a period of 15 years, providing the business remained established over that period. Another requirement would be the exempting of the concern from the payment of taxes for a specified length of time. Other terms for the corporation's locating in Putnam were also advanced, but the two mentioned were among those heading the list.

The fulfillment of such obligations would be quite impossible, Mr. Smith said, and added they would also be unwise and although he was hopeful the committee and the corporation could reach an agreement whereby the new industry would be secured for Putnam, he did not feel as though he could endorse such a proposition. Other members of the committee shared the chairman's opinion of the matter.

Following a meeting of the transportation committee of the school board held Saturday evening, Chairman Edward W. Mullan announced that contracts for the transporting to school of children living in the Park street and Putnam Country club sections of the town had been granted the Putnam Taxi Co. The bid of the independents proved to be the most attractive of any submitted and resulted in the prompt forwarding of the contract to them.

DEMOCRATIC PREDICTIONS

Much attention is being directed at this time to the outcome of the elections, primary contests and recalls throughout the country because of the interest in the several contests and the bearing which they may have upon the November elections.

This is a time when all kinds of predictions are being made and when the democrats are expressing confidence in their ability to get control of the next congress through upsets in congressional elections. They are trying to capitalize unfortunate conditions and it is no secret that off years frequently show some losses for the party in power.

It is not improbable that certain districts which sent republicans to congress because of the big Hoover landslide will return to their normal action. In the last presidential election republicans were named from recognized democratic districts. If the pendulum swings back in November, it will not be unusual, but aside from such cases and certain other instances where there are three-sided contests there is little to support the elaborate claims of the democratic publicity agents. They are making their predictions broad and basking in the hope that somehow, they will be realized. But even with democratic gains in the house that may be within the bounds of reason, they would come far from upsetting the republican majority.

In the senate there is a different situation. Republican control there exists in name only. The prospects for democratic success in certain states, states where there should be no question but what republican should win, have improved. There are contests in Illinois and Massachusetts which may hurt. Whether the democrats can make any headway against the insurgents remains to be seen, but Hitchcock is making a hard fight against Norris, but should he win it will mean no more opposition to the republicans than exists at present, for Norris, who proclaims himself a republican, invariably votes with the democrats.

Democratic predictions, however, do not insure success. There was even more confidence in 1928 that they would make a clean sweep than there is now. It is the customary practice to claim everything in sight and take what they can get and that will probably be the result in November.

JAPAN AND THE TREATY

Until all three countries ratify the naval treaty, its provisions do not go into effect. In the expectation that ratification will follow the three countries are controlling their construction activities so as to comply with the requirements.

Just now the delay is being caused by Japan. There it is necessary to get the approval of the privy council, which stands in a similar position to the senate in this country when it comes to treaty ratification, and the council is displaying certain opposition because of the feeling that the Japanese delegates did not put as much dependence upon and get as much advice from the general staff of the navy as it is thought they should. It appears to reflect the sentiment of the big navy element.

This attitude comes with some surprise in view of the belief that has existed that Japan was satisfied with the concessions gained and was anxious to enter into an agreement for the restriction of naval construction. Japan has profited by the limitations under the Washington agreement and further benefits can be expected from the pact arranged in London.

As the situation stands at the present time, the Japanese diet is in favor of ratification. That attitude is quite generally supported. It has received a strong backing from the papers and the government is favorably disposed. How serious a stumbling block the privy council may prove in giving its advice to the emperor on treaty matters is awaited, but it probably realizes that for it to urge the refusal to ratify would strengthen the demand, which already exists to a certain extent, for its abolition.

If the effort to block the approval of the treaty in Japan doesn't amount to any more than the fight that was made in this country it will accomplish little, though it may serve to delay action, waste time and create uncertainty.

ARGENTINA'S REVOLUTION

Selecting a time when there was a spirit of unrest being displayed in other republics, when business was at low ebb, when dissatisfaction was being displayed, the leaders of the revolution in Argentina pressed home their demands for a change. President Irigoyen resorted to his best resistance but the time and the conditions favored the opponents. While he sought to turn the government over to friendly hands, it did not succeed. The change was for only a brief period. General Uriburu then took command of the situation and, while he claims that the military forces are only temporarily running the government and there is a desire for early civilian control, he is serving as the provisional head of the government.

This brings to an end the Irigoyen government which has so long held control in Argentina. President Irigoyen has grown old on the job. He was regarded as the great leader in his country and he had a large following, so large that he was able to exercise great powers and have his own way. But it was in this dictatorial attitude that he undermined his strength.

In various ways President Irigoyen has insisted upon handling certain matters in a manner to please himself, however much it might seem to be against the interests of his country. He has declined to do many things which it was believed should be done. For instance, there are ten or more vacancies in the diplomatic corps which he refused to fill, including ambassadors to the United States and Germany. Certain of his acts indicated a coolness toward the United States and he has indicated a preference for Latin American policies to Pan Americanism. Among his own people he aroused a feeling of opposition because of the manner in which he interfered with the affairs of the provinces.

There apparently came a time when, in spite of the good that he has done for Argentina, there was a demand for a change which increased until the time was ripe to accomplish the overthrow. The method of making a change is contrary to the manner approved here, but characteristic of Latin American republics and accompanied by far less bloodshed and trouble than has been experienced in other republics, and the responsibilities of the new government are many.

SANTO DOMINGO'S PLIGHT

The disaster in the Dominican Republic was bad enough in the great number of lives lost and the property destroyed, but the immediate effects of that hurricane only partially revealed the predicament in that island.

Along with the dead and the destruction there was the complete demoralization of all facilities, the need of disposing of the people killed and the necessity of making provisions for the living. Such conditions necessarily create a serious health situation and the problem is to get sufficient sustenance for those spared while clearing up the debris and burying the dead in order that disease may be kept down and pestilence avoided. The job of treating the sick and injured is a huge one in itself.

Difficult as the job may seem, it is one that must be tackled promptly and effectively. Immediate steps will count for far more than those a month from now. Reconstruction may take its time but those 4,000 or more dead must be removed, those left must be fed and as rapidly as possible there must be a restoration of the various public utilities which are vital in every city.

It is a deplorable situation which exists in the island. It is a disaster which calls for outside assistance and those who have responded to the appeal for aid will find plenty of opportunities for putting any and all contributions to the best use. It is one of those instances where the plight of suffering humanity makes an irresistible appeal to all those who have been fortunate enough to escape such frightful experiences. Thus the call of the Red Cross for funds to be used in relief work in that republic can be expected to get a prompt and generous response.

MERCHANT MARINE OFFICERS

The desirability of making full use of such facilities as the government has, or such institutions as it maintains, is voiced by E. L. Jahncke, assistant secretary of war, in endorsing the idea of so increasing the annual enrollment at the naval academy at Annapolis as to provide for the training of officers in the merchant marine.

It is not a new idea, but one which has been advanced on previous occasions by the shipping board, and one which has the backing of the United States chamber of commerce. From a study of the situation, it is pointed out that while there are about 2,200 midshipmen at the academy each year it would be possible to increase that total by several hundred without adding greatly to the cost and without interfering with the present purpose of the institution.

With the navy under present limitations and those anticipated, there promises to be no need for the expansion of the academy, since the graduates last year were larger in number than could be commissioned under the limitations on officer personnel. That isn't true every year, but the opportunity for making provisions at the same institution for the training of merchant marine officials would seem to be worthwhile.

It cannot be overlooked that the country desires a merchant marine for the aid it can give the naval establishment in case of war. However much it is hoped there will be no more wars, it is impossible as yet to overlook preparations in that respect. Thus if the merchant ships are to be brought into service in case of necessity, the value of having the officer personnel of those ships trained in accord with naval methods and ready for service is not a bad one. If it is some day adopted, it will unquestionably be found to be a valuable move.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8—Senator Bingham is putting in the summer as chairman of the president's commission interested in the preservation of wild bird and animal life, and Representative Tilson is occupied in the dual role of director of the eastern headquarters of the house campaign committee and spokesman for the defense of the administration. Both are in the public eye, especially the floor leader, whose prompt, concise and pointed comments on the attacks made by the democratic national committee against the president, have drawn the attention of the whole country, on the Connecticut representative.

Tilson is giving up his vacation, and instead of spending it with his family at their Lake Sunapee camp, is putting in the time at the New York headquarters with occasional trips back here to confer with the Washington leaders at the national headquarters, as well as to confer with President Hoover. Connecticut and Vermont are the only New England states free from senatorial elections this year. New Hampshire and Maine have no party controversy on hand, Rhode Island is deep in factional trouble, and so is Massachusetts, both states are being given much careful consideration by the republican national, senatorial and house committees, although before primary and convention they abstain from supporting, at least as an organization, any specific candidate. Col. Tilson went to Maine, to "advise and consult," regarding the election there and all Washington is anxiously watching for Maine's majority to set the election pace.

This is a great year for attempted senatorial comebacks. If the five prominent democrats, now in the race for election, get in as winners, the opening day of the 72nd congress will be a close copy of a New England old home day celebration. Five recognized powerful and influential powers on the democratic side of the senate, who lost out in former re-election campaigns, are now nominees of their party. They are Gerry of Rhode Island, Hitchcock of Nebraska, Lewis of Illinois, Bayard of Delaware and Gore of Oklahoma. The possible, and in many minds, the probable election of those staunch and experienced senators, would give tremendous impetus to democratic forces in the next congress. They are men of unusual party power, and all held high committee position. To their strength must be added that of Hull of Tennessee, who is practically certain of election, for Tennessee gave the nomination hands down, and it is a sure democratic state. The outlook is that the republican senate-leaders of the 72nd congress had better sleep with one eye open if they keep abreast the "doings" that may develop on the other side of the center aisle. Just what effect the election of that group would have on the existing insurgent-democratic coalition, is a matter of speculation. Those "come-backers" and Judge Hull, are not of the meek and lowly type. Will they be willing to join hands across the aisle? That process has been pretty irksome to many democratic senators who sat by and saw the insurgents take the lead and get the glory. Bolstered up by transfusion of good old fashioned democrats, like those named, it is quite possible they would insist on standing on their solid democratic legs and taking the lead. If so it may be possible that party lines become once more discernable in the senate though it may take a powerful lens to bring them into focus.

There have been Bayards of Delaware in the senate, or in high political office since before the Revolution. Five of the family have been members of the United States senate and now Thomas F. Bayard junior, is staging a play which he hopes will land him in the seat some one of his distinguished ancestors have occupied. The first Bayard in congress was Col John B Bayard, who sat in the Continental congress. Then followed sons, nephews and other members of the family in rapid succession, until Thomas F. Bayard, Jr., was elected in 1922 only to lose out in 1928. Now he is working for re-election this fall, and hopes to make the grade. At this moment it looks as though the Delaware democrats would nominate him without primary opposition, but whether Delaware will go democratic is another question. His opponent will find Bayard a hard man to buck up against. We, who look down on the senate from the gallery of the press gods, always recall Bayard as the man with the flowing necktie. It is the sort artists are supposed to wear, when depicted in print—a big loosely tied knot, with long flowing ends, that wave gently, as he strides 'round the senate chamber.

Another expected democratic comeback, is Senator Gore of Oklahoma, on whom we recently commented. The blind Senator Gore, will strike terror to certain democratic hearts, if elected, for he's one of the driest of the dry and was one of the most outspoken of that party against Wilson and the league of nations. It was Gore who bothered the Wilson administration by introducing the Gore-McLemore resolution to stay off ships carrying ammunition. He lost out, but all the same Wilson was bitterly against him till the hour of death.

There is not likely to be much misunderstanding between the two women directors of the major parties, in the coming election. Mrs. Ross, former governor of Wyoming, and Mrs. Yost, of West Virginia, and comprehending women; they hold strongly opposed political views, but they are both women of broad minds and common sense. They realize there are always two sides to each question, and though they do not hedge regarding their opinions, they seem willing to let others have opinions of their own. That they are diplomatic goes without the saying. The proof of the pudding is in the eating. Both Mrs. Yost and Mrs. Ross are dry on the question of prohibition; yes, so dry they fairly crinkle—yet Mrs. Ross is marshalling the women forces of the democratic party which, is regarded as a wet party—and Mrs. Yost relinquished the office she held, as one of the official leaders of the W. C. T. U. to accept the high office she now holds on the republican national committee. Neither has changed her views, but they are sufficiently broad-minded politically, to make their political positions on party platforms, that will stand up under the strain of both wet and dry members of each major party.

Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, lives up to the name of "Fiery Texan" for he seldom goes the rounds without having a gun handy, even if not in sight. They tell the story how once, when he landed on some foreign shore, they asked Senator Tom if he brought any fire arms. For an answer the senator slipped out a big revolver and pointed it. He was persuaded to give it over to the officers, with their pledge that it should be given back to him, when he sailed for home. Connally is tall, dark and very good looking. He wears a conventional senatorial dignity black frock coat, and his nearest informal dress is a dark sack coat, but even that is seldom seen on him. He has a remarkable gift of remembering names and faces; he was a member of the house for several terms, and often slips over to that end of the capitol to hob-nob with his former colleagues.

SUSPENSE

Antoinette's mind was fully made up. She would not marry Ben, and nothing on earth should induce her to. Neither her mother, who doted on Ben as a son-in-law; her dad, who thought very highly of him; nor her young brother Ted, who adored him—not one of them could influence her to change her mind, once it was definitely made up.

Antoinette flung her pen down. Ben had hinted that he was going to ask her the very next time he saw her. That was the night before last, and the following morning Antoinette had received an early telephone call.

"I meant to come over tonight, dear," he had apologized. "But I have to go to New York on business right away. Won't be back for several weeks. I'll write you, Tony—"

Antoinette, who abhorred being called Tony, held back a snappy reply. No use hurting Ben's feelings too much. He was a dear, but, well, she simply couldn't marry him! Romance? As much romance in Ben as in a kitchenette.

"He's steady and reliable and he adores the ground you walk on," said Antoinette's mother.

"Hm. fancy that. He's just about as exciting as that threadbare old phrase, too," muttered Antoinette.

"You go to movies too often," laughed her father, glancing up from his paper. "I suppose you're looking for a knight in armor on a white horse."

"Gee!" Ted's eyes shone. "Ben's as good as those movie guys."

"Too bad you can't learn English instead of wasting your time telling me about Ben," suggested Antoinette loftily.

It was at this stage that Antoinette had seized her pen and gone to her room. Was any one else ever blessed with such a family? Well, when Ben sent his letter she'd have the answer all ready. The idea of thinking he could propose in a letter!

"My dear Ben," she began. No that was silly. After all, they'd been going together for months. No use hurting him like that. He was always so kind, so tender—humph! She'd tell him how much she appreciated the honor of becoming his wife, but she couldn't love him and she hoped he'd find some nice girl who did and he'd be happy—

Come to think of it, his employer had three daughters. Pretty girls, too. They liked him a lot. As if he'd look at them though! Oh, what was the use of writing him at all? Too bad he couldn't leave things as they were. He'd been such a good pal. She'd miss him a lot. But of course, marriage was different.

Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday—a full week and no word from him. And he had promised to write! Could something have happened to him? An accident? On Saturday Antoinette called his office, disguising her voice. No, he was well, but out of town. Yes, the office had had a wire just an hour ago.

"He's all right, anyway," sang Antoinette's heart. "I wonder why he doesn't write to me." Antoinette went home to a good dinner that was absolutely cheerless to her.

Another week dragged by. Ben had forgotten her! Steady, reliable Ben. He evidently had found some girl in the east. And all she had for remembrance was his picture, with that dear inscription: "To my best little pal, Tony. From Ben."

Sweet of him to call her Tony. Why, the way he said it made it more precious than all the romantic names in the world. It must be some girl in the east.

"Tony!" Antoinette jumped.

"Why, Ben! When did you come? I didn't hear you—"

"Teddy let me in. Miss me, honey? Why are you crying, Tony? I meant to write but I couldn't ask you to marry me in a letter and I couldn't talk about anything else. Tony, will you?" For answer Antoinette's bright head sank down happily upon Ben's shoulder.—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

Associated Press Staff Writer

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8—Out in Los Angeles there is a lawyer named Harris of whom the Bystander has just heard a remarkable story.

It has to do with battle psychology, and came from the lips of no less an authority than Major General Dennis Nolan, himself a valor decoration man, who observed with his own eyes a man's face fairly "illumined," as he put it, with relief when told that he was to die at his post, if necessary, that there was no chance to fall back.

It happened at Apremont, France, 12 years ago. Nolan had just taken command of a brigade of the 28th Division, Pennsylvania national guardsmen, which was facing a heavy counter attack.

The brigade line lay along the ruined village of Apremont with a series of gravel pits just ahead, all dominated by direct fire of German artillery.

The Key

Enemy guns were pounding the gravel pits mercilessly and Harris, excollege footballer of note, handpicked by Nolan's chief of staff, a former football coach, was in the center pit with six machine guns and half a hundred men.

It was the key to the whole position. It lay a couple of feet below the level of the main line where two score machine guns waited to sweep the attacking enemy over the heads of Harris and his men.

Over the telephone from his "PC" in the village ruins, Nolan talked with Harris. The youngster's voice sounded strained and jerky. Some 400 Americans were to meet the thrust of two shock regiments of German troops.

Nolan began to doubt that Harris was the man to handle that forlorn-hope advance position.

The general had another officer picked and crawled out to the gravel pit. He intended to relieve Harris. And Harris was plainly nervous as they crouched together in the pit amid the bursting shells. He had been several days in that battle. Nolan was about to make the change in command when the young emergency officer said to him:

"General, what worries me is to know just when to give up this place and fall back."

"Good grief, man, you can never do that," Nolan said. "Our own guns back there would mow you all down if you tried to get out. This place must be held to the last. There is no going back."

Relief

"And with that," Nolan said to the Bystander, "his face just beamed. It was illuminated with the relief he felt. He smiled as though I had told him he could take a day or two off and a trip to Paris.

"'Oh, I see what you mean, General,' he said. 'That eases my mind a lot. If I don't have to figure out a get away, it will be o. k. That was what was bothering me.'"

And they stuck there. No enemy got into that sand pit.

Most men who say they do the best they can, don't.

YOUR HEALTH

Ringworm Disease of The Skin

By Isaac R. Pels, M. D., Baltimore.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Ringworm is so-called because of traditional impressions or conceptions of the physical appearance of the disease on the skin. In other words, the eruption frequently is an inflammatory patch which is round, later becoming ringed by clearing (healing) in the center. This designation or characteristic does not apply necessarily to all the forms which are now recognized and diagnosed as ringworm. In fact, besides the classical types of scalp ringworm and body ringworm which are usually well-defined or circumscribed, there are many types, even on the scalp, on the body, on the groins and perineum, on the nails, on the beard, and particularly on the feet, which are definitely ringworm, because many varities of fungi and of yeasts have been found by microscopical examination to be responsible for the disease.

The elucidation of this matter has required approximately forty years; but the progress of our knowledge of these conditions has been a brilliant record, of ingenious research work and has served to clarify many erroneous impressions. Chief among these is the fact that many conditions of so-called eczema, ground itch, jockey itch, etc., have been proved to be ringworm.

The story of ringworm is a most fascinating one. In the brief space allotted for this article it can be stated that ringworm of the scalp is extremely rare in the adult; but fairly common in the adolescent and especially common in the child. This is probably due to a peculiar acquisition of immunity on the part of the adult. However, children as well as adults suffer equally from the infection on all parts of the body and of the nails, and especially of the feet.

The disease is caused by a fungus (yeast) which grows on artificial mediums in test tubes much like a mould grows on putrefying food or on moist or damp articles. It is therefore infectious as well as contagious. Thus the serious aspect of this very common disease lies in the practical and moral aspects of contagion. It is not a death-dealing or otherwise serious condition; but it is a most discomforting disease and carried the obligation of the afflicted individual not to spread it by carelessness. Despite better hygenic conditions of living, frequent bathing, etc., there has been a noticeable increase in the number of cases seen. This may be due, of course, to better diagnostic skill. Indeed if a patient complains of itching in the groin and especially of the feet, it is most probable that he has ringworm.

The sources of infection are manifold. Moisture from sweating, dampness and lack of sunlight, wet towels and moist underclothing and other wearables are all conducive to contracting the disease. The more frequent contacts of individuals indulging in sports the runways, corridors, locker-rooms, bath-rooms, bathmats, etc., are suspected sources of infection by individuals afflicted with the disease. The non-use of bath slippers, bath-mats and the promiscuous and careless process of towelling the body and the feet all probably lead to ready infection.

Cracks and fissures on moist skin areas easily invite infection. At first there may be merely sodden soft and flaky skin present; subsequently irritation develops; and finally blistering in tiny spots or as patches makes known the presence of the germ in the skin.

It is important that the sufferer see his doctor immediately and not attempt self cure. Each case is individual on account of the complications such as infection and over-irritation. Everyone may help himself, however, by doing what he can to effect proper and adequate mechanical cleansing of rooms, floors, towels, etc. and to expose wearables to continuous sunlight after boiling or other disinfection.

CHILD TRAINING

THAT FIRST SCHOOL DAY

Mary Graham Andrews

Do you think all little children look forward with great joy to the first day of school? Have you ever really given it a thought? The older the child the more difficult the transition from home life to school life. The child whose adjustments are made by way of the kindergarten has much the advantage.

It was a lovely September day of sunshine. A day to make one happy, just to be alive. Yet as I approached my school entrance, I found a little clear-eyed boy shedding great big tears. I put my arm about his shoulder and said, "Well, my little man, why are you crying?"

He gulped. "I ain't got nobody here a' tall."

"This is your first day of school, is it?" I inquired.

He nodded for the tears were coming down too fast for him to talk. Here was a picture of a hundred per cent real loneliness. I found him some playmates and went on into the corridor, still thinking of the lonely little beginner.

A loud cry reached my ears, and there was another "first dayer" clinging tightly to his mother's hand. She was trying to force him from her with rough words, though not ungentle hands. "Why, you big calf," she cried, "bawlin' this way! If you don't shut up the teacher will come and put you in the closet."

But he clung all the more tensely and cried all the louder. Then this mother in desperation took hold of her child and shook him. When she ceased her threats and humiliating shakes, the child was the picture of a hundred per cent fearful anticipation.

Now put yourself in the place of either of those children. Look with them at the throngs of strange boys and girls; hear with them the unaccustomed clatter and hum; feel the confusion of this unknown commotion and experience that lost feeling that comes because everything is strange and so different from home. No wonder the children cling to their mothers and cry to be protected in their parents' arms. No wonder some of them run home at recess. No wonder they feel, "If mother only knew how hard it is to leave her, how afraid I am, she'd never say, 'The first day of school is one of the happiest of your life.'"

Then there was a little curly-headed girl holding to her mother's hand tensely. This sympathetic mother was doing her best to calm her child but seemed almost discouraged. Finally, having entered the class room, she distracted her daughter's attention with these tactful words, "Look, Elaine, there is a picture just like you have in your room. See all these picture books on the reading table. Why, this looks much like home. Won't you have lots of fun at this sand table? I wish I could stay and play in that sand pile. Why, Elaine dear, aren't you lucky. You've found a new home, where you are going to learn so much and be happy with all these many playmates."

By this time Elaine was interested and the tears were dry.

Now the first day of school is an important one. If the memories are painful, and many of them are, a permanent dislike for school may result. The first impressions are most lasting.

Let us, then, as parents, try to get the child's point of view on this first day of school. It is plain that the first little boy was truly lonely, the second one afraid of school because of threats, and the fortunate little girl, though at first fearful, would probably always like school because her sympathetic mother had had the tact to make her feel that school was like home. Of course, not all children approach their school for the first time with feelings of loneliness or fear. Some have looked forward to this day with such happy anticipation that they are buoyed up for the transition, and if this first day is a kindergarten day, the adjustment is made easily by practically all of the children. For them, the first day of school is indeed a happy day.

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT

Habits Powerful Factors In Shaping Our Lives

"Habit is second," said Montaigne, while a great Englishman, Lord Wellington, went even further and said, "Habit is ten times nature." There is an old proverb to the effect that it is "a thousand times easier to contract a new habit than to get rid of an old one."

The philosophers of the ages have given us observations as to the power and influence of habits and no one, we believe, will doubt the expediency of cultivating good habits and shunning those that are bad. We all can follow the good advice of St. Augustine that "habits if not resisted soon become necessity."

What has all this to do with thrift?

It has very much to do with it because those who set out to practice thrift have already won half the battle against bad habits.

There is no surer way of developing a system of life that is upbuilding and progressive than by practicing thrift. If you are thrifty you are not wasting your time in idleness nor your money in dissipation. You are not doing things that are tearing down your health. On the contrary you are spending your money, your time and your energies along lines that will be to your best interests.

But good practices must not be just of the hour or of the day. They must be systematic, habitual and permanent to be of real value.

The saving of one dollar in itself does not amount to much. What really counts is the saving of one dollar regularly every month, every week or every day. It is the regularity of the practice not the amount involved that is helpful.

Learn to cultivate thrift, not for the mere saving of money, but as a habit that shall stabilize your system of living.—By S. W. Straus, President American Society for Thrift.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

Raratonga

Raratonga, remote island of the South Seas, nearest land to the passenger steamer that recently sank in the Pacific, is the subject of the following bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic society. But for the rescue by another liner, the 251 men, women, and children who were on the disabled ship would have had to make for Raratonga in open boats.

"Raratonga is the most fertile and most valuable of the Cook Islands," says the bulletin. "It might be considered the typical South Sea island of the volcanic kind—the sort of island that a connoisseur of islands would most like to see rising above his hoirzon. And it has the added attraction of possessing one of the finest tropical climates in the world. During the warm season (November to June) the temperature ranges from 74 to 84 degrees Fahrenheit, and during the cool months from 66 to 72. The abundant but not excessive rains fall mostly during the warm season and the island is well watered. A unique feature of the island is a spring that gushes from the top of a peak nearly 2,000 feet high, giving rise to the principal stream.

"The striking beauty of Raratonga arises from its sharp mountain pinnacles, the tallest of which reach 2,100 feet above the sea, and the luxuriant tropical verdure that blankets them to the top. These stage-scenery-like peaks rise in the center of the island and from them the land slopes more gently to the sea, leaving a slightly elevated shelf. The houses of the villages are built of coral whitewashed, with thatched roofs. Peeping from the rich green foliage, they add greatly to picturesqueness of the island as the observer steams along the coast.

"The island is six miles in length and slightly less in breadth. The level belt of land between the mountains and the sea is from one to three miles wide. This strip is very fertile and on it flourish coconut palms, coffee, limes and a variety of tropical fruits.

"Raratonga is on a direct line between New Zealand and Lower California, about 1,600 miles from the former. Since 1900 the island has been a possession of New Zealand along with the other Cook Islands and adjoining islets. Raratonga is about the same distance south of the Equator as central Cuba and Honolulu are north of it. Some 6,000 people live on the Cook Islands, including 300 Europeans. About a third of the entire population lives on Raratonga. Its chief settlement, Averuna, is the seat of government for the islands within a radius of 250 miles.

"The natives of Raratonga became Christianized in 1821. Avaruna now has a training school for missionaries maintained by the London Missionary society. In this little town of 875 people is a hospital, a wireless station, and even a telephone system."

BEEF CATTLE OUST COTTON AS CASH CROP IN ALABAMA

SEALE, Ala. (AP)—Cotton has lost its place as the "money crop" on a large Alabama plantation.

Beef cattle provide the cash for operating the 1,800 acre Bradley Nuckolls farm near here. Cotton formerly was grown on the farm, but cattle are found more profitable. Hogs also are raised for the market.

Enough feed for the cattle and hogs is raised, with some to spare to the markets. Oats, peas, vetch, velvet beans, peanuts, artichokes and potatoes are the principal crops.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Russell Manufacturing Co., Inc., Middletown.

The Russell Manufacturing company was incorporated in 1834, and therefore, has had almost a hundred years of existence.

It was the original manufacturer of elastic suspender webbing in this country, and at its inception had to make this elastic webbing from unvulcanized rubber, which, of course, varied in its action according to weather conditions, becoming hard and brittle in cold weather and very soft and gummy in hot weather. The rubber thread was at the mercy of the weather in their own factory.

The invention of vulcanization by Charles Goodyear changed conditions very materially and made the use of rubber in fabrics a commercial proposition on a large scale. However, it has been only within the last few years that great progress has been made in the lasting qualities of rubber. It is a common idea that the life of rubber is comparatively short, but the developments in the last two years in the rubber field have entirely changed this condition. This has been brought about largely by the research work which has been done on rubber thread for automobiles.

The Russell Manufacturing company has followed these developments very closely, and are now manufacturing rubber thread which will give very long service, will withstand washing, and when used in connection with a garment, will outwear the life of the garment itself.

The public will have to be educated to this new development in the rubber industry. With this development comes many new uses for rubber in garments that would have been impossible a few years ago.

The present officers are: T. M. Russell, president; Samuel Russell, Jr., vice president; William C. Fisher, treasurer and general manager; P. J. Goldner, secretary.

GAVE CORN BORER AND SILO FILLING DEMONSTRATION

A corn-cutting demonstration for controlling the European corn borer and a silo filling demonstration held Monday by the New London County Farm bureau proved very successful. They were held at the farm of Fred M. Abell of Lebanon. There were during the day over 150 farmers in attendance.

The corn borer control demonstration was under the supervision of Frank Irons, of Toledo, Ohio. He showed the use of a low cutting device for corn harvesters. The equipment used was owned by the U. S. department of agriculture and operated by employes of the corn borer control force.

The use of several hand-cutting tools was shown. These were specially constructed axes and hoes for cutting corn very low. It was pointed out that where corn was cut very low practically 90 per cent of the borers could be controlled if they were present in the field.

One of the interesting phases of the demonstration was the silo filling demonstration. The point which was emphasized was the speed by which corn could be hauled to the cutter. On many New London county farms the hauling of corn has been an expensive operation in silo filling, as many farmers use high wagons and tip carts.

In this demonstration the hauling equipment used was two home-made low down wagons owned by Fred Abel and Albert Hoxie, two old touring cars owned by George Beckwith and Stanley Armstrong, with home-made trailers and a two-ton truck owned by Kahn Bros. The length of haul from the field to the silo was seven-tenths of a mile.

The time required to load, haul to silo, unload and return to the field for the low trailer and truck was 19 minutes, the low wagon 41 minutes, the high truck 53 minutes and high wagon 79 minutes. This time includes the total number of minutes of man labor on the respective rigs. The elapsed time for the truck and trailer to make a round trip was 12 minutes compared to 20 minutes for the high truck, 38 minutes for the low wagon and 48 minutes for the high wagon. The two high rigs required more man labor than did the lower ones.

It was found that the actual cost of the high wagon was 30 cents more per load than the low one. This, in the course of a season, amounts to many dollars.

Larrabee, president of the Eastern Connecticut council with headquarters at the Thayer building in Norwich. REPUBLICANS OF 20TH DISTRICT ELECT DELEGATES

The 20th senatorial, or "shoestring" district convention of the republican party was held Monday noon in the town hall at the court house in this city. George H. Bradford, high sheriff of New London county, and Mrs. Maud P. Manning were re-elected members of the republican state central committee. Mrs. Manning and Curtis Brown of Colchester were named delegates at large to the republican state convention to be held at Hartford.

Fred A. Beckwith, former state senator, of East Lyme, was the chairman of the convention. In the course of his remarks he said he was proud of New London county and he paid a glowing tribute to Ernest E. Rogers of New London, who is seeking the republican nomination for governor. "He is a man we all want to know," he said, "and a person whom we meet in all walks of life. Both in business and in politics he has begun at the foot of the ladder and has worked himself up. Every office he has held, he has filled with great credit. I trust and hope that he will be nominated," the speaker said in closing amidst much applause.

In regard to Mr. Rogers' views toward prohibition and liquor, Mr. Beckwith told of a recent interview with him on this subject. Mr. Rogers had told him, Mr. Beckwith said, that he had never used liquor and indicated that he saw no reason to begin.

Mr. Beckwith predicted that Mr. Bradford would be elected to the office of high sheriff of the county in November. D. W. Pitcher was clerk of the convention and Rev. G. F. Goodenough of Jewett City was named a vice president to attend the state convention. Others appointed to represent the district on various committees at the state convention follow:

On permanent organization—Henry Stahle, Stonington; rules—Thomas Ball, Old Lyme; credentials—John Clark, Lebanon; resolutions—Alfred N. Bingham, Salem.

After the convention the delegates were guests of Sheriff Bradford at a dinner at the Wauregan hotel. There were 29 men and one woman present.

PRESTON VOTES CHANGE IN ELECTION TERM

According to the vote taken Saturday at a special town meeting by the electors of the town of Preston, which was held in the town hall, the town will adopt the two-year term for its officials, instead of electing every year. This will apply to the three selectmen, two registrars of voters, collector of taxes, six constables, six grand jurors and agent of town deposit fund.

Another change voted was to elect the three members of town school board in such a way that one will be elected for one year, one for two years and one for three years. Formerly all were elected for one year.

The meeting voted to build a section of new road from Preston Plains to the Griswold-Preston town line by way of Preston City during the coming year. It is expected that about a mile will be built. Annual reports of the town officers were presented and accepted and the care of the highways was put in the hands of the selectmen. The selectmen were also directed and authorized to pay off $45,000 on the town bonds due on July 1, 1931. It was also voted to apply to the state for the town's allotment of state-aid money, which it is believed will amount to about $8,000 this year.

The salaries of town officers were voted the same as last year and when the question of uncollected taxes was brought up it was voted to abate those which are uncollectible, but collect all others.

Delegate to Convention

John F. Jones, of Canterbury road, Norwich Town, is in Cleveland, Ohio, this week as a delegate to the National Convention of Power Engineers being held in that city fom Sept. 5 to 12.

THE NEXT FLOWER SHOW MIGHT BE HELD IN NORWICH

If Charles M. Watt's suggestion were accepted, the next flower show in Eastern Connecticut might be held in Norwich. Mr. Watt is a very modest man, as are all men of ability; but he is one of "authority," like the man in the Scriptures, since he is superintendent of the great 800-acre estate of Henry Bradley Plant, at Eastern Point, having about 40 men under his supervision.

Mr. Watt spoke favoring a flower show in Norwich, as he pointed out the features of the annual show of the New London Horticultural society cooperating with the Garden club, held Friday and Saturday at New London armory for the benefit of the Carolyn Black Memorial garden, being developed at Connecticut college.

Mr. Watt is chairman and secretary of the Horticultural society and the varied specimens of choice flowers and vegetables from the Plant estate, Branford House, formed a big factor in the success of the display. Besides this purely local interest, Mr. Watt is promoting the International Peace Garden, projected somewhere along the boundary of the U. S. and Canada, as introduced at the Toronto convention of the National Association of Gardeners, in 1929. This marvellous project implies a showing of every known specimen of bloom and would mean an expenditure of $5,000,000. It has been suggested that every adult give 25 cents toward it and each child 5 cents. As a starter in this vicinity, Mr. Watt has inaugurated a branch in New London which already numbers, 20 gardeners and flower-lovers.

Those willing to give the idea their support are being asked to so inform the National Association of Gardeners, 522 Fifth avenue, New York.

The New London Flower show was of great merit. The arrangement of the entries was effective and there were some fine blossoms on display.

A former Norwich resident, Waterman F. Brown, from his 40,000 hills in his Uncas Dahlia Farm, Uncasville, sent a new and unnamed seedling bloom which won much attention—a large showy dahlia in salmon and cream. It got the most attention of the fine display which Mr. Brown entered from the 500 varieties which he is growing.

Naturally, the entries from the Plant estate included the choicest varieties of roses, lilies, gladioli, asters asparagus ferns that were a sight in themselves, novelties in blooms such as "red hot pokers," the latest in dahlias, and the like.

There were many novelties in the exhibits which kept the gallery of visitors interested and in many cases surprised. Nurseries and florists showed a wide variety of decorative evergreens, garden ornaments, etc., in one instance such a display setting off a fine collections of glads from the Stanley farm, Montville. There were clever arrangements for luncheon, breakfast and dinner floral decorations, one of these being a great bowl of white dahlias against a foil of privet and Cuban laurel entered by Mrs. Mary V. Burgess, of Lighthouse Inn. For a table gayly decorated by the two young women at the "Russian Rooster," Miss Dorothy Henkle and Miss Loretta Murnane, a blue ribbon was the reward. A handsome basket sent from the Norwich Inn and already referred to, received a prize of $2.50 worth of gladioli bulbs.

A coveted medal rewarded C. M. Watt's arrangement of vegetables from the Plant gardens. Little Miss Amy Plant won honors for a dainty arrangement of straw flowers and other children made fine displays. Mlle. Renee Varicle had a notably good collection of phlox, and choice entries came from the Harkness estate. Oak of Jerusalem sent by A. L. Bunner was a novelty.

Among the judges of the flowers were Miss Amy L. Cogswell and Miss Harriet Roosevelt Trumbull, of Norwich.

The officials of the show were: From New London Horticultural society, C. M. Watt, chairman and secretary; W. H. Bowker, treasurer; A. Becan, manager; H. S. Schlink, publicity manager. Assisting committee, W. F. Brown, W. Turner, J. H. Frampton, J. Betties. Ladies' Garden club committee, Mrs. Ernest E. Rogers, Mrs. Ellery Allyn, Mrs. David Banks, Mrs. Clifford Belden, Mrs. Wilson Brown, Mrs. George . Brown, Mrs. Philip Z. Hankey, Mrs. Harry Learned, Mrs. Charles Sackett, Miss Renee Varicle, Mrs. William Waterman, Mrs. William Z. White.

19TH DISTRICT REPUBLICANS NAME THEIR DELEGATES

Delegates from Norwich, Preston and Ledyard were present at the 19th senatorial district convention of the republican party held Monday afternoon at one o'clock at the court house in this city. The convention was harmonious, there being no contests over nominations to the state central committee and the meeting lasted less than 15 minutes.

Albert J. Bailey and Mrs. Frank A. Mitchell were re-elected to the state central committee. Mr. Bailey was nominated by Mayor Lee Roy Robbins and Mrs. Mitchell was nominated by George M. Charbonneau. The terms of office are for two years. Following their re-election to the state central committee, Mr. Bailey and Mrs. Mitchell were escorted to the hall by Mr Charbonneau.

Mrs. Mitchell thanked the convention for the honor given her, stating that she had been a member of the state central committee for some years. She intimated that this may be her last term on the state central committee. Mrs. Mitchell paid tribute to Mr. Bailey who, she said, had carried on with most of the work.

Mr. Bailey also briefly addressed the convention and invited the delegates to the Wauregan hotel as his guests at a luncheon. William I. Allyn of Ledyard, was chairman of the convention and F. Russell Smith was the convention clerk. Joseph C. Worth of this city and Mrs. William I. Allyn of Ledyard were named delegates at large to the state convention, to represent the district. Others from this district who will serve at the state convention are: Vice president, George M. Charbonneau, Norwich; permanent organization, Arthur E. Smith, Preston; credentials, Charles W. Cassidy, Norwich; rules, J. Guy Ayer, Preston; resolutions, Mayor Lee Roy Robbins, Norwich.

RILEY SPRINGS SURPRISE IN KILLINGLY CAUCUS

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 8—The major political surprise in Killingly town politics in a decade was sprung in a crowded democratic caucus tonight when Patrick Riley, Dayville, in years gone by a selectman here for several terms, defeated Alcott D. Sayles of East Killingly, present democratic member of the board of selectmen and the holder of that office the greater part of the time for upwards of a quarter of a century. In the contest for the nomination for first selectman on the democratic ticket Riley received 192 votes, Sayles 170. It developed after the caucus that Riley who has not held office for a long term of years and was apparently out of the political picture has by himself and through his friends been quietly working for the nomination for some time past. However, the result came as a great surprise to a majority of the voters of the town. Louis O. Stone was nominated for second selectman without contest. The other nominations were as follows: Assessor, Frank J. Gorman; board of relief, Joseph Halle; auditor, Miss Marguerite Dunn; collector of taxes, James R. Walsh, present incumbent; constables, Harry E. Lathrop, Arthur Gauthier, Louis O. Stone, John Higgins; registrars, Labia J. Gorman, A. J. Cavanaugh, James P. Aldrich; town school committee, Joseph LaBelle, Amos E. Hall. The caucus permitted the nominations for town clerk and treasurer and agent of the town deposit fund to go by default. These offices for more than 40 years have been held by Frank T. Preston, republican, who will be renominated by his party at its caucus on Thursday evening. A. J. Cavanaugh was chairman of the caucus and Leo Vienn was clerk.

MONEY TO BE MADE BY HOME CANNING AROUSES HOUSEWIVES

Higher Prices Loom for Canned Goods Bought Next Winter

All over the country women are realizing that if they put up fruit now they will have extra money in their purses next winter. Even the newlywed is being attracted by the unusually low price of pure cane sugar and choice fruit and is pleasantly surprised at the ease in putting up a nice variety of preserves, jellies and jams.

For the woman who takes pride in her menus, there is real satisfaction in putting a quivering colorful mold of her own home-made jelly on the table. And if she appreciates the value of fruit in the balanced diet, she will be happy in the fact that her shelves are well stocked with preserved pears, plums, peaches or other fruits.

Sweet pickles and relishes made of cucumbers, tomatoes, cabbage or watermelon rind are also inexpensive and easy to preserve. Their spicy tart-sweet goodness encourages the consumption of essential foods such as meat, fish and vegetables. Good food promotes good health. The Sugar Institute.

WORLD'S SERIES WILL OPEN ON GROUNDS OF AMER. LEAGUE CLUB OCT 1

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—(AP)—The first act in the 1930 world series will be staged Wednesday, Oct. 1, in the park of the team winning the American league championship, undoubtedly the Philadelphia Athletics.

This was decided today at the annual pre-world series conference in the office of Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis.

The second game likewise will be played at the home of the American league pennant winner, with games three, four and five at the park of the National league champion. If two more games are necessary, they will be played in the American league champion's park.

Prices will be the same as last year and ticket applications will be accepted effective next Monday, Sept. 15. The price scale, including tax, will be: Boxes, $6.60; grand stand reserved, $5.50; general admission, $3, and bleachers, $1. Tickets will be sold only in blocks of three as last year.

If the Chicago Cubs or St. Louis Cardinals win the National league pennant, one day will intervene between the second and third games. If Brooklyn or New York win, the series will be played on consecutive days barring rain.

All tie games will be re-played in the park where they occurred unless they do not affect the outcome. As usual, the team winning four games will win the series.

All games will start, as usual, at 1:30 p. m., eastern standard time.

Only once in the history of modern baseball has the world series opening been slated earlier than this year. The exception came in the war year, 1918, when the series opened Sept. 5. In 1903 and 1919, the autumnal baseball classic opened Oct. 1. The latest opening was Oct. 17 in 1910.

Representatives of all clubs with mathematical pennant chances were invited to the meeting today but the Washington Senators and the New York Giants did not accept. The Senators were all but out of the running in the American league, trailing the world championship Athletics by six and one-half games. The Giants still retained a chance, trailing the leading Cubs by four games.

The Athletics were represented at the conference by President Thomas Shibe and Secretary R. J. Schroeder while the championship Cubs were represented by President William Veeck. Other representatives were President Frank D. York, Brooklyn, and Treasurer Will O. DeWitt, St. Louis. Presidents John Heydler and E. S. Barnard represented the National and American leagues, respectively.

A day of traveling in event of a St. Louis or Chicago victory in the National league pennant race was regarded as a break for the Athletic pitching staff as it would give them a chance to rest their pitchers and give their two stars, "Lefty" Grove and George Earnshaw an extra fling in the classic.

Names of eligible players will be released next week by the respective leagues.

ACTION PROMISED IN DANIELSON AMATEUR SHOW

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 8—Wednesday evening of this week, weather permitting, a fine card of amateur boxing bouts will be put on at the North Street arena here. There will be eight of these bouts, with Gene Billings of Goodyear and Eddie Young in the star bout. This fight will be in the 148 lbs. class. Both of these boys are go-get-'em fighters, and thrillers in action.

The semi-final should be a hummer also with Patsy Flynn of Worcester facing Jack LeBrun, the Warwick, R. I., woodchopper. Here are two more battering ram fighters, and if the bout goes the three-round limit the fans will get the benefit of their price of admission on that one alone.

Six other good bouts will make up the card, which shapes up to afford a great evening of entertainment.

William Leo, Danielson high school student who made such a sensationally successful debut here last week, will be in there again, this time battling with Gene Moore of Worcester.

HERMAN AND KLEIN LOSE GROUND IN BIG SIX RACE

By the Associated Press

Babe Herman and Chuck Klein were the only members of baseball's Big Six to get into action yesterday but instead of gaining on their idle rivals, each lost ground. Herman made nine trips to the plate to pound out three hits with the result that his batting average fell down to .392. Klein was credited with eight official times at bat and two hits—a performance that knocked two points off his average, leaving it at .384.

ROBINS GO INTO 3RD PLACE BY BEATING PHILLIES TWICE

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 8—(AP)—The National league pennant race was drawn a little tighter today as the Brooklyn Robins won a double header from the Phillies, moving into third place, only three and one-half games back of the pace-setting Chicago Cubs. The Brooklyn-Philadelphia games were the only contests scheduled in either of the major leagues.

Two big innings in each game and a brilliant hurling exhibition by Ray Moss in the opener gave the Robins the first encounter 8 to 2 and the nightcap 11 to 4. Moss was the whole show for the Robins in the first fuss, holding the Phillies to four hits while his mates hammered Hansen and Phillips to all corners of the ball park, scoring five runs in the fifth to take the lead, and eventually the game.

The second contest was a close battle until the seventh frame, when the Dodgers smashed six runs across the plate, driving Willoughby from the mound. J. Elliott had held the Phillies in check until their half of the seventh, when he weakened and Thurston was rushed to the rescue. The veteran blanked the home team for the remainder of the battle, while H. Elliott followed Sweetland on the mound for the Phillies.

STARS OF YESTERYEAR PLAY AGAIN

BOSTON, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Back from the farm and fireside came almost two score of baseball's heroes to engage in an "old timers'" game, here, today, which a team composed of old Boston players won 8 to 4. The opponents of the Boston immortals were an aggregation of some of the outstanding stars of baseball history playing under the name of "The All-Stars."

Cy Young, one of the greatest of pitchers, got credit for the victory after holding the Stars hitless during the one inning he pitched. The loss of the game was charged up to Ed Walsh, former White Sox star, who now has two sons in the national pastime, although Walsh was but one of five pitchers who hurled for the All-Stars.

The activity on the playing field brought back memories to 30,000 fans who saw Tris Speaker, Harry Hooper and Duffy Lewis pulling down flies in the outfield for Boston, and it seemed like old times when, in the opening inning, Lewis galloped to the left field wall to pull down "Home Run" Baker's drive. One incident carried back further than the memories of many of the fans as Patsy Donovan, an outfielder in 1890, singled when he batted for Bill Dineen.

The old Athletics infield was in there, Stuffy McInnis, Eddie Collins, Jack Barry and Baker. Even Candy LaChance, whose moustache was the envy of the other big leaguers back in 1903, was back at first base for Boston.

Ty Cobb played for both teams, holding down centerfield for the "All-Stars" for seven innings and then switching sides to bat for the genial Hank Gowdy in the eighth. The once demon hitter either grounded or flied out on his four trips to the plate.

(A new synthetic chewing gum made from benzene and chlorine has been produced by scientists.—News Item).

American Chemical Society
Gentlemen:

I read with interest your startling announcement that you had produced a new chewing gum from benzene and chlorine. Being an inveterate user of chewing gum and always looking for a new flavor I wonder if you would be kind enough to send me a sample of your new gum. The flavor of benzene is more or less familiar to me as my boy friend insists that I take a gin rickey with him now and then. I am very anxious to know how benzene and chlorine blend as a flavor in chewing gum. I am certain that it would be a decided improvement over some of the present day flavors which are so widely advertised and which leave so much to your imagination.

Can you recommend its quality in regard to snapping as loudly as Chicle gum when you chew it. Gum that don't snap is not popular either with the girls or the children. Can you guarantee that you can make bubbles with it for you know bubble making with gum is one of the delights of the great American shop girl.

Another thing. Can you guarantee that it will stick to marble table tops in restaurants and to the bottoms of theatre chairs? Gum that doesn't stick well is not at all popular. Who wants to park their gum under a restaurant table and then find it has dropped onto the floor when the meal is over. A fault like this would be a decided drawback to the sale of your new gum as it would prove too expensive for the average girl. Can it be used to repair rubbers, stop leaks in hot-water bottles, and stick on rubber heels? If it can do these things I think you have a salable product, otherwise I advise you to leave the industry in the hands of Mr. Wrigley.

Hoping for an early reply and sample I remain,

MAMIE.

MITCHELL BEGINS DUTIES AT KILLINGLY HIGH SCHOOL

Raymond E. Mitchell of Westerly began last week his duties as physical director of the Killingly high school in Danielson. He is a Westerly boy who graduated from the Westerly high school in the class of 1928, with a record of having made four letters in baseball, three letters in football, three in track and one in basketball. Director Mitchell graduated from Springfield college in 1930, where he made three letters on the cross country team, one in track and also made his numerals in football in his freshman year. He was president of the cross country club and a member of the Hilder-Brant Square and Compass club of Springfield. He was also a member of the Varsity club and of the College relay team for two years.

In Danielson he will reside with his wife, who was Miss Beth Baker of Springfield, Mass., in furnished apartments on Main street. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Mitchell, reside in Westerly.

RUMORS THAT WRIGLEY INTERESTS WANT TOR. TEAM

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 8—(AP)—Rumors were current here today that Allan Ross, of the Canadian Wrigley company, was negotiating for the purchase of the Toronto club of the International league. The team is owned by Lawrence Solman, of Toronto.

William Wrigley, Jr., owner of the Chicago Cubs, is believed to be backing the negotiations of Mr. Ross.

The Wrigley interests already control the Reading club in the International league and the Los Angeles club in the Pacific Coast league, both held as "farms" for the development of young players. Complications might arise from the ownership by the Wrigley interests of both the Reading and Toronto teams in the same league.

CINCY REDS BUY OWNIE CARROLL FROM TOLEDO

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Owen Carroll, former Detroit and New York American leaguer, has been purchased from the Toledo club of the American Association, President Sidney Weil of the Cincinnati Reds, said tonight.

Carroll, who went from Holy Cross to Detroit, was traded to New York with Harry Rice and George Wuestling in exchange for Mark Koenig and Waite Hoyt. The Yankees later sold him to Toledo.

Waurengan Wins Two Games.

The Waurengan Independents won both week end games with very little opposition in either game, collecting a total of 35 hits in 16 innings.

Saturday the Indies traveled to Sterling and with Gilbeault allowing but three hits and his teammates giving him good support, defeated them 9-2. The score:

Sterling All Stars 000 200 000—2 3 3
Waurengan Indies 012 211 02x—9 20 1

Sunday they defeated the American Legion of Taftville 13 to 1 on the Waurengan grounds with a good attendance present. Messier pitched very good ball and with the good support of his teammates allowed but four hits, the Indies collecting 15 hits off Walkosky, pitching for the visitors. The Indies wish to hear from some strong team and would like to play Attawaugan or Dayville, and wishes to have these managers call 372-13 and ask for Manager David Deloge.

The score by innings:
American Legion 010 000 000— 1 4 5
Independents 030 130 15x—13 15 3

Reporter Misinformed.

The reporter, who stated in Monday's Bulletin that James Troland had received the telegram from Lefty Dugas telling of Lefty's being recalled by the Pittsburgh Pirates, was misinformed according to Middy Dugas, brother of the illustrious Lefty. The circumstances were that the telegram was sent to Lefty Dugas' family in Taftville and not to Mr. Troland as was stated. Those who have followed Lefty's career as a ball player claim that he got his start toward a big league berth in the Blackstone Valley league, and not on the sand lots of Taftville.

FARRELL AND HORTON SMITH LEAD FIELD IN P. G. A. QUALIFYING ROUND WITH 145

By BRIAN BELL

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

FLUSHING, N. Y., Sept. 8. —(AP)— Thirty-two professional golfers from every section of the country won their first battle over the hard Fresh Meadow golf course today to qualify for the P. G. A. championship which continues to the match play stage tomorrow. Thirty-one crack pros failed to qualify in the 36-hole test which continued from early morning until darkness was settling.

Johnny Farrell and Horton Smith, with 36-hole totals of 145, led the field, a distinction carrying honor but no prize money, and Leo Diegel, the defending champion, furnished the excitement.

Farrell and Smith played good, sound golf with scores of 72-73 and 73-72, but Leo uncorked a typical Diegel round. He staggered in after the morning round with a score of 81. The titleholder was unworried but his friends were in a mild panic.

Diegel went out in the afternoon and returned a score of 69, equalling the course record, and two strokes below any other qualifier.

Everyone, including Diegel, expected his score to be 67 as he stood on the 18th tee. He came to the home hole, a fairly easy four, needing only one more par to break the record, but he took a six here, after a visit to a trap and a weak putt.

Charlie Guest led the morning round with 71. Harry Cooper, of Chicago, in the afternoon, had 71. Guest and Cooper tied for third with 146, and Charley Lacey, Philadelphia, and Mark Fry, Oakland, Calif., tied for fifth with 147.

Earl Fry followed his brother, Mark, into the select 32 with a 36-hole score of 152.

Burke scored a par four at the extra hole. Walter Beamish, Genese, N. Y.; Charley Hall, Birmingham, Ala.; Ed McElliott, Sioux Falls, S. D.; Jimmy Hines, New York, and Walter Murray, Gary, Ind., took five each and lost out.

The players in the play-off had totals of 158 for the day. All players registering 157 or better qualified without the extra effort.

Hall, the long driving southerner, was too long today and had four balls out of bounds, accounting for eight strokes. This streak of wildness cost him a place in the match play.

Charley Lacey, the young British pro from Pine Valley, had to borrow clubs from one of his playing companions, as he broke two on his morning round.

Pairings for the first round of match play: Seavill vs. Watrous; Lacey vs. Guest; Samson vs. Ershman; Diegel vs. Ciuci; Armour vs. Hackney; Kenney vs. Shave; Shute vs. Frank; Farrell vs. Norman Smith; Sarazen vs. Schneider; Cox vs. Crowley; Mehlhorn vs. Cooper; Mark Fry vs. Espinosa; Johnson vs. Kirkwood; Golden vs. Collins; Burke vs. Horton Smith; Ayton vs. Early Fry.

MEEHAN DEPENDING ON FLEET BALL CARRIERS

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(AP)—The hopes and fears of John F. ("Chick") Meehan, moulder of mighty football machines at New York university, rest this fall on a quartet of sophomore ball carriers and a powerful, veteran line.

Ever since Ken Strong took his diploma and headed for the fields of professional sport and Cowboy Hill was accidentally shot to death in 1929, the rampaging Violets have struggled along without the combination of a fleet ball carrier and husky interferer so vital to the Meehan style of play. Last fall the eleven went nowhere at a rapid pace.

Meehan now believes he has struck the combination again. He has a husky young sophomore, Jim Tanguay, from Syracuse, N. Y., who can kick, pass and run. Furthermore he can blast the way if necessary for three other crack sophomore backs, Bob McNamara, of Wellesley, Mass.; Jack McDonald, of Dedham, Mass., and Joe LaMark, of Coraopolis, Pa. There are a host of veteran backs available but the spark of attack seems to rest with the newcomers.

The veteran Meehan line, wheeling on beautiful precision in and out of hurdles, would delight any football coach. Captain Jerry Nemecek and Charles Marshall are on the ends, Ernest Concannon and Dick Murphy in the tackles, George Sargisson and George Chalmers, at guard, and Harry Schneider, center. Replacements are big and plentiful.

Although everyone at N. Y. U. is too full of the recent tragedy to think of any redeeming feature, the Violet machine of 1930 probably will have a 12th member in the vital struggles and the crucial moments when the outcome of a game rests on one more big effort. The memory of Al Lassman, greatest of the Violet athletic heroes, who, crippled by a football injury, gave his life this summer to save three small boys from drowning, is certain to spur the team on.

The schedule this year, as in the past, is crowded with rugged opposition. The eleven will face Hobart Sept. 27; W. Va. Wesleyan, Oct. 4; Villanova, Oct. 11; Missouri, Oct. 18; Fordhame, Oct. 25; Carnegie Tech at Pittsburgh, Nov. 1; Georgia, Nov. 8; Georgetown, Nov. 15, and Rutgers, Nov. 22.

REDS RECALL FOUR PLAYERS FROM MINORS

CINCINNATI, Sept. 8.—(AP)—In accordance with major league baseball rules that players on option shall be recalled before Sept. 15, Sidney Weil, president of the Cincinnati Reds, today drew back four players from the minors. They were Marvin Gudat, pitcher, from Peoria, Three Eye league, and Estil Crabtree, outfielder, and Al Eckert and Archie Campbell, pitchers, all from Columbus in the American association.

DUWELLS AWARDED PENNANT IN JUNIOR LEAGUE

At a meeting of the Junior league executive board, held last night at the Duwell club, the Rotary-Duwell game played last Tuesday, which resulted in a protest on the part of the Rotary, was awarded to the Duwells. This decision gives the league pennant to the Duwells with nine victories and one defeat while the Rotary and Elks are tied for second place with seven wins and three losses.

In arriving at a decision, the board found grounds for protest on the part of the Rotary club but, due to the lateness of the season, the inability to play any more twilight games and the fact that the Rotary, even if they won the next game with the East Siders, would have to win another play-off game to break the tie which would then occur, decided to end the season with the Duwells as official winners.

The Duwells are now making plans for their trip to New York, the prize promised the winner of the league pennant. It is probable that the boys will make the trip this coming Friday, visiting the Giants at the Polo Grounds. If suitable arrangements cannot be made for this week, they will go down sometime the following week.

BITGOOD WILL COACH BASKETBALL AT ACADEMY

Paul F Bitgood, the new director of health at the Academy, who will assume his duties with the opening of school tomorrow, will also coach basketball at the school, according to an announcement Monday evening by Principal Henry A. Tirrell. Mr. Bitgood, a native of Danielson, starred in athletics at Killingly high school and at Connecticut Agricultural college, where he coached in varsity track and freshman basketball last year. He also took a one-year course at Springfield college.

Mr. Bitgood gives the Academy a man capable of placing basketball on a high plane at the school, for he has had much experience, both as player, coach and official.

With the completion of the Norton Memorial gymnasium the school is in a position for big things in the court game. Basketball was first introduced at the school in 1927 and continued until last winter when it was decided to drop the sport for a year. William C. McKean, then physical director at the Y, coached the first team and Courtland Whitney, present football coach at the Academy, the next two.

CARNERA KNOCKS OUT McCARTHY IN SECOND

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 8.—(AP)—Primo Carnera knocked out Pat McCarthy of Boston in the second round of a ten-round bout tonight. A right to the jaw ended the bout after McCarthy had gone down for counts of one and nine in the same round. Carnera weighed 265; McCarthy 214.

McCarthy was no match for the Ambling Alp at any time. In the first round, he avoided considerable punishment by clutching Carnera at every opportunity and even so suffered some damage about the body.

Early in the second round the Boston heavyweight went down for a short count and then for a long one of nine. As he got up, Carnera rushed in and ripped home several lefts to the head. They sparred for a moment and then, in a close exchange, Carnera ended the battle with a terrific right to the jaw. The round lasted one minute and 16 seconds.

A crowd of 13,000 paid $23,000 to see the brief battle.

ROSE CITY STARS LOSE TO THREAD CITY TEAM

Norwich City league stars were nosed out in Willimantic Sunday in ten innings by the Willimantic Stars, 7-6.

Eddie Nevins started for the Rose City Stars and went well for three innings, but became wild and was relieved by Tombari who pitched nice ball for the remainder of the game. Haggerty, who started for Willimantic, fared no better and was relieved by Russ Fisher, of Hartford, in the fourth.

Fisher pitched good ball until the ninth when the Rose City boys pounded him for three doubles and a single, taking the lead. The Willimantic boys tied it up in their turn at bat and then won out in the tenth. Sucka and Meikle led the Willimantic team at bat getting 7 of their eight hits between them.

Eddie Hamill, E. Lemieux and Jab Burns each counted two apiece.

FANS SHOW LITTLE INTEREST IN SINGER-MCLARNIN BOUT

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.— (AP)— The psychology of Joe Fight Fan, always a puzzle to matchmakers and promoters, has the officials of Madison Square Garden staggering these days.

When young Al Singer, newly crowned lightweight champion, pleaded for a chance to prove his worth to the sceptical by measuring socks with Jimmy McLarnin the Garden leaped at the opportunity to stage what looked to be the biggest "money shot" of the outdoor season. Singer, a Jewish boy following in the footsteps of the idolized Benny Leonard, has a tremendous following among the faithful of his race. McLarnin, the socking Celt, is one of the greatest drawing cards in the game, a puncher who draws them alike to see him win or to hope he loses.

Yet three days before the ten-round match, scheduled for Thursday night in the Yankee stadium, the Garden management is still waiting for the fans to storm the ticket offices demanding space in the ball yard. The gate, originally forecast at $300,000, now has dwindled to estimates of half that and less.

While McLarnin, considered the uncrowned king of the welterweights, is a favorite at 2 to 1, much of the "wise money" will ride on Singer. Both boys are due to wind up training Wednesday in camps outside of New York.

FABER IN DANGER OF SUSPENSION FOR YEAR

Joe Faber, local boy who is playing second base for Omaha in the Western league, faces one year's suspension from organized baseball for participating in a game against an ineligible player in the Southeastern Iowa tournament at Council Bluffs last week. It seems that Faber, with three other Omaha players and one from Denver, which is another Western league club, took an open date and participated in this tourney.

The ineligible player was Catcher Ralph Brandon, who had jumped a contract with Danville of the Three-I league.

Under Rule 30, Section 1 of the rules of organized ball all five players are subject to suspension for one year but Manager Spencer Abbott of Omaha feels that the players are entirely guiltless of violating knowingly the rules of organized ball and that everything will be straightened out.

Faber has been enjoying one of his best seasons, having only recently been named on the All-Star league team while Lefty Dugas, another local athlete, and of Wichita, was placed at right field.

Dugas, incidentally, is practically certain of gaining the league batting crown. The season closes tomorrow and up to last Friday when the last official averages were released Lefty had a lead of 11 points over his nearest rival. He possessed the mark of .362. Lefty's team has won the pennant.

LOTT IS BEATEN BY WILLIAMS IN TENNIS TOURNEY

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 8.—(AP)—A prey to his own erratic temperament and the hair-trigger strokes of his famous opponent, Young George Lott, of Chicago, went down to surprising defeat at the hands of the veteran, Richard N. Williams, in the second round of the national tennis singles championship this afternoon. The scores were, 7-9, 7-5, 7-5, 6-1.

Preceded only by Big Bill Tilden and Wilmer Allison on the list of "seeded" American favorites, Lott had been generally expected to win without difficulty from the Philadelphia sharpshooter, who held this title back in 1914 and 1916. Now 39 years old, Williams was not even included among the seeded entrants.

PENN'S HOPES DEPEND ON STRENGTH OF LINE

CAPE MAY, N. J., Sept. 7.—(AP)—Pennsylvania's hopes for a successful football season this fall depend on the strength of its line.

If the new head coach, J. R. Ludlow Wray, and his aides, can weld a strong forward wall out of the inexperienced material available, Penn adherents look for a national ranking eleven on the banks of the Schuylkill. Such formidable opponents as Wisconsin, Kansas, Notre Dame, Georgia Tech, Cornell and Navy are on the schedule.

In the bracing air of Penn's seaside camp the process of sifting and testing is already well under way. With the exception of Paul Riblett, of Youngswood, Pa., an end; and John Olsen of Brooklyn, a tackle, the entire first string line was graduated. Mort Wilner, skillful quarterback, also is among those not available, but Coach Wray has three complete sets of backs headed by Captain Dick Gentle of Brookline, Mass., and the real problem is up front.

For center the more promising candidates include Roy Engle, of Camden, N. J., a scrub last fall, and John Robinson, of Greensburg, Pa., first string substitute with the odds favoring the former.

The end prospects are substantial. In addition to Riblett the coaches have Bill Raffel, of Camden, N. J., a substitute of great promise; Leonard Tanseer, of Philadelphia, who played in most of the games last year; Cecil Burnett, of Lynn, Mass., sophomore, and Frank Merrick, of Richmond, Va., 6 foot, 2 inch 200-pounder who played tackle last season.

For tackle positions Wray will have C. D. Morris, of Bridgeport, Conn., a regular until forced out by illness last fall, Frank Yablonski, of Plymouth, Pa., former scrub; Ted Bloch, of Towaco, N. J., yearling star; and George Stanford, of Springfield, Mass., and William Williams, of Ashley, Pa., substitutes in 1929.

Osberne Willson of Oakfield, N. Y., a sophomore and a brother of Joe Willson who captained the 1925 team gives promise of developing into one of the best guards the team has had.

Stanley Sokolis, of Philadelphia, freshman guard last year, and Cyrus Newcomb, of Grand Rapids, Mich., a converted end, will make both Willson and Tom Barrett, a substitute guard and tackle from Washington's Crossing, N. J., keep on their toes if they want to be regulars.

Wray is particularly well qualified to solve these various puzzles, as he was for seven years coach of the line before succeeding Head Coach Lou Young.

The schedule, games being at home unless otherwise indicated:

Oct. 4, Swarthmore; 11, Virginia; 18, Wisconsin at Madison, Wis.; 25, Lehigh; Nov. 1, Kansas; 8, Notre Dame; 15, Georgia Tech; 27, Cornell; Dec. 6, Navy.

ADD MINIATURE GOLF TO LIST OF DANGEROUS SPORTS

CRANSTON, R. I., Sept. 8.—(AP)—Miniture golf today stopped football practice by the Cranston high school squad, when Coach Carl Merritt failed to appear because of a sprained ankle he had sustained when he slipped while playing on a Hillsgrove pee wee golf course.

Miller Kayoes Sarko

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—(AP)—Ray Miller, left hook artist from Chicago, knocked out Mike Sarko of Boston in the third round of a ten-round bout at Dexter Park, Brooklyn, tonight. Miller weighed 133; Sarko 135.

Miller, who appeared to be in splendid condition, gave Sarko a bad beating from the start and floored him twice before landing the finishing blow.

The chapter, with William Morey, master councilor, is sponsored by Palmer chapter, No. 28, Royal Arch Masons, of Pawcatuck, with Past High Priest Howard McFarland as "Dad." The election of officers to serve for six months will be held this month. Phillips, of Misquamicut and Providence, and well known dog fancier in Rhode Island and Connecticut, won numerous ribbons at the 11th annual exhibition of the Rhode Island Boston Terrier club, held at Jim Smith's inn, Lakewood, R. I., on Saturday. Among the ribbons won was a first in local and a first in the novice classes.

He was taken to the hospital in the ambulance of the Westerly Sanitary corps, and treated for burns, bruises and cuts about his body by Dr. Henry L. Johnson of Watch Hill.

JAVANESE FISH MILLS MAY BE NEWEST SPORT

The latest at the packing house dock among the fishermen is betting on Javanese fighting fish. Mate George Deveau is on the boat Idella and Mate Carl Ashcraft is of the Roberta. A local boat caught two Javanese fish that come in eight colors. One of those caught was green and the other was orange. It is the first time a Javanese fish was ever seen in the village. They could fight and had some punch; so a large tank was placed on the middle of the dock with the fish in it; so Noisy Ashcraft said, "I will bet you, Radio Deveau, an auto tire against a 10-dollar pair of brand new shoes." Each sea-going fisherman stuck out his right hand all ready to shake, meaning that the bet was on.

Ashcraft picked the green-colored fish and his rival chose the orange one. About 50 crowded around the tank to see two fish all ready to fight. They had no seconds to rub them down. Judge Arthur McDonald rang the gong for the first round. There were no $25 ring side seats to see this fish battle. The fish started at it. Ashcraft's shamrock fish made a left dive and bit the orange colored one and then they kept biting and butting each other for a while. The crowd laughed to see the Javanese fighting fish kept hard at it; and when one got over a good right, the crowd of fishermen cheered as if they were at a Sharkey and Scott battle. The fish couldn't call foul, because they cannot talk. One wise fellow in the crowd said, "No matter how fast that green fish fights, he will never sweat!"

That brought a big laugh from the fish fans that could be heard on Mystic island. The battle lasted for 25 minutes until the orange fish lay unconscious, Judge McDonald giving him the count of 10. So Ashcraft's fish was the winner. The fisherman saw the Sharkey and Scott fight, down south and says he would rather see the fish fight than Scott, because they would give the fans a better go for their money than tea-leaf Scott from over the ocean.

That sure was a real afternoon of fun. So Happy-Go-Lucky Deveau lost a pair of brand new shoes for trying to pick a winner in a fish fight when it was green against the orange.

Some day that might be the coming sport in the village by the sea—having fish fights. Some smart fellow will take orange color and green Javanese fish and travel North America over with the fish and have a place where the fish will battle and their backer will become a millionaire. But nobody here knows how long those Javanese fish can live; and they are the only fighting fish in the world. No color line bar with them—take on all corners. If a fish is broken in the first round, the battle will be called off. So it will be some risk to bet on a fish fight, for it will be hard to pick the winner. It sure did make some real fun among the old and young salts in this fishing center of Connecticut, better than going to a hockey game—plenty of thrills and many good laughs. The Javanese is about as thin as a sardine, but how they can fight! Anyway, this is the new sport in Noank. A Javanese fish battle that will be the talk of the town for many months and next time two such colored fish are caught, come down to the dock. Bring your supper, get a ringside seat and see a real mill, all for nothing.

NOT ONE CANDITATE ABLE TO POLL A MAJORITY VOTE AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 8.—The first of the annual city elections for the choice of members of the city council, board of school visitors and board of selectmen was held today. As was anticipated, because of the large number of candidates seeking a seat in the council, of the 12 nominees none received a majority vote. As a result, none of those seeking office were elected. The same statement applies to the candidates for office as members of the board of school visitors and members of the board of selectmen; not one was able to poll a majority vote.

The election was the first in which the New London Taxpayers' league endorsed candidates. The league endorsed four of its members for a seat in the city council. Three of the four candidates polled a high vote, one of them, former Mayor E. Frank Morgan, winning the highest vote of any of the 12 aspirants. Another election will be held Sept. 23, at which time the eight candidates receiving the highest vote for member of the board of school visitors and board of selectmen will be the candidates at the second election.

The vote of today follows:

NEW HAVEN YOUTH ATTEMPTS SUICIDE IN LOCKUP CELL

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 8.— Edward Paddock, 18, of 159 Congress street, New Haven, who with his companions, William C. Martin, Stanley Dawicki, Paul Steir and Ernest Montipagni, all of New Haven, was arrested Sunday night by State Police Officer John Smith, charged with theft in robbing the Flanders garage of $28, attempted suicide at police headquarters Sunday night. Four hours after the youths were locked up, Patrolman Dennis Murphy was making a tour of the cell room and observed a part of Paddock's necktie suspended from the top of the cell and the remainder was on the floor. It developed that Paddock had attempted to hang himself, but with his body being suspended from the necktie, the weight was too great for the flimsy cloth and it parted, allowing Paddock's body to drop to the floor. The attempt at suicide was admitted by Steir, who occupied a cell adjoining Paddock's, but the former did not give any warning when he observed his friend's act.

Edward Perkins, of Meriden; Charles Fenn, Whitneyville, Conn., and James J. Quinn, Springfield, Mass., were charged with intoxication and breach of the peace. Each was fined $3. The men, who are employed as linemen, were on North Bank street Sunday and they had been drinking. They became involved in a brawl which ended when the trio was arrested by Patrolman Frank Philopena.

Bigamy Case Discovered

Joseph and Catherine Zielenski, husband and wife, residing at 27 Winthrop street, were charged with intoxication and breach of the peace and Joseph Sutkowski, of the same address, was charged with intoxication. The husband and wife were placed on probation and Sutkowski was fined $10 and costs. A drinking party was staged at the home of the Zielenskis Sunday night and when the party became boisterous the police were notified. Patrolmen Frank Philopena and George Bruhns arrested the trio. The officers also arrested Joseph Cieciorka, formerly of New London and Holyoke, Mass., for he is wanted on a charge of nonsupport in Holyoke and he may be tried here for bigamy. Cieciorka's arrest was asked for Saturday by the police of Holyoke, who informed that the man refused to support his wife and their seven children. After the arrest of Cieciorka it was learned that on May 23, 1927, Cieciorka married Stanislawa Zebrowski in this city and at that time had another wife residing in Holyoke.

William Kearney, 24 West High street, charged with evasion of responsibility, was fined $100 and costs, but $50 of the fine was ordered remitted.

THIEF WORKS HARD BUT GETS NO CASH AS REWARD

The fish market of the Cheney-Packer Co., 442 Bank street, was entered by a thief Sunday night, but as the intruder was seeking money and could not crack the safe he was not rewarded in finding cash. The break was discovered about 7:30 a. m., when an employe opened the market for business. He reported the attempted robbery to Patrolman Joseph Sullivan and that officer found that the thief had entered by means of an open rear window which permitted entrance to a room adjoining the market. The door leading to the main store was then forced. The thief opened the cash register and files in search of money and when not successful in his search, the handle of the safe door was attacked with a hammer in an endeavor to smash the mechanism so that the door could be opened and the strong box reached. Officer Sullivan had been on that beat since 11:30 Sunday night and the last time he tried the entrances was at 3:40 o'clock and they were secure. The officer recalled having met three youths on Shaw street, but two blocks from the market, at 1:30 o'clock and he recognized one as being William Mason. Mason was sought and arrested on suspicion of knowing something regarding the attempted robbery and he is being held.

BOYS ENTER OCEAN AVE. HOUSE OWNED BY MRS. McCALDEN

Mrs. Joseph McCalden, 1124 Ocean avenue, reported to the police today that the house at 1117 Ocean avenue owned by her, had been entered by a thief within a day or two. Automobile Patrol Officer William Corcoran discovered that three boys residing in the neighborhood had entered the house and had stolen a quantity of quince. The parents of the boys have agreed to recompense Mrs. McCalden for any loss that she may have suffered as a result of the mischievous act of the youths.

Jacqueline Hygh, a New Haven Negress, who recently landed in New London, was in the police court this morning, charged with conducting a house of assignation at 16 Hill street. She was fined $100 and costs. Clotilde Mason, another Negress, whose home is in Mobile, La., who was charged with frequenting, was fined $50 and costs. The house was raided Saturday night by Motorcycle Officer Clarence Martin, the officer having obtained information that sailors were frequenting the resort.

Joseph Ryan, a laborer, charged with vagrancy, was sent to jail for 30 days. Ryan was arrested on Howard street Saturday night by Patrolman Joseph Sullivan when found asleep in a doorway.

FREIGHTS OF 200 CARS TO BE RUN BY N. HAVEN R. R.

The New Haven railroad is contemplating the hauling of 200 cars, all loaded, on many of its freight trains. With this plan in view, a test of air brakes on such a train was made at Midway Friday by experts of the Westinghouse Electric Co., so as to determine whether the present air brake facilities would bring a train of the great tonnage of one consisting of 200 cars to as quick a stop as a shorter train. It is understood that the test was satisfactory and that trains of a mile and a half in length will soon be passing through this city. Within a week a train of 177 cars passed through here and other trains, consisting of anywhere from 125 to 163 cars, were operated also.

OBLIGATION TO VOTE IS STRESSED BY PRIESTS

At the four masses at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church Sunday, the enormous congregations were reminded that the city has an election Monday. Whatever may be the lassitude and apathy of individuals, it was pointed out that having been given the franchise, it is the duty of each to use it. While nothing was said regarding politics in general, the point was made that if the city has officials who are not worthy, it is the fault of those who do not take the trouble to vote for others who would prove more able. Each man and woman was urged to get to the polls early and to exercise the right of determining who shall make and administer the city's laws.

ALLEGED ASSAULT AND SUICIDE ATTEMPT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 8—Luigi Cardello, 12 Elizabeth street, former waste paper collector, was arrested tonight by Motorcycle Officer George Cockell charged with assault with a deadly weapon. He was released when John Castagna became surety on his bond of $1,000 for his appearance in the police court tomorrow.

Cardello and Frank Barber, 8 Elizabeth street, engaged in a dispute on Elizabeth street about 7 o'clock. Barber made complaint to the police that Cardello had shot at him and requested his arrest. Cardello was taken into custody, but he denies pulling a revolver or possessing such a weapon. Mariana Barca, 61 West Coit street, who heard a part of the verbal tirade, said that he heard a noise resembling the sound of a discharged firearm, but did not see such a weapon displayed. Joseph Logioca, 77 Belden street, also was a witness to the brawl and he is emphatic in his statement that a revolver was not displayed or fired. Logioca also said that after the row he went to Barber's apartment and found the man lying on the floor with gas flowing into the room from all cocks of a gas stove. Logioco carried Barber to the street where he revived him.

Neal Hardy, rooming at the Thames club, was admitted to the New Haven hospital, New Haven, this afternoon and tomorrow will undergo a surgical operation.

MARKET CLOSED IRREGULAR, WITH NET CHANGES IN THE LEADERS SMALL

NEW YORK, Sept. 8— (AP) —The stock market strove valiantly today to extend last week's rally, prices did move higher until the final hour, when realizing and some short selling, inspired by the weakness of the commodities and the absence of any constructive news caused the earlier gains to dwindle or disappear. The close was irregular, although net changes in the leaders were small.

Perhaps the most encouraging development, from the viewpoint of the bulls, was the increase in activity on the rise and the dullness of trading on the late decline. Sales for the day totalled 2,241,000 shares, the first time since August 27 that the 2,000,000 mark had been exceeded and the largest aggregate since August 13. In the last 50 minutes only about 350,000 shares changed hands.

Nevertheless, the public's participation remained negligible. Some brokers reported a creeping demand for high grade stocks, suggesting that the flow of investment funds into bonds and preferred issues was beginning to run over into common equity securities, but the inquiry was small, at best. Bonds, on the other hand, remained strong, featured by the rails.

The firm opening was followed by a professional buying movement in which short covering and bull pool operations were the dominant factors. A handful of the prominent shares squeezed to new highs for the movement, among them U. S. Steel which touched 173 3-4, and the advance brought in numerous fair sized buying orders. General Motors was a strong favorite; others included General Electric, Westinghouse Electric, American Telephone, American Can and Allied Chemical, in addition to several of the more erratic shares.

The presence of an average profit of five or six points on the movement of the past few sessions proved too tempting, however, and many operators sold out rather than attempt to carry the rise beyond moderate limits. Expectations that U. S. Steel corporation's unfilled tonnage figures, to appear on Wednesday, would show a decline for August, a poor month, gave the diminished short interest renewed courage and the late break started in the steel group.

The utilities showed some firmness, although prices shared in the general unsettlement at the close. American Water Works held 2 points of a 3 point rise. Pacific Gas, United Gas Improvement, North American, Brooklyn Union Gas and Electric Power and Light finished unchanged to fractionally higher, while United Corporation, heavily traded, gained half a point net. Buying was accompanied by rumors of a prospective offering of rights. Peoples Gas advanced 11 points.

Thermoid was taken in hand by the bulls for a rise of nearly 2. Diamond Match retained all but a fraction of a 5 point spurt, making another new high. New Haven, Canadian Pacific and Southern Pacific, in the rail section, together with General Motors, and American Tobacco "B" closed one to two higher. Selling of Parmlee Transportation followed rumors of objections to a merger with Checker Cabs, details of which are expected soon.

Favorite stocks like Westinghouse Electric, General Electric, Radio and Standard Oil of New Jersey, ended the day fractionally lower while American Telephone yielded all but a shadow of an extreme rise of about a point and a half. Vanadium, Sears Roebuck and Gillette closed 2 to 4 lower. The last named stock was under pressure all day on reports of a prospective bond issue.

Wheat declined more than a cent, reflecting hedge selling and a large increase in the visible supply. Corn eased on limited cash demand and large country offerings, while cotton, after breaking about $1 to $2.35 a bale at the appearance of the government crop estimate, closed $1.90 to $2.26 lower.

The September crude rubber "A" contract sagged below 9 cents to another new low.

European exchanges recovered, led by sterling. The German mark and Spanish peseta also improved. Latin Americans were slightly firmer.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 8—(AP)—The bond market gave another good account of itself today. Demand showed further extension into the lower priced groups, resulting in scattered selling of highest grade issues, but the latter on the whole remained firm and the average price of 30 obligations pushed to the highest level in about three years.

The political troubles in Argentina led to scattered selling of the Latin-Americans. Argentine 6s were offered in small blocks at concessions of one to two points, while there was a sympathetic weakness in Buenos Aires 6s, Chile 6s, Peru 6s and 7s and a few others. European loans were steady.

As the bond market swings steadily upward, the trend toward secondary issues is becoming more noticeable, for the recent gains in first grade bonds are sending investors in search of larger returns. The cheaper rails are profiting most, and among today's leaders were Chicago Great Western 4s, St. Paul General 5s, Hudson and Manhattan income 5s, International Great Northern 5s, Soo Line 5s and Western Maryland 4s, all of which gained around half a point. Their advance was at the expense of a few stronger bonds, including Chesapeake and Ohio 4 1-2s and New York Central 4 1-2s.

Reports that the St. Paul directors were uncertain as to whether the full 2 1-2 per cent semi-annual payment on the adjustment mortgage bonds should be declared at this week's meeting, in view of the estimated earnings of 3 per cent for the year on the issue, were accompanied by a large turnover in the 5th, which gained half a point net.

Specialty obligations found considerable favor, particularly Bush Terminal first 4s, National Dairy 5 1-4s, McKesson and Robbins 5 1-2s, and Schulco 6 1-2s. The latter gained 3 to 5 points. Oil bonds were active and firm. Phillips Petroleum 5 1-4s made a new high at 97 1-4.

A feature of the generally firm utilities was the Postal Telegraph 5s, which converted a half point advance into a net loss of 2 1-2, sagging to 90, a new low. Niagara Falls Power 5s eased.

Convertibles were higher during most of the day. American Telephone 4 1-2s and Atchison 4 1-2s, rallied more than a point but turnovers were small.

United States governments continued apathetic, fluctuating irregularly. Only one issue of the Treasuries traded.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 8—(AP)—Unloading of wheat by owners collecting profits and persistent hedging pressure, proved more than the Chicago wheat market could stand today and prices eased downgrade. Scattered selling by tired owners and by commission houses placed more wheat on sale than there was buying power to absorb. Trade was not large and the market was nervous and easily influenced. Chicago wheat was firm at the start because of strength in Liverpool, but this influence proved only transient. Corn ranged downward along with wheat. An over bought condition showed in the trade when owners started to unload on weak spots. A sensationally bullish estimate of the 1930 corn crop by an unofficial crop expert resulted in only sporadic buying and had little market influence.

Wheat closed nervous and unsettled, 1 1-8 at 1 1-2c net lower than Saturday's finish. Corn closed weak, 3-8 at 1 1-8c down, oats 1-2 at 7-8c off, and provisions declined 10-23c.

Provisions weakened because of scattered commission house selling and because the recent buying was absent. Demand was much less aggressive.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8—(AP)—The Republic Steel corporation will place its new electric welding pipe mill in operation this week, completing a $10,000,000 pipe development started in 1929. The electric welding mill is booked with sufficient tonnage to provide capacity operations for several months.

The Canadian Bank of Commerce today shipped $1,000,000 in gold to Canada.

Treasury Balance.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8—(AP)—Treasury receipts for Sept. 5 were $5,167,824.48; expenditures $10,579,036.76; balance $73,125,385.44.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 8—(AP)—The most ambitious bull drive in several weeks encountered stiff opposition in today's curb market, but the list closed irregularly higher. Total transactions were 465,000 shares, the largest since August 15.

The move centered in the utility shares, which made substantial progress for a time, but with late unsettlement on the big board, profit-taking and bear selling appeared, cancelling most of the advances. Net gains at the close were most numerous among the industrials and specialties.

American Super Power was sent up 3-4 in a large turnover, but lost half its gain. Electric Bond and Share was lifted above 85 for the first time in weeks, but closed at 83 1-2, off 5-8. Electric Power Associates gained more than a point, and Electric Power and Light warrants mounted 2 3-4. American and Foreign Power warrants, however, lost 1 3-4, and American Gas and Electric, 1. The new Diamond Match shares were admitted to unlisted trading privileges, and turned over in fair volume. The common closed at 24 7-8, and the preferred at 26 7-8. Deere, a recent soft spot, closed up 3 3-4. Cord Corporation rallied a point to 8 7-8, in sympathy with strength of Auburn on the stock exchange. Mead Johnson advanced 1-2, and Novadel Agene nearly 2, on favorable dividend actions. In the merchandising group, Great Atlantic and Pacific advanced 12 1-2 in a few odd lot transactions, and Russeks jumped more than 4 points to a price of 10.

In the investment trust group, Intercoast Trading jumped more than 2 points, in sympathy with the recent strength of trans-America on the big board. U. S. and Overseas gained 2 points, on announcement of a plan of merger with Public Utility Holding, but the latter closed off 3-4. United Founders, which controls U. S. and Overseas and Public Utility Holding, was firm, closing up a fraction. Prudential was active and firm, closing up 3-4.

In the oils, Standard of Indiana, normally a narrow mover, sold up 3-8, then sagged to close up only 1-8. Imperial Oil was active and firm, gaining a point, Humble sold up a point, then lost its gain. Gulf, however, closed off a fraction, and Cities Service held barely steady. Union Oil Associates, holding company for Union Oil of California, made one of its infrequent appearances in the active list with a transaction at 38, a new low, off 7 from the previous transaction.

COMMON COUNCIL ABATES INTEREST ON WIDOW'S TAXES

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept 8—The common council tonight exercised the spirit of benevolence at its regular monthly meeting in abating the interest on back taxes owed by a widow whose husband was killed in an accident some years ago, leaving her the care of a family of children. Mayor Walter R. King in explaining the circumstances, said that some of the children had now grown up and were working and the family had saved enough to pay the taxes and legal charges up to date but were unable to meet the interest. Alderman William E. Webber immediately voted for the abatement.

Police efficiency again came up for praise in a letter from the management of the Elks Country fair, expressing appreciation for Capt. Frank W. McLean and the officers in handling the crowds without a mishap. The council received four petitions for the erection of electric signs and voted that they take the regular course after expression had been made of the number of such petitions being received of late. The applications of William H. Nichols, to become a call member of Engine Co. No. 1 and Arthur L. Carter, call member of Hose Co. No. 2, were approved on motion of Alderman C. A. Lamoureux.

The following were included in resolutions introduced by Alderman William E. Webber: All street excavations be under the direction of superintendent of streets, that the permanent construction of Jackson street be continued as far as the appropriation would allow; that the blocking of passageways in the business district be prohibited and that loading and unloading be done at rear doors, inasmuch as possible; that the surface water drains on lower Chapman street be corrected and that a tree damaged by a recent high wind on Lebanon avenue be removed. The movement for the purchase of an additional supply reservoir for the city once more cropped up tonight in a resolution by Alderman John P. Carlson; that an investigation be made relative to the purchase of the Hall pond in Eastford as an auxiliary reservoir.

City water was ordered installed on Clifford street. Following a report by Alderman Eugene B. Lewis the offer of the New Haven railroad for the use of its lot on upper Main street by the city for parking purposes was rejected. Two claims were heard and referred for investigation. One was from Mrs. Emma Ballon, of Pleasant street, who on Aug. 30 fell on the sidewalk on Main street near the Arnold block, injuring both knees and her side. The other was from Joseph Platek, of Mansfield, asking damages of $40 for the destruction of 100 rows of potatoes and several head of cabbages caused by a leak in the city water main running through his land, from the pumping station at Mansfield to this city.

Acting City Engineer John F. Collins reported that he had made no progress with Superintendent Anderson of the Connecticut Co. toward the removal or covering of the abandoned trolley tracks in the block paving on Main street. Alderman Webber moved that definite action be taken and a resolution for such a step to force the company to remove the trolley tracks was adopted. The meeting adjourned until next Thursday night to follow the special city meeting.

WINDHAM PLAINS HOUSE BADLY DAMAGED BY FIRE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 8—The small frame bungalow owned by Mrs. Rose Cossover and occupied by she and her family on the Windham Plains road, was badly wrecked by fire which broke out shortly before 8:30 o'clock this evening. Members of the family were away at the time and the blaze was reported in this city by the crew of a Central Vermont freight which had passed the scene. The fire is believed to have started from a defective chimney.

The damage to the building was estimated at over $1,000 and the furniture contents were virtually destroyed. There was insurance on both building and contents. The fire was fought with chemicals and water supplied from the pumper truck, the night platoon responding in charge of Chief Charles A. Reynolds and Deputy Chief Michael J. English.

BUILDING IN CITY DURING AUGUST CALLS FOR EXPENDITURE OF $102,387

During August the new construction work in the city as outlined in the 29 building permits issued by Fire Marshal Henry R. Taft, entailed an expenditure of $102,387 as placed by the owners. The largest item of this was the new Norton Memorial gymnasium at the Norwich Free Academy, the cost of which was approximately $100,000. The permits issued were as follows:

New frame book binding shop	1
New frame house	1
New frame garages	6
New frame henhouse	1
New frame rabbit house	1
New frame and stone shed	1
New brick building	1
New concrete vault	1
Alterations to frame buildings	13
Alterations to brick buildings	3
	29

Cost as given by applicants $102,387.

During the past week there were five building permits granted by Fire Marshal Taft all being for smaller jobs such as garages and alterations to present buildings. One permit, that for the new book bindery on Newton street, was issued during the last week in August and is included in the August report.

In Norwich as in other cities there has been a very noticeable falling off in building lines during the summer as compared to previous years. However Connecticut is listed as twelve in the amount of building during the month of August, the amount in the state being something over three million dollars. Hartford led with nearly a half million dollars in new construction work under process of construction.

The building permits issued by Fire Marshal Taft for the past week are as follows:

To Walter M. Cowan to erect a frame building in the rear of 81 Newton street to be used as a book bindery. The building will be 25x36 feet with stone and concrete foundation. The exterior will be finished in clapboards and non-combustible shingles while the interior will be in sheetrock wall board. The building will be heated by hot water. The estimated cost is $1500.

To Harry Cohen to erect an outside stairway at his house at 157-159 Sachem street. The estimated cost is $150.

To Henry P. Woodmansee to erect a frame one-car garage 10x20 feet on Beckwith street. The estimated cost is $150.

To Henry G. Montie to erect a frame one-car garage on Boswell avenue. The garage will be 12x18 feet with cement foundation and floor. The estimated cost is $250.

To Mary Donovan to erect a frame five-car garage at 56 Roath street. The garage will be 18x45 feet The estimated cost is $500.

To Robert E. Graham to enclose present frame veranda to make a sunporch, at 438 Laurel Hill avenue. The estimated cost is $20.

Included in the work recently completed is the alterations and remodeling of the Brothers of Joseph synagogue on West Main street which was opened only last week. The interior has been redecorated and refinished. A new arrangement of lights was installed which is very attractive. The exterior has been done over in steel lath and stucco making the building very attractive.

Other projects in the city have also been brought well along toward completion by the contractors.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

During the past week there were seven sales of real estate in Norwich as compared to five sales during the corresponding week in 1929. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $15,975 and $101,100.

In New London the sales of real estate during the past week numbered only one, a decrease of five sales from the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $11,600 and $69,735.

NEW LONDON

Construction of a large apartment house of modern design containing 27 three and four room apartments on the site of the Chappell residence at Huntington and Federal streets will begin within the near future, according to plans of an out-of-town party. It became known today.

Meyer Hollandersky is acting as agent for the proposed purchaser of the Chappell property and stated that he was not at liberty to reveal any details of his client's plans. He admitted, however, that negotiations to purchase the Chappell property for the purpose of erecting an apartment house there were under way.

Building Inspector Gunn stated that he has been shown sketches of the proposed building and that he had gone over these preliminary plans in detail with the architects for the purpose of pointing out what building requirements will be made in order to conform with the local building code.

As planned the apartment house will be the biggest in the city. Consummation of the realty transaction involved is expected to take place within the near future and it is expected an application for permission to build will be filed next week.

The brick and tile work to the top of the second story was completed this week on the large addition being made to the Savings Bank of New London. The enlargement is located in the rear of the old bank building and faces North Bank street. Yellow brick is being used on the North Bank street frontage of the building and regular red brick on the sides from ten feet back. All of the steel for the top floor has been placed in position and work was started this week making the forms in preparation for the pouring of concrete. All cement work has been completed on a double decker concrete vault which is located in the middle of the addition and which will replace the present vault of the bank.

The new addition is 50 by 70 feet and will be three stories high including the basement floor which is on the level with North Bank street and ten feet below the level of Main street. The ground floor of the addition will contain a large garage and mens rooms, showers, etc.

The main floor will contain a new posting room that will be enclosed with soundproof walls to reduce noise from the posting machines to a minimum, an assembly room and offices. A mezzanine floor in the addition will house quarters for the women and the bank with lounging rooms, etc.

When work on the addition is completed the present old building will be renovated and altered to provide additional space for the overcrowded departments of the bank.

GOOD PROGRESS MADE ON PUTNAM BUILDINGS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept 8.— Other than builders progress being made in houses and business blocks already under construction, all has been quiet along the city's building front during the past week. City Clerk Thomas P. Ryan has issued a permit to Wilbrod Cotnier of the North end, for the erection of a one and one-half story frame bungalow on Mechanics street. Work on this home has been underway for some weeks and from all appearances it will have reached completion before the arrival of winter weather. It is an attractive house built on a sloping lot with inclining walks leading from the street to its forepart which to the observer appears higher than the rear portions. The Cotnier house is the second to be constructed in this section of the city this season. Another beautifully designed house of modern architecture nearby which was recently completed, is the one owned by William E. Wheaton, in the Mechanics street section.

Putnam's most important building operations at the present time are taking place on Pomfret street, in the west side of the city, where contractors have made considerable headway during the past week with the foundation work for the new nurses home of the Day Kimball hospital. The normal progress was halted last week when a quantity of ledge was encountered by excavators. With this obstruction eliminated, workers proceeded at a double-quick pace in order to finish as soon as possible to allow stonemen and steel workers to begin operations on the actual building.

Frame work on the lodge building of the Polish American club on Providence street is complete and carpenters are now engaged in partitioning the interior of the structure. Plasterers and painters are expected to be at work within another week. The building is a modern one and promises to lend a pleasing aspect to that section of Providence street, where building in the past has never been stressed.

Many of the city streets are lined with large cast iron pipes which are soon to be sunk into the ground to become arteries of the municipal water system. The new pipe lines when coverted into mains will constitute one of the finest water systems anywhere in the state. Work on this project has been in progress for many weeks, with the result that one line already extends from the new million gallon water standpipe on Oak hill, down across Oak street, to the intersection of School and Front streets. Considerable progress on the reconstruction of the system has been made by the corps of engineers and laborers during the past week.

NAUTICAL, BEDROOM TAKES BOYS' FANCY

A nautical bedroom, with bunks on one wall, furniture that has a tang of salt air and sailing ships, and a floor covered with battleship linoleum, has taken the fancy of thousands of American boys between six and sixteen. If you are planning to remodel your home and want to give your boys such a room, a cane fiber base under the linoleum will deaden the noise of romping feet and prevent annoyance to other members of the family when the boys become over-exuberant. Insulation board in the walls will similarly retard the passage of young voices, raised high in excitement, to other sections of the house. If the boys are older, such a room is ideal for quiet study

HELPS PAY TAXES

In the not distant future the greatest single factor to be considered in the purchase of a house will undoubtedly be insulation, according to G. D. Mallory, of the Natural Resources Intelligence Service of the Canadian department of the interior. This point of view is rapidly approaching, declares Mr. Mallory, because the public is coming to realize that a properly insulated house may effect an annual saving in fuel cost equivalent to from one half to all the taxes on that house.

TENNIS COURT AND RINK

If the size of the plot permits, a home tennis court will provide both pleasure and exercise for the family. If built of cement the court can be of year-round utility, convertible in winter into a skating rink by simply flooding it with water.

Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, woman tennis champion of the world, in a recent article in the Saturday Evening Post, discusses the relative merits of sod, clay and concrete tennis courts. She declares that the concrete court is preferable to the other two from the viewpoint of the game and that it is no harder on the player than a clay court, and, when it is considered that tournament players must use spike shoes on lawn courts, no harder than grass.

INCINERATORS OBVIATE NEED FOR GARBAGE CAN

Up-to-date homes are being equipped with special provision to obviate the unsanitary and unsightly garbage can In new homes it is possible to install a chimney-fed incinerator with openings on first and second floors. And even in an already built house an incinerator can be placed.

This type is either the basement-fed type or, if the house does not have a basement, the hopper door can be put outside the house. The large combustion chamber holds as much as eight bushels of trash, garbage and paper. It consists of a by-pass flue and a vertical grate which ensures thorough and odorless combustion. After the contents have been allowed to dry out a lighted match disposes of it.

NEW ENGLAND CONTRACTS

Contracts for building and engineering contracts in New England awarded during the week ended September 2 amounted to $7,678,800, according to the F. W. Dodge corporation. The average of the previous weeks this year amounted to $6,952,600, while the contracts awarded during the corresponding week last year totaled $8,596,000.

UNITY IN DESIGN

If the hall is between two rooms, such as the living room and dining room, and connected with large openings, it is never well to treat the walls in a color and pattern greatly different to those shown in the adjoining rooms. To do so is fatal to any effect of unity. It is well to get as much color and interest in the walls of the connecting apartments as is consistent with their respective uses and furnishings. Then, if the hall requires more color and pattern, a wall tapestry or a screen will help to secure it.

OIL BRUSHED ON OVER PAINT ACTS AS PROTECTION

A high-quality oil applied to the painted surface of an outside wall will go a long way toward increasing the life of the painted surface. This may be done anywhere from one to three years after a house has been painted, provided the paint shows no signs of peeling, and after an even longer period when conditions are exactly right.

The color pigments of paint have a way of losing their effectiveness after a certain period of weathering, a fact which explains why some paint appears to fade or lose its lustrous surface after being exposed to the weather for a year or so. Paint plays no favorites in this respect. The paint may be the best obtainable, the wall surface may have been prepared with utmost care and the painter may be an exceptionally skilled workman; nevertheless, without something additional to protect it, the paint will show positive signs of wear or fading within the first two or three years.

Perhaps you have seen painters going over the walls of houses, a year or two after they have been painted, and have wondered just what they were doing. Inquiry would show that they were applying a coating of oil, for the sole purpose of reinforcing the paint with materials which would protect the color pigments by imposing a hard, smooth surface between the pigments and the weather.

High-grade oil should be used, with just enough drier in it to cause it to dry within a reasonably short time. It is no job at all to apply it. Armed with a good brush one may cover the entire surface of a house in a mere fraction of the time it would take to paint it. That is, one might do it if one knew the proper way to handle a brush. It is no job for the tyro to tackle, and it would be wiser in any event to entrust it to the hands of an experienced painter.

Some painters maintain that the oil can be sprayed on and perhaps it can. Nevertheless, oil spread on with a good wide brush can do the work fully as well, if not a trifle better, even though it may require a little extra time and effort.

WATERING THE GARDEN

The proper watering of a garden is not the simple, haphazard operation which so many amateurs consider adequate, says The American Home. And the chief crime against the garden is to water when the sun is hot, as rapid evaporation will frustrate your efforts and leave the surface of the soil hard and dry. After sundown the soil has a better opportunity to absorb the moisture and make the plant food which the soil contains available. There are numerous types of watering appliances from which anyone may choose the most suitable for one's own grounds, from the simplest of lawn sprinklers, through to the extensive underground systems with stationary or disappearing nozzles. Between these two types are found revolving sprinklers, watering circular or semi-circular areas, oscillating sprinklers for rectangular spaces, and the stationary overhead lines.

WOMEN LIKE EFFICIENCY

As manager of the world's greatest institution, the modern housewife appreciates efficiency in the home just as her husband appreciates it at his office. Home modernization not only adds new beauty and comfort to the old dwelling, but makes it an efficient place for the home-maker to carry on her infinite variety of daily tasks. Plans for a modern, step-saving kitchen should be included in all contemplated remodeling operations. The benefits and enjoyment to be derived will repay the cost many fold.

OIL BURNER SAFEGUARD

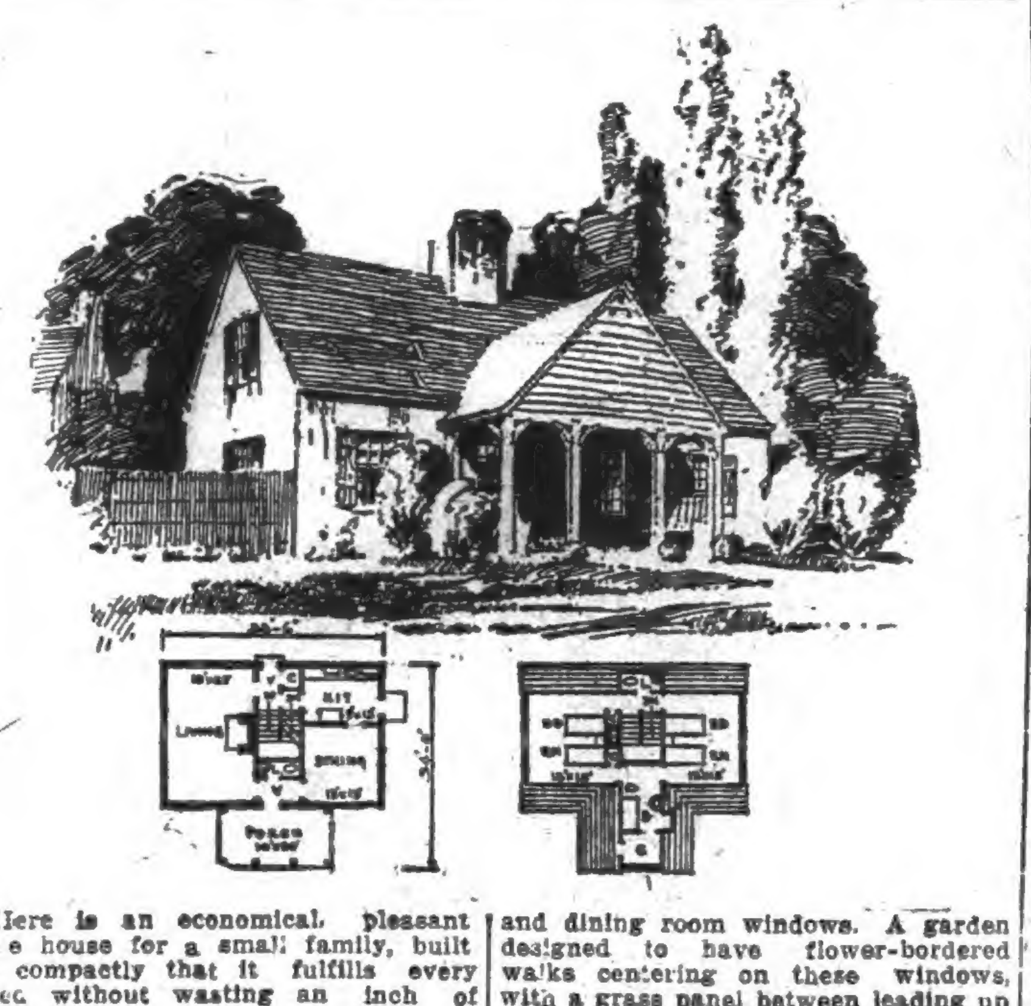
Any machine will do exactly what it's told even if the cat tells it. So protect the automatic shut-off of your oil burner against the cat or any other accidental influence. If it is accidentally turned, the burner will stop. A guard around it may save the home owner from a chilly house some cold morning.

PAINTING

Painting is an important part of the upkeep of a home which should be kept up year by year. It is one of the most inexpensive of household jobs and one which frequently has a distinct recreational value to the amateur or handy man.

A homely man always consoles himself with the belief that he has a brilliant mind.

Upkeep Is Easy In Small House Compactly Built



Here is an economical, pleasant little house for a small family, built so compactly that it fulfills every need without wasting an inch of space.

Not only is it compact, but it is convenient, which means ease of upkeep.

Add a garden full of flowers and this home would seem like a bit of rural England. Weather-stained wooden shingles and a mellow tone of stucco add to this illusion.

A large lot is not essential, although a plot measuring 60 by 150 feet is recommended as most suitable.

The house may be placed fairly near the sidewalk to allow a longer vista of the grounds from living room and dining room windows. A garden designed to have flower-bordered walks centering on these windows, with a grass panel between leading up to the porch, would be most effective.

The chimney is of common brick. Posts of the porch preferably should be of solid pieces, and hewn, and clapboards above should be sawed roughly to correspond. The large seats on each side complete the picture.

It is an economical house to build, because materials required are not expensive, and because the plan is enclosed in a comparatively small area and a minimum height.

In most communities the house probably could be built at a cost ranging from $8,000 to $10,000.

DUTCH COLONIAL HOUSE RECENTLY COMPLETED FOR O. H. MAIN

One of the most attractive country homes on the Norwich-Westerly road is that of Oscar H. Main in North Stonington. The house, which is pictured above and recently completed by Contractor Patrick F. Sweeney, is of the Dutch colonial architecture and is located on a high lot overlooking the road giving a very beautiful view from the large porch at the south end of the house.

The exterior is of colonial clapboards with green blinds and large windows. The building has a red brick underpinning and brick steps and walk leading to the colonial entrance. The open porch at the south end of the house has a concrete and brick floor. A sunporch balances the open porch at the other end of the house. The roof is of red composition shingles.

The interior of the house is attractively arranged with the first floor devoted to the living room, dining room, entrance hall, kitchen, sewing room, pantry, sunporch and toilet room. The second floor has the four large bedrooms, tiled bath and four clothes closets, one of which is cedar lined. The rooms have oak floors with stained hard pine trim and hard finish plaster walls. The living room has a large fireplace as has the dining room, both being in tapestry brick and of colonial design. There are two corner cupboards in the dining room and the kitchen is made convenient with a number of built-in features. There are two built-in bookcases in the sunporch. The bath has a tiled floor and sidewalls and is fitted with built-in tub and showerbath.

The house is heated by steam. In the rear of the house is located the automatic water system and septic tanks. There is also a two car garage in the rear of the house.

COLORFUL BOILER ADDS TO BASEMENT

The discovery of the basement now takes its place with some of the other great discoveries of history. In fact, there is a striking analogy between the discovery of a new continent and the discovery by the American public during the last decade of the vast amount of unused and waste space in its basements. Take, for instance, the average two-story seven-room house. If the basement is fully excavated, there is as much room in the basement as there is on the first or second floors.

In other words, the basement space is equivalent to 33 1-3 per cent. of the total usable space under that particular roof. In the case of a one-story bungalow with a full basement, the basement space is equivalent to 50 per cent. of the total space under the roof. There were several reasons why the discovery of the basement was delayed until the 20th century. In the first place, space was plentiful until building costs began to mount. Then, economy of construction as well as economy of space began to be sought. In the second place, the basement used to be dirty. Nobody knew it could be clean until clean fuels proved that it could be.

And the third important factor in the discovery of the basement is radiator heating which makes full utilization of basement space possible. Radiator heating pipes are of such small dimensions that they are not in the way. The boiler can be located almost anywhere in the basement. Furthermore, the boiler itself with a colorful jacket adds a decorative touch to the basement and blends well with window drapes of cretonne, a gayly painted floor, and bright furniture.

Thus, it is not surprising that the thoughts of the American public have turned basement-ward and that innumerable playrooms for children, dens for fathers, social rooms, club rooms, and modernistic apartments have blossomed forth where once were ash cans and junk.

CHEAP HOUSE IS POOR INVESTMENT

That bewhiskered wise-crack that "It isn't the original cost but the upkeep," applied for so many years to the family automobile, is even more appropriately applied to the home. Cheap materials build a cheap house, truly enough, but not a house that's cheap to live in. A roof may cost $500 and last 20 years without renewal. That is $25 a year, a better buy than a $300 roof that must be replaced in ten years with a repair bill or two thrown in. It may be a trifle cheaper to build a house without insulation, but uninsulated walls, leaking precious heat every winter, will often run up extra fuel bills that in two years would easily pay for insulating board or insulating lath. If economy is necessary build a small house, or omit, for the present, some of the things you would like to have but can do without.

PATTERN AND COLOR

If you have one of those large, barn-like empty-looking types of halls you need some pattern and some color to pull it together. These can be supplied by certain designs in wall paper which are warm in tone and vigorous in pattern. A warm-colored rug will help a lot.

Big Bus Delayed

A coast-to-coat Los Angeles to New York city bus, No. 1415, was parked in Hebron from Monday night at 10 o'clock until 9:30 Tuesday morning because of motor trouble. Two local mechanics were called but were unable to find the cause of trouble. Driver Ben Turben telephoned to New York to the owners of the bus, for help. They sent a mechanic, who arrived about 8 a. m. Twenty-eight passengers were still waiting for the motor to start when the Hebron reporter arrived. About half of the passengers were stretched out on the seats of the bus and had fallen asleep, while waiting. The wide-awake passengers inquired of one of the Hebron reporter if there was any place they could send a telegram. The bus was parked at the right side of the Boston Post road, about a quarter of a mile from H. Clinton Porter's old grist mill, and they said they hated to walk up the hill to Hebron Center to inquire and send telegrams. About six members started up the hill to send a message to New York. When they really heard the motor running, they all turned back and started running, and left the Hebron reporter with the following information: One family was on their way to Miami, Florida; two were from Philadelphia; some were on an excursion of three days; one girl had waited in Maine three hours before arriving in Boston. She said, the bus left Boston Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock and was due in New York city at 11 p. m. One girl was from Bridgeport. The remainder of the passengers were mostly from New York.

Most of the passengers who were awake said they were tired and hungry and were complaining, "What a bus," "Some bus."

The registrars of voters of the town of Hebron will be in session Sept. 9th for the purpose of securing applications from those who desire their names placed on a list under the title "to be made voters." Said list is to be used by the selectmen and town clerk for the admission of electors.

Charles Garbich, Benjamin Raeger and Miss Fay Farber, of New York came Saturday afternoon to spend the holiday at the home of Charles Garbich's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Max Garbich.

Birthday Surprise

Saturday night about 20 relatives and friends gave Charles Garbich a surprise party to celebrate his 19th birthday. Refreshments included a beautiful birthday cake lighted with candles.

The republican electors of Hebron met in caucus in the town hall Thursday, September 4th, at 2 o'clock, (standard time) electing delegates to the state convention to be held in Hartford, September 15-16, to congressional, county and senatorial conventions and for the appointment of a republican town committee.

Forty-eight of the "Holy City" chorus, with their leader George Munson, of Hartford, held a corn and dog roast, below the mill house on the land of H. Clinton Porter, Monday evening members came from Colchester, Gilead, Hebron and Hartford. After their lunch the members went to the chapel of the First Congregational church and held a rehearsal.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Gurney of Long Island have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey B. Kinney and family.

Hebron library has just received fifty new books.

Hebron Community band, A. E. Lyman of Columbia, leader, furnished music for Haddam Neck fair Tuesday. Members of the band played in Columbia Sunday, at the home of A. E. Lyman at a family reunion when 70 relatives and friends were present.

Miss Clarissa Pendleton won first honors at a bridge porty, held at the home of Mrs. Gertrude M. Hough. Mrs. Charles J. Douglas was second. The next meeting will be held at the home of the Pendleton Sisters Wednesday evening.

'DOLLAR COURT' SETTLES MINOR DES MOINES CASES

DES MOINES, Iowa —(AP)— Petty money disputes are settled quickly and cheaply in the municipal "conciliation court" directed by Judge H. H. Sawyer here.

Cases involving less than $100 are settled before a "conciliator" for a fee of $1. There are no lawyers, no cross-examinations and lengthy court records, and petty cases no longer clutter dockets of higher courts.

"The disputants "lay their cards on the table" while the conciliator explains legal points and suggests a settlement. The parties either reach an agreement between themselves or go to a higher court.

MISSING JOHN M. HYLAND IS CAUGHT IN WATERFORD

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 8—John M. Hyland, Utica, N. Y., an ex-service man, was arrested in Waterford this evening by State Police Officer William E. MacKenzie charged with theft of an automobile. He was brought to New London police headquarters and locked up and will be in Groton town court Monday next. Hyland apparently has a mania for fraudulent acts, contracting bills and not paying them. During the summer he hired an automobile of Newell & Glidden, Groton auto dealers and that was the last seen of him. Complaint was made to the state police and since then a watch has been maintained for Hyland. This afternoon it was learned that Hyland was in Waterford and he was quickly found and arrested. At one time Hyland was a salesman for a hosiery house and he defrauded his employers by furnishing a list of alleged purchasers, for by selling a specified amount of goods within a certain period, Hyland was entitled to a bonus. He received his bonuses, but when the goods supposed to have been sold were returned to the manufacturers with the information that the party to whom they had been consigned was not known, it was revealed that Hyland was padding his sales. His arrest was sought, but he could not be found.

POETRY

Water

He loved water as it went
Kissing stones—seaward bent;
He would lie, lost in dream,
Hearing music in the stream—
Water had a different sound
When you heard it underground.

People thought the boy was mad,
Whispered of the ways he had.
But the boy who loved a stream
Did not hear them in his dream—
His the beauty of all pools,
Where fish flashed in silver schools,
Marshy meadows where young grass
Bent to let the water pass;
Kingfishers, with scarlet crest,
Flicked the water with their breasts;
Screamed with laughter as they flew,
Flash of scarlet, flash of blue;
Weeping willows trailed their lace
In the water's laughing face—

Water laid a spell on him,
Water drew him to its brim!

—Eleanor Allen, in New York Sun.

My Brigantine

My brigantine!
Just in they mould and beauteous in thy form,
Gentle in roll and buoyant on the surge,
Light as the sea-fowl rocking in the storm,
In breeze and gale thy onward course we urge,
My water-queen!

Lady of mine!
More light and swift than thou none thread the sea,
With surer keel or steadier on its path;
We brave each waste of ocean mystery
And laugh to hear the howling tempest's wrath,
For we are thine!

My brigantine!
Trust to the mystic power that points thy way,
Trust to the eye that pierces from afar,
Trust the red meteors that around thee play,
And fearless, trust the Sea-Green Lady's Star,
Thou bark divine!

—James Fenimore Cooper.

"Oh," responded the mother, "this is for the reserved seats."—Exchange.

POETRY FOR THE WIDEAWAKES

"Brownie"

Has any one seen a little brown dog
With a white spot over his nose?
His hair is long, his tail is short,
And he's minus two hind toes.

I've lost him, I don't know where,
Or maybe he's lost me.
But he and I were top-notch pals
And I'm sad as I can be.

He doesn't belong to any breed
That I've seen or can recall;
Guess it was hard for him to choose,
So he's a little bit of 'em all!

But whatever he is or isn't,
There's one thing I can say,
He was loyal when all friends failed—
The same true pal each day.

Not at all did "Brownie" care
Were I honored or in shame,
He watched me still with faithful eyes,
And adored me just the same.

Yes Brownie is just a dog,
Without any pedigree,
And he'll never win a ribbon
For he has no family tree.
Medelyn Jones, in Our Dumb Animals

To a Butterfly

Thy wings are black-and-yellow hued,
And are by me with pleasure viewed.
As thou dost flit from flower to flower,
I love to watch thee by the hour.
Alas! my pretty, I've a net,
And I will get thee, beauty, yet.
I'll snatch thee from thy airy berth,
And bring thee down unto the earth.
I'll put some camphor on thy head;
I'll pour it on till thou art dead.
I'll set thee up between two things
Till air and warmth do dry thy wings;
And then I'll pin thee on a vine,
And know, at last, that thou art mine.

Butterfly's Answer

Dear maiden fair, with eyes so brown,
How could you want to bring me down?
I saw you sitting in your chair,
And thought how pretty you looked there.

I never dreamed of harm from you,
As through the air I gaily flew.
Have you no thought I'd like to live,
Enjoy the blessings God may give?
How would you like to take my place,
And have a net drawn o'er your face;
And ne'er go back to home so dear,
Or see your loved ones drawing near?
If I were you and you were I,
Would you like to be a butterfly?
God made us both, and He can see
You take the life He gave to me.
Oh, stop and ask why I must die—
A pretty, harmless butterfly.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

The polar bear, the great white creature of the far north is a lover of cold, of wide stretches over which to roam and of vigorous exercise both along shore and in the water.

The polar bear's home is [illegible] within the Arctic circle and it has been seen farther north than any other animal. In the winter the males wander some distance south that they may still be where there is open water, for it is from the sea that most of their food is obtained. Land is of far less consequence to them than broken ice, and they have been seen a hundred miles from shore quite at home in the cold northern seas. They are among the most powerful of beasts and, to all appearances, tireless swimmers.

In winter, the food of the polar bear consists almost wholly of fish and seal; but in spring and summer its diet ranges from mosses, roots, and grass to animal life of all sorts. It is a keen and cunning hunter, with a remarkable sharp sense of both sight and hearing and an intelligence that at times seems almost human.

Only the mother bears den up and hibernate through the coldest months. The males prefer to brave the storms and cold of the northern winters abroad; and for this their heavy coats and the thick layer of fat just under the skin well fit them.

In autumn, the she-bears grow exceedingly fat. Late in November the mother leaves the shore line and goes inland to find a deep drift of snow among the rocks. In this, she digs down as far as possible, and there curls up for her long nap. More snow drifts over her, but always her warm breath keeps open a small inlet for air.

Sometime in January the little ones are born, usually two in number, and, for all the great size of the mother, are not much bigger than full grown rats and as blind and helpless as baby kittens. By the last of March they have grown to the size of foxes and their mother's store of food has very nearly been exhausted. Now the long polar night is ended and the sun appears for a little while each day. The snow is softening, and the family break through the walls that have enclosed them and make their way to water.

At the sea-shore, the little ones soon learn to swim, to dive for fish, and to do many things that make up the life of a polar bear. They are very full of energy and among the most playful of all young creatures. Their mother is the personification of mother love and devotion. She knows no personal fear in protecting her charges, and woe to that man or beast who attempts to harm her or in any way to arouse her suspicions or to incur her ire.

LETTERS OF ACKNOWLEGGMENT

Sybil Keash, Putnam,—I thank you very much for the lovely book you gave me.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE AWAKES

The Sea Swallows

Dear Uncle Jed: Katama Beach is about three miles long and in early July you may hear the musical twittering of the sea swallows all along it, from the southwest corner of Katama Bay to Pasque Bluff which marks the beginning of Chappaquiddick. The bird is perhaps more properly named least tern and if you wish to be scientifically definite you may say Sterna antillarum, which is a harsh name and ought not to be applied to so graceful and beautiful a bird. Sea swallow surely fits the bird best. It is but an inch and a half longer than a barn swallow and no bird that flies can surpass it in swiftness and grace of motion. It swings in wide circles high in air; it swoops in a splendid curve to within a foot of your head as you walk along the beach where it nests, and it dives to the sea like a cross-bow bolt, making a great splash on the surface and claiming a small fish as a reward of its agility.

Pure white the sea swallow seems as it flies, the dark wing-tips and yellow bill showing only on close scrutiny, and though the note which it continually utters has by some been described as a metallic clattering and as a sharp squeak, I do not find it either. Listening to the chorus for half a day it sounds much like the twittering of a flock of swallows, a homely, pleasing sound not without musical qualities when heard in chorus.. It is a very different cry from the harsh ones made by the other terns.

The sea swallow is essentially a fisherman, swirling continually high in air, watching for surface indications of a school of small fish. These located, the birds hover and dive with surprising swiftness and accuracy and whiting and sand eels may be located by this habit as far as the eye can see. The tiny remaining remnant of the once great flocks of these birds is essentially pelagic, clinging closely to the dividing line between sea and shore, fishing in the one, nesting on the very margin of the other. Yet the birds were once common far inland where they varied their fish diet with insects.

My Visit

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the second letter I have writen you, and I hope you and the Wide Awakes enjoy it.

I went to New York for four weeks on my vacation. While I was there I visited the Statue of Liberty.

The Statue of Liberty is on Bedloe Island that is 1 1-4 miles southwest of the Battery. The Statue is 151 feet high. I had a very nice time. I will write you more later.

BEATRICE MONROE, Age 12.

The Prairie Dogs

Uncle Jed: A prairie dog settlement in Colorado is estimated to contain 500,000,000 inhabitants. Were the snakes, owls, rabbits, lizards and horned toads which live with the dogs to be counted in, the population of the place would reach the billion mark.

The figures are not strictly accurate, for the government has never counted these dogs in the census. But anyone who has seen such a city knows there are over one hundred dogs to the acre, and this city is one hundred and forty miles long by fifty wide, containing 4,480,000 acres.

They dig deep burrows with so many chambers that the railroad which is being put through their city will have to destroy a large number of dogs and their homes in order to avoid accidents from caving in of tracks.

This city was founded centuries ago. It has been known to be about its present size for fifty years. Families grow rapidly and the young ones stay at home till there is not room enough for all and some are pushed out to dig homes for themselves.

Heavy Coins

Dear Wide Awakes: The largest gold coin in circulation is the gold ingot, or "loof," of Anam, a French colony in East Africa. It is a flat round gold piece, and on it is written in Indian ink its value, which is about $375. The next sized coin to this valuable but extremely awkward one is the "obang" of Japan, which is worth about $50, and next comes the "benda" of Ashantee, which represents a value of about $45. The heaviest silver coin in the wold also belongs to Anam, where the silver ingot is worth about $15.

Mount Hood

Wide Awakes: The highest mountain in Oregon is Mt. Hood, 11,225 feet above sea level. Compared with Mt. Whitney, to the south in California, and Mt. Ranier, to the north in Washington, each rising well above 14,000 feet, Mt. Hood does not appear as a skyscraper. However, according to the geologists of the United States geological survey and other authorities, Oregon had at one time, probably before the dawn of life upon the earth, a great volcano which towered as far above Mt. Hood as does Mt. Ranier, possibly even several thousands of years ago this mountain disappeared into the bowels of the earth and all that is left today is the huge rim around Crater Lake.

Crater Lake is the caldera of this extinct and collapsed volcano and is nearly six miles in diameter. The inside walls of the rim of the ancient mountain are in places nearly 4000 feet high and almost perpendicular. The lake itself is in places 2000 feet deep and parts of the wall rise above its waters another 2000 feet. A restoration of the mountain in fancy, using as a basis the angles of the lower slopes, which still remain, shows that the apex could not have been far from 15,000 feet in height, so that Mt. Mazama was one of the most lofty and majestic peaks in the United States.

My First Tree

Dear Uncle Jed: My first tree was planted this year and this is what I said to it:

"There little tree: father has planted you for me, in his orchard: to live there all the years of your long life, and grow and bear fruit. You are my first nursery tree. I budded you when I was six years old, and you have grown taller then I in one year, for you grew as much as ever you could, and you are nearly eight feet high now.

You live in good company and the open road is on your west, and the people who pass will admire you and when you fruit I will get up in your branches with a ladder and gather your splendid fruits.

"Grow, little tree, and get some smiling fruits on you. I will water you when it is dry, and keep the ground clean around you and look after you.

I budded you from pater's plum tree Dawn, and you are my little Dawn, and I love you and I'll kiss your little limb and make you grow."

The Salute

Wide Awake Circle: The military custom of saluting by bringing the hand into a horizontal position over the eyebrows is supposed to date back to the tournaments of the Middle Ages, when, after the Queen of Beauty was enthroned, the knights who were to take part in the sports of the day marched past the dais on which she sat, and as they passed shielded their eyes from the rays of her beauty. The principal part of the officers' salute—kissing the hilt of the sword—dates from the Middle Ages. When the Crusaders were on the march to the Holy City, the knights were in the daily custom of planting their long two-handed swords upright in the ground, thereby forming a cross, and before these they performed their morning devotions. On all military occasions they kissed the hilts of their swords in token of devotion to the cross—for the prayers of the soldiers were considered of such efficacy that they were made an essential part of their duty.

FORTUNATE GRILLO, age 13.

The Oriole

Dear Uncle Jed: The oriole call is extremely easy to identify, although different people hear in it the utterance of very different syllables. There is no American bird that children are fonder of than the Baltimore oriole—which once they called the "golden robin," but seldom do now. Its color and its nest interest every child profoundly. And the Nomad was once told by a child that the words of the oriole's call are "I love you, I love you," with the accent very much on the "love." It really sounds greatly like that when you listen for it. But that great authority on nature's sights and sounds, Thoreau, tells us that the oriole says, "Eat it, Potter, eat it!" And that very careful but somewhat matter-of-fact authority on the sounds of the birds, Minot, can hear nothing in the oriole's call except "tu-wee-ee, tu-wee-ee."

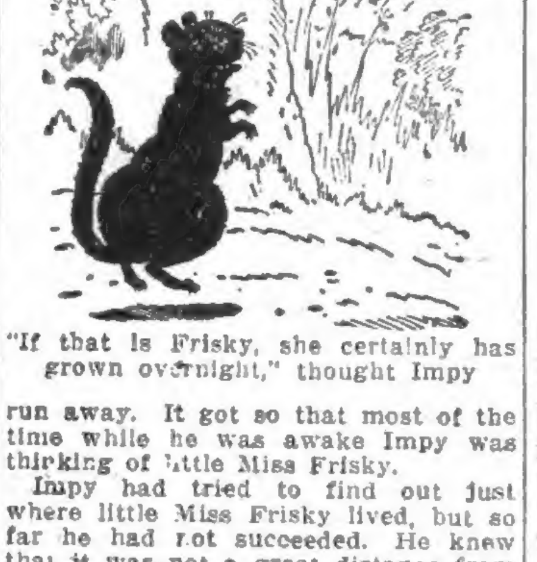
BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Impy Becomes Jealous

There's truth in what we have been told,
That love will make the timid bold.
—Old Mother Nature.

Impy, the black Chipmunk was certain there wasn't another Chipmunk in all the Great World as beautiful as little Miss Frisky. You see, Impy had fallen in love with little Miss Frisky. She was a very shy little person. She seemed to Impy to be a very timid little person. Sometimes she would run away from Impy; sometimes she would stay for a little while, but if he tried to approach closely she would run away. It got so that most of the time while he was awake Impy was thinking of little Miss Frisky.



"If that is Frisky, she certainly has grown overnight," thought Impy

Impy had tried to find out just where little Miss Frisky lived, but so far he had not succeeded. He knew that it was not a great distance from his own home and he knew in a general way where it was. But though he had hunted and hunted he had not found the entrance. When little Miss Frisky did not come over to see him he would go to see her; that is, he would go over near where she lived. Sometimes he saw her and sometimes he did not.

Now, it happened one morning that Impy waited in vain for little Miss Frisky to appear. Finally he started to look for her. He was almost over to the place where he thought she lived when he caught a glimpse of a Chipmunk running along a fence rail. His first thought was that it was little Miss Frisky and he started after her as fast as he could go. But when he got a real good look at this Chipmunk a little doubt crept into his mind.

"If that is Frisky, she certainly has grown overnight," thought Impy. "Yes, sir, she certainly has grown overnight. And the stripes on her coat are not just as I remember them. Can it be that there is another Chipmunk?"

Just then he heard a rustle off to one side, and turning quickly he caught a glimpse of little Miss Frisky herself. There was no doube about it. No, sir, there was no doubt about it. Impy knew then that the other Chipmunk was a stranger. He was just preparing to jump down in front of little Miss Frisky when he heard a rustling of leaves again; and there was the stranger racing after little Miss Frisky as fast as he could go. He paid not the slightest attention to Impy. Impy didn't know just what to do. In the first place, he was almost too much surprised to do anything, excepting to sit and stare.

"My goodness, that stranger is bigger than I!" thought Impy. "And he's chasing Frisky. Yes, sir, he's chasing Frisky! I wonder if he knows Frisky."

Impy started after the other two. Presently he came in sight of them. Little Miss Frisky was sitting on a big stone. The big stranger was sitting on another stone facing her. He not only was big but he was handsome. Even Impy had to admit that he was handsome. Apparently little Miss Frisky thought so too. When the stranger moved toward her she darted down between some stones. Impy could see her peeping out at the big stranger. It was quite clear that she admired him.

Right then and there jealousy filled the heart of Impy the black Chipmunk. He was jealous of that big stranger. He didn't want little Miss Frisky to admire him. He didn't want that big stranger around at all. He wanted little Miss Frisky all to himself. Almost before he realized what he was doing he had barked a sharp challenge to the big, handsome stranger. Instantly the stranger turned and barked back at him. Rage as black as his own coat filled Impy.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

"The Unholy Three," the only talking picture which the late Lon Chaney made during his career, will be shown at the Palace theatre for the last times today and tomorrow. Here is one of the finest productions in the history of motion pictures and every one who has admired the varied roles portrayed by the great actor will want to avail himself of the opportunity to see the man's greatest contribution to the art of the screen.

"The Unholy Three" gave Chaney a fine opportunity to show that he was just as versatile in his voice manipulation as he was with his make-up box and he uses no less than five separate and distinct voices in the picture.

There are great dramatic moments and thrilling and hair-breadth situations but the greatest feature of the whole production is the mastery with which Chaney, as was always the case with the star, executed his part. Do not fail to see one of the finest pictures which has ever been presented to Norwich theatre patrons.

On Thursday, the Palace will present an all star double-feature bill consisting of "The King of Jazz" with Paul Whiteman and a host of others and "Double Cross Roads," the story of a young crook who tries to go straight, with Robert Ames, Lila Lee and a large supporting cast.

Broadway Theatre

It's harder to be homely than beautiful!

So declares Mary Lawlor, who supplies the romantic interest in "Good News," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of the musical stage hit now playing at the Warner's theatre.

In the opening scenes of the picture, Miss Lawlor is seen as a dowdy, prim girl whose appearance is not at all enhanced by spectacles, an ungraceful kitchen wrapper and a towel swatched about her frumpish coiffure. Later scenes show her radiantly beautiful in becoming gowns and exquisitely coiffured.

Edgar MacGregor and Nick Grinde directed the musical talkie with the cast headed by Bessie Love, Gus Shy, Miss Lawlor and Stanley Smith. Included in the cast are Cliff (Ukulele Ike) Edwards, Dorothy McNulty, Lola Lane and Tom Jackson.

As fine gold refined

THE NEW PACKARD EIGHT

WE MOST cordially invite you to come in and look over the new Packard cars now on display at our showrooms.

You will find them as fine gold refined—as one of the world's finest cars made still finer.

A Wide Choice of Beautiful New Models

The new Packard Eight includes more notable improvements and refinements than any Packard of recent years. It is available in thirty-two beautiful models ranging in price from $2385 for the ever-popular Standard Eight Five-Passenger Sedan to $6075 for the finest Individual Custom creation. (At the factory.)

Improved carburetion and manifolding have increased the power. With added power, performance, especially in traffic and at the "red light", has been bettered. The advantages which only a four-speed transmission can give have been retained, with the transmission converted to the "short-shift" type. Longer and softer springs and new shock absorbers provide more riding comfort. An entirely automatic lubrication system now takes the human element out of daily chassis care and protects the long life resulting from fine engineering and precision manufacture.

Bodies made in Packard's own factories are the finest in every way that Packard has ever offered. Traditional appearance has been retained and beauty of line refined. Interiors have been beautified and made more luxurious. New color combinations have been provided.

Thirty years of building for the most discriminating clientele has taught the Packard Motor Car Company what such a clientele demands. And year by year—and again this year—new luxuries, new refinements and new improvements have been added.

An Investment in Luxurious Transportation

Today when nearly everyone is thinking in terms of investment instead of speculation, and buying more carefully, we ask you to view refined and improved cars — cars without a single speculative or untried feature. With Packard the car has always been greater than any one feature. You could not buy, expecting to keep your car four or five years if it were otherwise.

We shall be delighted to have you visit our showrooms and, as our guest, you will not be urged to buy. You will be extended every courtesy and desired attention in return for your own kindness in calling.

WEDDING

Kusza-Stankiewicz

A very pretty wedding took place Monday morning at 9:15 o'clock at St. Joseph's church when Miss Stephanie Stankiewicz, daughter of Joseph and Margaret Stankiewics of 242 North Main street, was united in marriage with Anthony F. Kusza, son of Theresa and the late Frank Kusza of New York, by Rev. S. A. Iciek, the pastor. The bride had as her maid of honor her sister, Genevieve Stankiewicz and as bridesmaid, Miss Pauline Stankiewicz. The Misses Irene and Dorothy Spugas, nieces of the bride were flower girls. The groom was attended by Michael Sabizdrzal of New Haven as best man and William Stankiewicz a brother of the bride was the usher. The bride was charmingly gowned in white satin and wore a veil of tulle caught up with orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. As a going-away gown the bride was attired in a brown chiffon velvet. Among the large number of guests present were relatives from Meriden, New Haven, New London, New York, Pittsburgh and Bridgeport. The groom presented the bride with a beautiful string of pearls while she in return gave the groom a diamond stick pin. CONSTRUCTION CO. EMPLOYE FATALLY INJURED BY TRUCK AT WAUREGAN

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 8.—Donald Smith, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tyron Smith of 118 Oakland terrace, Hartford, died just before 3 o'clock this afternoon at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam of injuries he received when struck by a Thames River line truck on the new state highway just north of the Milk Bar in Wauregan shortly before noon today. His abdomen was torn open just above the left hip and so badly mangled that there was no hope for him from the instant he was struck.

Leo J. Couture, 16 Laurel Hill avenue, Norwich, was the operator of the Thames line truck that figured in the accident. Couture was proceeding north with his ponderous canopy-topped vehicle when he overtook another truck, also headed toward Danielson, that was about to tow a monster cement mixer that was loaded on a trailer, to North Scituate, 16 miles east of here, where highway work is being done. At the time the truck and the trailer was stopped.

It appears from the investigation of the affair by State Officer Elton Nolan of the Danielson barracks that Smith, a timekeeper for the Gammino Construction Co., which recently completed concrete work on the new Wauregan-Danielson state highway, had run out from the construction company shanty nearby to pencil a telephone number on the side of the truck hauling the trailer. This was a sort of memorandum for the truck driver, that he might call in case of meeting with difficulties en route to North Scituate.

The big cement mixer loaded on the trailer was much wider than the truck that was to do the hauling. Smith dashed out just as the Thames line truck was passing and was hit far back in its length by that machine. Couture said afterwards that he at no time saw Smith and did not know his truck had hit him until he heard the yells of men nearby and stopped his machine to find Smith lying in the highway.

The fatally injured man was rushed to the hospital as soon as the ambulance could be sent down to get him. Smith is said never to have regained consciousness after being hurt. Coroner Arthur G Bill went from Danielson to the hospital, but found interviewing Smith to be an impossibility.

The young man had spent Sunday in Hartford visiting with his parents, who drove him to New London Sunday evening, and from there he came back to work.

TWO PUBLIC EXECUTIONS IN PLAZA AT BUENOS AIRES

Two Alleged Ringleaders in Disorders the Victims—Strict Martial Law Has Been Put Into Effect, With Soldiers in War Equipment Everywhere—Fifteen Alleged Enemies of the Revolution Have Been Seized and Condemned to Be Shot—All Messages Sent Out of the Country Censored

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 9.—(AP)—The provisional government tonight struck heavily at the cause of the riots and shooting which last night terrorized the heart of the capital, and for an example publicly executed two alleged ringleaders of the disorder in the Plaza de Mayo.

Nothing official was said about the execution but it was rumored that Chief of Police Telleches of San Martin, a suburb, had also gone down before the bullets of a firing squad and that other adherents of the deposed President Irigoyen would be shot before long.

Strict martial law was put into effect, with soldiers in war equipment everywhere and particularly around government buildings. Foreign press correspondents were warned, under penalty of summary expulsion, not to send any messages out of the country without the approval of the government's censor. This applies alike to cable, wireless, telephone and telegraph transmission.

It is understood a number of Irigoyenistas are under arrest, including six deputies. Fifteen alleged enemies of the revolution were seized last night and condemned to be shot, but it is not known whether the sentence has been carried out.

Among those under arrest is the former president, Hipolito Irigoyen, who has been ill in the infantry barracks at La Plata since he was ousted Saturday. After he resigned the government informed him that he was free, but he was arrested after the outbreak. His personal physician, Dr Meade, also is held.

The newspaper La Nacion said tonight that the former president would be brought to Buenos Aires as soon as his health permitted. His condition today was reported weaker.

Antonio Melarino, a brother of former senator, was arrested tonight. He was charged with being a prominent member of the "klan radical" or Irigoyenist faction held responsible by the government for last night's disturbances.

Advices from La Plata tonight said that General Giordano, who was named military chief of Buenos Aires province, had asked General Uriburu to send in a civilian interventor to govern the district.

IRIGOYEN PLACED ABOARD A WARSHIP

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Sept. 9—(AP)—Advices received tonight said that former President Hipolito Irigoyen of the Argentine republic was removed from barracks at La Plata, where he has been a prisoner, to the Argentine warship Belgrano. It was understood also that other Irigoyenist leaders, including a majority of the deputies of the former president's party, were taken on board with him.

DENIAL OF REPORTS OF DISORDERS IN BRAZIL

NEW YORK, Sept. 9—(AP)—The Associated Press tonight received the following telegram, regarding recent reports of alleged Brazilian disorders, from the Brazilian ambassador in Washington.

"The rumors concerning the imminence of a revolutionary movement in the Brazilian state of Rio Grande do Sul have been of late persistently reported from Montevideo, republic of Uruguay, while their foundation, since they have not been confirmed by fact, has been repeatedly denied by the Brazilian government and this embassy.

"Such rumors persist in the public press this morning and again they are not confirmed by fact. The latest information received at this embassy shows that order and tranquility prevail throughout the Brazilian territory and, not later than two days ago, on Sunday last, the 7th of September, the Brazilian independence day was commemorate in Rio de Janeiro and in Rio Grande Do Sul with military parades, in perfect order and with public rejoicing.

"President Washington Luis reviewed then 15,000 troops of the army, navy, marines and police, surrounded by his cabinet, high authorities and the foreign diplomatic corps.

"A military parade took place in Porto Alegre, the capital of the state of Rio Grande Do Sul, with no incident whatever to foreshadow any imminence of political disturbances in that state.

"In the state of Minas Geraes, the retiring president, at the expiration of his constitutional period, handed over the administration to his newly elected successor and the inauguration went over with public rejoicing and in perfect order.

"Very sincerely yours,
"S. GURGEL DO AMARAL.
"Brazilian ambassador to the United States of America."

REDEMPTION OF $1,000,000,000 TREASURY NOTES CALLED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Secretary Mellon today called for the redemption of more than $1,000,000,000 in outstanding treasury notes bearing 3 1-2 per cent interest when it became apparent that the latest treasury offering of certificates bearing only 2 3-8 per cent interest had been subscribed.

The gigantic refunding operation resulting from the redemption of the billion dollars in 3 1-2 per cent notes will permit the government to take advantage of the prevailing low interest rates and get the public debt on a lower interest level.

The offering for the September 15 financing of 2 3-8 per cent certificates was the lowest interest rate proposed by the treasury on its short term securities. Mr. Mellon offered $325,000,000 of these certificates and it was announced tonight that subscriptions were closed at the end of today's business.

NEW NEW YORK-DETROIT AIR RECORD BY HAWKS

DETROIT, Sept. 9.—(AP)— Captain Frank Hawks, hero of east and west trans-continental records, arrived at Ford airport at 6:15 p. m. (e. s. t.) today establishing a new record for a New York-Detroit non-stop flight. He left Valley Stream, N. Y., at 3:12 p. m. His elapsed time of three hours and three minutes bettered the previous record of four hours and 15 minutes set two years ago by Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh.

Hawks flew the same ship he used in his record transcontinental flights. He came here to referee the national air tour for the Edsel B. Ford trophy which starts Thursday.

CROSSED OCEAN FROM BOSTON IN A SMALL SAILING YACHT

MELILLA, Morocco, Sept. 9—(AP)—After a voyage across the Atlantic in a small sailing yacht, the Evaly, Professor Henry Blanco and his wife and daughter arrived at Gibralta today.

They left Boston 59 days ago in their slight craft, and on Aug. 23 made their first stop at Potna Delgada, the Azores.

The yacht encountered many storms along the way, some of which considerably delayed it.

Professor Blanco said at Gibralta he would sail for this city Thursday.

AWAITS GOOD WEATHER FOR 10 MILE ALTITUDE FLIGHT

AUSBERG, Germany, Sept. 9—(AP)—Dr. Auguste Piccard, professor of physics at the University of Brussels, today awaited good weather for his projected flight ten miles into the air, on which he hopes to discover a new highway for aerial commerce and the clew to sources of energy far greater than power experts have dreamed of.

Dr. Piccard hoped to start the flight tomorrow, with one companion, in the largest balloon ever built, and fly twice as high as Mount Everest, the earth's highest peak, beating by almost two miles the greatest altitude ever ttained by man.

His principal object is to study cosmic rays in the stratosphere, as scientists call the earth's atmosphere about six and one-half miles up. If he finds the new highway for commerce, it will be only incidental.

"I'm surprised that aviators hitherto have feared soaring into the stratosphere," Dr. Piccard said in discussing his project. "I hope, by showing it is not dangerous, to render a service to aviation.

"The distance flights of the future, especially with rocket planes, will undoubtedly be made through the stratosphere, where, with the same amount of power, speeds many times as great as those attainable in the atmosphere can be achieved."

His study of cosmic rays, Dr. Piccard says, may lead to discovery of sources of energy untamed by man, and probably of intensity undreamed of commercially.

WORLD'S FOURTH LARGEST BELL HOISTED INTO BELFRY

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP) — The world's fourth largest bell, which weighs 20 times as much as the liberty bell and can be heard five miles away, was electrically hoisted today on steel cables nearly an inch thick 360 feet up into the belfry of the $4,000,000 Riverside church, now nearing completion on Riverside drive opposite Grant's tomb.

John D. Rockefeller and his family will be among the leading parishioners when the church opens in October and the tower and carillon, of which the 20-ton bell installed today will be low C, are the gift of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in memory of his mother, Laura Spelman Rockefeller.

The carillon, all installed now save for one 14-ton bell, is the largest in the world. It has 72 bells and a range of six octaves, only about an octave less than a piano. The two second largest carillons, in a parliament house in Ottawa and in the Bok tower in Florida, have 53 bells each and their range is five and one-half octaves.

Almost eight feet tall is the big brass bell which was lifted into the belfry today, and it is four semitones lower than any other bell in the world. Its clapper alone weighs a ton—as much as the liberty bell.

TO TEST ALL CATTLE IN STATE FOR TUBERCULOSIS

HARTFORD, Sept. 9.—(AP)— Plans to test all cattle in the state for tuberculosis within the next four years were disclosed by Commissioner on Domestic Animals Charles L. Johnson today, during the hearing before the budget committee of the state board of finance and control on his requests for appropriations for the next biennium. Hearings were also held upon the appropriation requests of the state prison and the bureau of child welfare.

The tests desired by Commissioner Johnson will involve the expenditure of more than $200,000 a year for the four years during which they are planned, it was said by Edward F. Hall, commissioner of finance. It is believed by Commissioner Johnson that the results would justify the expenditure.

LEVITT CONTINUES HIS ATTACKS ON RORABACK

MADISON, Conn., Sept. 9.—(AP) — Prof. Albert Levitt, candidate for the republican nomination for governor, tonight continued his attacks on State Chairman J. Henry Roraback, the republican organization in the state, and public utility companies.

He spoke before members of the Madison Women's Republican club and the League of Women in town hall here.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

VATICAN CITY, Sept. 9—(AP)—Monsignor Pierre Benedetti, archbishop of Tyr, died yesterday at Siena. He formerly was apostolic delegate in Mexico and Cuba and papal nuncio in Haiti.

PORT AU PRINCE, Sept. 9—(AP)—The government last night officially denied a report that Haiti had prohibited entrance over the frontier from Santo Domingo because of fear of typhus in the Dominican Republic following last week's hurricane.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 9—(AP)—The infant Prince Baudoin, son of Crown Prince Leopold and the Princess Astrid, today received a seventh name, only six having been alloted him after his birth. His full name now reads Baudoin Albert Charles Leopold Axel Marie Gustave.

LIMA, Peru, Sept. 9—(AP)—The Arequipa newspaper "Noticias" today published an interview with Lieut. Comm. Harold B. Grow, U. S. naval reserve officer who was head of the Peruvian air service under deposed President Leguia, denying that he intended to bomb the city of Arequipa.

GOLF COURSES MORE LUCRATIVE THAN FARMS

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP)—A lot of farmers could make more money by beating their plow shares into putters and turning their acres into golf courses, it was suggested today in the Journal of the American Bankers' association.

Quoting Bobby Jones that there ought to be a golf course for every 5,000 people in the country, Bryce Edwards, Washington economist, writes, "That would mean about 26,000 golf courses, or about four times as we have now."

New courses, he says, are now most needed through the countryside where motorists, tourists, and residents of towns may stop by the roadside for a round of golf.

"Much land which has small farming value because the ground is rough and patchy, or because it is sandy, hilly, or flood land, or full of water holes, timber and brush patches is easily transformed into an interesting golf course," Edwards said. "The impediments to farming becomes assets when they are hazards to be conquered by golfers.

"A dairy farm in upstate New York prospered during the war, but suffered in the years that followed. A very large dairy barn, milk house, bull shed and accessory buildings had been built.

"The farm land was turned into a golf course, hard wood floors were laid in the dairy buildings. The barn yard became parking space, the milk room a kitchen and the calf shed a locker room. The proprietor supplied his own farm relief."

FURTHER IMMIGRATION RESTRICTIONS TO BE MADE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9—(AP)—Further restrictions upon immigration to prevent increased unemployment will be imposed by the state department at the direction of President Hoover.

The chief executive announced today American consular officers in Europe will examine future applicants for immigration visas with a view to rejecting all who might become public charges and add volume to those already out of work in this country.

In adopting this course, Mr. Hoover said it would be similar to restrictions placed upon Mexican and Canadian immigration within the last 15 months.

The state department informed the president it had become apparent in March, 1929, that many seeking entrance from Mexico were laborers who ran a risk of becoming public charges and, consequently, the restrictive policy wa sadopted.

Labor immigration from that country has now practically ceased, the department added, and similar steps have brought a considerable falling off in Canadian immigration.

Mexican immigration had dropped in July to 324 persons. Last year 6,280 persons came from that country.

MOSCOW TO GET VIEW OF GRAF ZEPPELIN

MOSCOW, Sept. 9—(AP)—The soviet capital expects tomorrow to get its first view of a great dirigible, with the Graf Zeppelin, which left Friedrichshafen this morning, expected to descend on October field around 1 p. m.

The dirigible will deliver and receive mail, remain a short time, and then cast off for the return trip to Germany. The exact time of the stay depends on the weather.

Although the field has no mooring mast, 250 soldiers have been rehearsing oseveral days and will pull the German giant to the ground, holding her until she is ready to leave.

Soviet military airplanes will escort the Graf over the city, and high air officials, headed by General Baranov, commander of the soviet air forces, will greet Dr. Hugo Eckener when the Zeppelin's commander descends from the gondola.

A large group of scientists and aviators is coming from Leningrad to welcome the airship. The Leningrad observatory is supplying weather reports for the Zeppelin's voyage.

CAPE GRIS NEZ, France, Sept. 9—(AP)—Peggy Duncan, a 200-pound South African girl, entered the water here tonight in an attempt to swim the English channel to Dover and at 10 p. m. was five miles west of Cape Gris Nez.

She was averaging 2 1-2 miles an hour, swimming very fast in perfect weather. Should she continue that speed she would beat Gertrude Ederle's time of 14 hours 25 minutes established four years ago.

Miss Duncan is 19.

Relief Ships Arrive At Santo Domingo

A Supply of Food Now Assured — Doctors, Nurses and Funds Available

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic, Sept. 9—(AP)—This hurricane-stricken capital, with its upwards of 4,000 dead and many more than that number injured, had its first thrill of hopefulness today with the arrival of a small fleet of relief ships bearing doctors, nurses, provisions and funds for the relief of the peoples misery.

Missions of mercy from Porto Rico, Cuba, Haiti and other points not only swelled the number of workers alleviating the sufferings of the maimed and destitute but supplied a flow of food that promised the future security of a half famished city.

President Trujillo today requested Director Ernest J. Swift of the American Red Cross foreign operations branch to survey the entire situation in Santo Domingo and report to him personally, making any and all suggestions for improving and speeding up the work of relief and rehabilitation.

Airplanes continued today to wing their way back and forth between the storm area and Port-Au-Prince, Haiti, and a complete survey was made from the skies of the outlying zone where no estimate of damage yet has been available.

No official count has been made of the total number of dead. The phase of the situation which most impresses the relief workers is the great number of serious injuries which must be treated, many of them calling for the most extreme measures by the already overworke darmy and civilian physicians and surgeons.

COSTE AND BELLONTE TO MAKE TOUR OF COUNTRY

NEW YORK, Sept. 9—(AP)—The French trans-Atlantic fliers, Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte, returned today from Washington, where they were welcomed to America by President Hoover, as final arrangements were being made for their good will tour around the country.

The itinerary is being made up by Casey Jones, president of the Curtiss Flying Service and a member of the committee sponsoring the tour. He said today that he hoped to be able to announce tomorrow all the cities where the fliers would stop, but until the list was completed it was decided not to name any places.

There are invitations from many cities in this country and from Canada and as many stops will be made as is feasible. The mayor's office at Worcester, Mass., telephoned Jones today and arranged to have President Armanet of Assumption college come here to urge a stop at Worcester.

The tour is expected to start by the early part of next week at least and will include practically all of the cities. When the long flight begins, Rene Racover, the fliers' American business agent who accompanied them to Dallas, Tex., to claim the $25,000 Easterwood prize, will step out of the picture, as the good will tour is to be entirely without any commercial flavor.

SAYS GERMANY HAS A VIGOROUS FOREIGN POLICY

GENEVA, Sept. 9—(AP)—Dr. Julius Curtius, German foreign minister, today gave the league of nations council two proofs that Germany has a vigorous foreign policy despite the tangled political situation at home.

Dr. Curtius' moves were made during discussion of the Saar district, former German territory now administered by the league of nations, and Tanganyika, former German South African colony lost by the World war.

Tangfianyika is now administered by Great Britain under a mandate from the league of nations. Regarding the status of both the Saar and Tanganyika, German public sentiment from time to time has been much agitated. A strong faction has steadfastly hoped that they would be returned to German control.

Dr. Curtius announced to the council that he would have something to say later—presumably tomorrow when the league assembly opens—about Great Britain's plan to unite Tanganyika and her adjacent colonies, Uganda and Kenya under common administration as regards customs duties and fiscal management. Well-informed Germans here say this contemplated action is considered a move to tuck Tanganyika "more securely into John Bull's pocket."

FIVE PERSONS KILLED IN PLANE CRASH IN MEXICO

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 9—(AP)—Five persons were killed and two fatally injured in a crash of the Sikorsky amphibian Mayab two miles from Merida, Yucatan, today. The plane burned after it fell.

Those killed were the pilot, Captain Jorge Llerenas, of the Mexican army; Salvador Flores Cosio; Cosio's wife, sister-in-law and small daughter. The fatally injured were another pilot, Alonzo Reyes Flores, and Ermilio Cebada.

The meager details which reached here said that the plane suddenly went into a spin two miles from the Merida landing field. Flores and Cebada escaped cremation because they were thrown clear.

Captain Llerenas was one of three Mexicans who took the Mayab to Costa Rica last May to return the body of Colonel Pablo Sidar, Mexico's air hero killed in an attempt at a non-stop flight to Buenos Aires.

POLITICAL SITUATION IN PANAMA CLARIFIED

PANAMA, Sept. 9—(AP)—Resignations of Minister of Agriculture Lius Felipe Clement and Minister of Public Education Jeptha B. Duncan today clarified the political atmosphere and were believed to have averted a crisis menacing for many hours the life of the administration of President Arosemena.

Following the resignations the president made plans for the reconstruction of his cabinet. He declined to see press representatives but indicated that the new ministry might be announced today.

The climax of the political deadlock came when the cabinet requested Duncan's resignation. Duncan presented his resignation to Enrique Linares, manager of the National bank, who sent it to the president.

Diver, Entangled, Was Submerged 26 Hours

Was Rescued by Fellow Diver From [illegible]anal in Louisiana

NEW [illegible]ANS, Sept. 9—(AP)—For [illegible] hours Captain N. A. Dan[illegible]-year-old marine diver, st[illegible]on the floor of the drainage [illegible]22 feet of water helplessly en[illegible] in piling, and lived to tell of [illegible]xperience.

[illegible]e went down Monday morning at 11 o'clock to complete repairs to a leaking lock where the canal runs into Lake Pontchartrain. The lock collapsed and threw the diver and three heavy pilings against the pumping station. Danese had made the mistake of holding in his hand the rope that usually is tied around a diver's body. It slipped out of his hand and he was barely able to move. Only the air line from his diver's helmet connected him with the surface. His associates in a boat were afraid to pull on the air line for fear of breaking it.

All day, all night and until past noon today, men worked a hand pump in the boat and kept a steady flow of oxygen moving down to the trapped diver. A hundred men tried to extricate him but it remained for another tough old diver, Fritz John, 65, who has never yet failed to rescue a man from the water, to bring him up.

Sheet piling was driven down to form a pen around Danese's watery prison, relieving the pressure. John went down and found Danese pinned behind three pilings with one resting across his body.

With grappling hooks two of the pilings were hoisted away. John sawed the third in half and all three were raised.

Then he shook hands with Danese, came to the surface and gave orders to pull. In a moment Danese's helmet bobbed up out of the water and the group on the bank cheered.

Danese was brought ashore, weak and exhausted. He waved aside the uniformed hospital internes and staggered into a shack.

"Thank God for all the people who helped save me," he mumbled. "I never gave up hope."

He was chewing gum—the same gum trat he had carried below with him.

"If they'll let him, he'll be back to work tomorrow," said his son, Joseph.

6 MEN KILLED, 11 INJURED BY EXPLOSION OF LOCOMOTIVE

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Six men were killed and 11 injured, three seriously, today when a locomotive exploded in the round house yard of the Reading railroad.

The dead were John Biemiller, 46, and James Gordon, 4, round house foremen; John Kelly, 38, locomotive inspector; Frederick Spangler, 49, engineer; Crawford Dunseath, 45, and James P. Smith, 40, car shopmen.

The men were gathered about the engine, inspecting it, when the blast let loose, hurling pieces of steel, steam and scalding water about the railroad yard. The detonation was heard throughout the neighborhood, attracting hundreds of persons to the scene.

The injured men, shop repairmen, were in the car repair shop, about 100 feet from the locomotive. This building was leveled by the blast and the workmen were scalded by water and steam and buried in the debris. Two smaller buildings nearby also were damaged, a freight car was lifted off the tracks, and windows in a passenger coach in the yard were broken.

J. A. Seiders of Reading, Pa., superintendent of motive power and rolling equipment, came to Philadelphia to join other railroad officials in questioning employes in an effort to determine the cause of the explosion.

CONFESSED THEFT HE COMMITTED IN BOSTON IN 1897

BOSTON, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Impelled by his conscience, which had been troubled for 33 years, a man whose name is being withheld today confessed to police that he had been guilty of a theft committed in a Boston lodging house in 1897. As a result, a search is being made for George Masters, a peddler, from whose trunk a sum of money was stolen.

The confessed thief told police he had boarded in a house with Masters on Old Charlestown street, now Washington street north, that he had run short of funds and had rifled the peddler's trunk. He was questioned at the time regarding the theft, but the matter finally went down on the police records as "unsolved." In the years which followed, despite wanderings which took him to the west coast, his conscience troubled him and today he confessed to Lieut. Stephen J. Gillis at Boston police headquarters.

EARLY RETURNS FROM STATE PRIMARIES ARE UNDECISIVE

In Michigan Senator Couzens Leads Gov. Osborn For Republican Senatorial Nomination—Gov. Long Probable Choice For Democratic Nominee For Senate in Louisiana —In South Carolina Senator Blease Is Running Behind His Opponent

(By the Associated Press)

A shower of ballots in eight state primaries yesterday obscured the results last night and only an occasional glimpse could be caught of a candidate.

In South Carolina, first former Representative James F. Byrnes and then Senator Cole L. Blease came into view and for several hours the heap of ballots that settled about the two veered with each new return. As the hours passed, Byrnes gained a lead of several thousand votes, but sufficient precincts still were missing to change the result. Nomination is equivalent to election.

Scattering returns in Michigan gave Senator James Couzens a small lead over former Governor Chase S. Osborn in their race for the republican senatorial nomination after the latter had led the incumbent in first reports.

Reports from a one-third of the precincts in Louisiana gave Governor Huey P. Long an apparent victory over Senator Joseph E. Ransdell by a slight margin for the democratic senatorial nomination, equivalent to election.

The South Carolina run off for the governorship saw first Colin D. Johnston and then Ibra C. Blackwood leading and the margin separating them was always narrow.

Early returns from the Michigan race for the republican gubernatorial nomination placed Attorney General Wilber M. Brucker ahead of former Governor Alex J. Groesbeck and Judge Edward Jerffies. Representative Grant M. Hudson also climbed ahead of his five opponents in his race for renomination from the sixth district. Prohibition had been an issue with Hudson running as a dry.

In New Hampshire, first returns placed Arthur P. Morrill of Concord ahead of former Governor John G. Winant and Dr. Hugh K. Moore of Berlin in their scramble for the republican designation at the head of the state ticket.

In other states, Vermont, Colorado, Arizona and Washington, the din of tabulating machines made the result inaudible.

MICHIGAN

DETROIT, Sept. 9.—(AP)— Senator James Couzens' lead in the race for the republican nomination to succe[illegible] himself jumped to 21,000 when 868 [illegible] the 2317 precincts of the state had been tabulated tonight. He had 92,306 votes while his opponent, Chase S. Osborn, had polled 71,341. The city of Detroit, always a Couzens stronghold, had not reported.

LOUISIANA

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 9.—(AP)—On the face of approximately one-third of the total precincts in Louisiana tonight, Governor Huey P. Long apparently had won the democratic nomination for the United States senate over the incumbent, Senator Joseph E. Ransdell.

Returns from 510 precincts out of a total of 1,423 gave Governor Long a majority of 3,631. The vote stood: Long, 44,621; Ransdell, 40,990.

Governor Long was leading Senator Ransdell by 6936 on 388 precincts out of a total of 1,173 in parishes outside of the city of New Orleans, the total being: Long, 28,760; Ransdell, 21,824.

SOUTH CAROLINA

COLUMBIA, S. C., Sept. 9.—(AP) — Senator Cole L. Blease, veteran political leader of South Carolina, seeking renomination for another term, was running 5,500 votes behind James F. Byrnes, of Spartanburg, former congressman, on the face of unofficial returns from today's democratic primary tabulated tonight.

With 1,296 precincts out of 1,422 accounted for, the vote stood: Byrnes, 103,075; Blease, 103,416.

VERMONT

MONTPELIER, Vt., Sept. 9.—(AP)—Stanley C. Wilson, Vermont's lieutenant governor who sought the republican nomination in today's primaries had forged far ahead of his two opponents when nearly half of the state's cities and towns had counted votes tonight.

With returns complete for governor from 110 cities and towns out of 248 in the state, in the republican primary, the vote stood: Wilson, 8,412; W. Arthur Simpson, 5,445; John W. Gordon, 1,344.

COLORADO

DENVER, Sept. 9.—(AP)—George H. Shaw, former chairman of the Colorado republican committee, took the lead over William V. Hodges, former treasurer of the republican national committee, for the republican senatorial nomination in early returns from the state primary today.

In a three-way race for the democratic nomination for senator, Edward P. Costigan, former member of the federal tariff commission, led by a considerable margin. His primary opponents were James A. Marsh, Denver lawyer, and Morrison Shafroth, son of a former United States senator from Colorado.

Returns from 128 precincts out of 1,582 in Colorado gave Shaw 8,052; Hodges, 6,587.

Returns from 81 precincts gave Costigan 402; Shafroth, 182; Marsh, 124.

ARIZONA

PHOENIX, Ariz., Sept. 9.—(AP)—Former Governor George W. P. Hunt took a lead of 833 votes over his nearest competitor in the four cornered race for the democratic gubernatorial nomination when 27 complete and 38 incomplete precincts out of the state's 502 reported tonight.

SHOT WOMAN COMPANION DEAD, THEN KILLED HIMSELF

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 9—(AP)—A moment before they would have reached the address to which they were being driven in a taxicab tonight, Angelo Amati shot and killed his women companion and then killed himself. Both were about 30 years old.

Police identified the woman as Thelma Dean, of Sanson street near 52nd. Amati, they said, was married.

George Marsh, the taxi driver, said they hailed him near City hall and directed him to drive to the Sansom street address. A few blocks from their destination, Marsh told police the couple embraced. Then he heard a pistol shot and when he turned around he saw the woman slumped on the floor of the car. Before he could make an outcry, Marsh said, Amati fired another shot into the woman's body and then shot himself in the head.

Police said they had learned of no motive for the shooting.

Police learned that Miss Dean's mother lives in North Bridgeport, Conn., but they were unable to ascertain her name or street address.

A letter, addressed to his wife, was found in Amati's pocket. In it he asked her forgiveness and added:

"I have never been true to you, but you have always been a wonderful girl. I am going to take the one with me who has caused it all. Be a good girl, and be true to me, or I'll come back and curse you."

DANIELSON

GINGRAS DECLINES TO RUN FOR SELECTMAN AGAIN

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 9.—A decided shakeup in the personnel of the board of selectmen of the town of Killingly as it has been for the past two years is in prospect. Following the defeat of Alcott D. Sayles of East Killingly in last night's democratic caucus for renomination for first selectman on that ticket, the announcement was made this afternoon that Selectman Napoleon P. Gingras, republican, Dayville, will not be a candidate for renomination at his party's caucus Thursday night. Mr. Gingras is declining again to be a candidate for renomination for business reasons. He finds that he cannot spare the time away from his store that his duties as selectman entail, so is stepping out of the race.

His retirement from office is a matter of great disappointment to the many who have supported him during the seven years he has served as a member of the board of selectmen. He has been an efficient official, painstaking in the discharge of his official duties and giving much time and study to the problems that the board of which he has been a member has been called upon to solve.

This afternoon there came from the inner circles of the republican party council that the candidate to seek nomination in place of Mr. Gingras will be John Z. Labelle, well-known resident of Ballouville. The field is, of course, open to all who desire to contest for the organization, but Mr. Labelle, a man who has made a marked success of his own business, and is a highly respected citizen, will have the support of the party organization. All signs point to the renomination of Charles A. Tillinghast as a candidate to succeed himself as first selectman of the town.

A storm had broken out today in the ranks of the democratic party in Killingly as the result of the defeat of Mr. Sayles for renomination as selectman in last night's caucus of that party. Selectman Sayles, in that office off and on much of the time for more than a quarter of a century, admittedly has a very strong following and is a powerful factor with the rank and file of that party in Killingly.

His friends are outspokenly peeved over his defeat last night, and in some instances were threatening dire reprisals today. Some of them were advocating that Mr. Sayles run as an independent candidate, but this proposal was not known to have Mr. Sayles' approval. In other quarters there was speculation as to whether he would lend his powerful aid, or permit his followers, to campaign to make Louis O. Stone of Attawaugan, candidate for second selectman on the democratic ticket, favorite for first selectman over Patrick Riley, Dayville, who has the party nomination for first selectman. This speculation grows out of the fact that Mr. Riley, who in years gone by has served various terms as a member of the board of selectmen, is regarded by the Sayles' faction of the party as the candidate of that portion of the party that repudiated Mr. Sayles' candidacy last week.

The whole set-up is such, what with a new republican candidate coming into the field as to forecast one of the most exciting battles for places on the board of selectmen that has taken place in this town in years. Unless present breaches are healed before election day, just anything can happen as to which candidates win at the polls.

State Police Destroy Liquor

Not until the show was over did state officers at the barracks here make known today that they had destroyed enough beer and liquor yesterday to set all of Danielson's people cuckoo had they imbibed it. The attendance of the public at the ceremonial would have been of neither value nor assistance to the state officers in carrying out their formal duty, and it might have saddened some portions of the said public in such degree as to make them forlorn for the rest of the season.

The beer and liquor destroyed under due supervision, had been seized in raids from time to time for weeks past. Included in the lot were hundreds of bottles of Scotch and Canadian liquors taken from rum runners' automobiles apprehended in Plainfield early in the summer. Since seizure the liquor has been locked up safely in the cellar of the barracks. Incident to the destruction of the liquor there was a bonfire, its flames fed by boxes, cases and cartons, and other materials in which the liquor was wrapped when seized. Recalling an expression having to do with submarine warfare during the World war, the whole shebang—beers, liquors, cordials, good, bad and indifferent—was "sunk without a trace."

The value of the allegedly good liquor destroyed was around $3,000, and what the other stuff was worth, if anything, is immaterial. There remains at the barracks one fine, racy-looking roadster seized in Plainfield from two Rome, N. Y., rum runners while it was loaded with hundreds of bottles of liquor originating in Canada. What disposition finally will be made of this machine is not known.

Dr. and Mrs. William Kinnan have returned to their home in Washington, D. C., after visiting here with Judge and Mrs. Sabin S. Russell. Dr. Kinnan, who is both a doctor of medicine and a lawyer, is a graduate of the University of Michigan. In the official life of the national capital he is first assistant commissioner of patents and a member of the United States supreme court bar. As an authority on matters pertaining to patents he ranks among the three greatest experts in the English-speaking world.

State officers of the Danielson barracks ranging this territory this afternoon were keeping a close lookout for a Whippet sedan stolen out of Norwich about noon today. The car bore the Connecticut registration Sx-690 when stolen.

Couture Not to Blame

It appeared improbable today that any action leading to criminal prosecution would be taken against Leo J. Couture of 16 Laurel Hill avenue, Norwich, driver of the Thames River line truck that struck and fatally injured Donald Smith, 20, of Hartford on the new state highway at Wauregan Monday forenoon. In official circles, though the investigation was not complete today, the belief appeared to exist generally that the accident was one for which Couture was not responsible. The body of Smith, who was only 20 years of age and a very fine young man, had been forwarded to the home of his parents in Hartford.

Secretary L. Edwin Hill of the Windham County Y. M. C. A., with headquarters here, has announced that the fall activities of the organization will begin Friday evening of this week with a meeting of the Danielson Employed Boys' brotherhood, which will be entering upon its second year since organization. Similar groups are to be organized during the fall in Moosup, Plainfield and Putnam.

Several towns having expressed a desire to enter boys into church federation work, they will be organized and will work to promote activities within the churches during the fall and winter seasons. Down in the southern district an inter-church bowling league is to be organized, with teams representing Plainfield, Central Village, Moosup and Wauregan. Later in the season, probably about mid-October, the inter-church basketball league that has functioned in Killingly for two seasons past will be reorganized and made ready to play out a schedule of games.

PUTNAM

CHARLES A. GATES NOMINATED FOR WINDHAM COUNTY SHERIFF

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 9—In convention, assembled in the superior court chambers in this city today, 48 delegates of various Windham county towns, in formal ballot unanimously declared Charles A. Gates of Willimantic, the republican candidate for county sheriff to succeed himself in that office. The convention was called to order at 10 o'clock by the republican county committee and E. C. Babson of Brooklyn was elected chairman following a roll call of the delegates. As soon as the convention became duly opened F. Louis Hall of Willimantic, a member of the Windham delegation addressed the chair and in the following speech nominated Sheriff Gates as the Windham county republican candidate for high sheriff:

CHARLES A. GATES

"We have gathered here today to place in nomination one who will serve as our candidate for sheriff in the coming election. When a county sheriff is talked of, we are all of one mind in thinking of the present incumbent, whose record of fifteen years is his best recommendation to the voters of Windham county.

"He has upheld the highest traditions of his illustrious predecessors and he has been untiring in his efforts to merit the approval of all his constituents, whatever their political affiliations may be.

"He is honored and respected by the judicial and legal fraternities with which he is so closely associated in many of his duties. To the unfortunate who are under his supervision, he is ever kind and considerate of their well being and tries to instill in them the desire to improve their condition and become law abiding and useful citizens. We need the service of such a man for this office, perhaps more today than ever before. Ladies and gentlemen, it is indeed a pleasure and an honor to present as our candidate for sheriff of Windham county the Honorable Charles A. Gates."

Following Mr. Hall's nominating speech, the committee on resolutions, consisting of Henry N. Benoit, Putnam, Edmund Greene, Eastford and James H. Johnson of Scotland brought in a resolution in which the delegations of the county re-affirmed their faith in the principles of the republican party and recommended to the electorate of the county, Sheriff Gates as the nominee for re-election to the office he now holds. His renomination, the resolution expressed, was made in recognition of his qualifications displayed in proper performance of the many and exacting duties of the sheriff's office and his record of fifteen years, which was cited as his best recommendation to the voters of the county.

Sheriff Gates in his well known genial and affable manner arose and upon recognition delivered his speech of acceptance in which he thanked the various delegates for their kind manifestation of personal regard. He also made known his pleasure of being selected to be the county republican standard bearer in the fall campaign and promised, if elected, that he would do his duty to the fullest extent, without variation or shadow of turning from the true, the right course.

Sheriff Gates said: "You have paid me a great compliment. To be named once as the candidate of the republican party for sheriff of Windham county is a great honor. To be named for a fifth term as such candidate is something that makes a man almost young again. I like to think that it means that you believe in me, that you know I love this dear old county, that you believe I will be faithful in every way, that if elected I will do my duty to the fullest extent without variation or shadow of turning from the true, the right course.

"Windham county is now, what it always has been, the banner county of our state for the republican party. In other counties, in good years as they term them, the party gets large majorities; but on the night of election day, whatever the political weather, the returns from our county cheer up the hearts of all republicans; for whatever fate may do to the other parts of the state, here at home we have carried the flag through to victory and let us hope that this year will be no exception to the rule.

"We have a habit of working together, of standing together in Windham county. We have our differences in politics, but somehow they usually disappear on election day, and we present an undivided front to our friends on the other side.

"I have tried to serve you all honestly and fairly, I have tried to give you the best that is in me, in the office which you have entrusted to me. Above all else, I feel that whatever success has crowned my efforts I owe it all to the people of this county who have never failed to give me, in the performance of my duty, all their help and good wishes.

"I should be more than human if I did not feel overwhelmed by this exhibition of your friendship to me. I am of course glad to be named as the standard bearer in this campaign, but over and above all that, I feel (beyond expression) this manifestation of the personal regard of the members of the convention towards me, for after all while honors and position mean much to all of us there is one thing that one values above them all, that is this close personal regard for each other which your action indicates—that deep friendship which is the greatest thing in life."

The convention today was one of the largest attended, held in this county in several years. All of the 48 delegates from the various towns in the county elected to attend were present with the exception of two—Edward J. McBride of Killingly and W. F. Sheldon of Plainfield—who submitted their proxies. They were:

Ashford—William Armitage, Peter Katoun, John Chism, Fred M. Wright.

Following the convention adjournment, the delegations repaired to the Putnam inn where they were the guests of Sheriff Gates at luncheon, during which the sheriff received the personal felicitations of his many friends of both major political parties who called to pay their respects and wish him an enjoyable campaign which on election day they hoped would see another county wide expression of voters confidence in his merits which he has so ably displayed during the past 15 years. Following the luncheon, Sheriff Gates stated that he expected to encounter opposition in his fight for re-election and added he would begin his campaign at once, carrying it on in every hamlet within the district, quietly and effectively until the day of election.

Sheriff Gates' Record

Charles A. Gates, who was unanimously renominated at Putnam today for the office of sheriff of Windham county, has held that office with honor to himself and to the entire county since April 15, 1915. He had been elected the early part of the previous year but owing to other duties allowed John O. Fox, democrat, to remain in office until the above date.

Sheriff Gates was born in Mifflin, Ohio, August 23, 1867 and attended the district school in that place. At the age of 16 years he took a business course in Mansfield, Ohio and was first employed as a cashier in the Boston Dry Goods store in Mansfield, remaining there three years. He resigned in Auril, 1888, to Come East, being then less than 21 years of age.

For the ensuing 27 years, he was employed by the New Haven railroad, first in Willimantic as baggagemaster and chief clerk for three years, then as freight agent at Franklin, Mass., for one year. Subsequently he was chief clerk of the freight department in Willimantic for seven months and the same length of time following in Waterbury, going from there to Southbridge, Mass., in the same capacity for 16 months. From March, 1895 to February, 1907, he was freight agent in Willimantic and for the next six years he held an advanced position as general freight agent of the New Haven railroad with headquarters in Willimantic. From August 1, 1913 to August 1, 1915, he was chief fire claim agent of all the lines of the system in Rhode Island and Connecticut, resigning to give his entire time to the duties of sheriff of Windham county to which he had been elected the year previous.

He is possessor of a political record that is replete with honors and accomplishments. His first venture in the political field was in 1898 when he was elected representative from Windham to the general assembly for the term 1897-1898, and again in 1899 for the term of 1900-1901. He served as auditor of Windham county in 1901 and 1902.

In December 1901, he was elected councilman-at-large of Willimantic, then state senator in November 1902, to represent the 17th district and again in 1906 to represent the 29th district. He was chosen member of the republican state central committee in December, 1902 and has served continuously in that capacity ever since, being renominated at the caucus of the 29th senatorial district held in Willimantic Monday, for the ensuing two years.

In April, 1912, he was elected a delegate from the second congressional district to the republican national convention held in Chicago, receiving a similar honor in 1928 when he was elected delegate to the national convention held in Kansas City. He was chosen chairman of the republican congressional committee for the second district in April, 1912, and has since held that position. He ranks next to former Attorney-General Frank E. Healy of Windsor Locks as oldest member of the state central committee.

Sheriff Gates was elected mayor of the city of Willimantic in December, 1917, re-elected in 1919, in 1921 and again in December, 1927, carrying notable majorities on all occasions.

FIRE DAMAGES AT STUDIOS OF MAROT SCHOOL

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 9—A fire of undetermined origin in the new studios of Music and Art at the Marot Junior college in Thompson this morning at 3 o'clock partially destroyed the structure, before being brought under control. The school officials did not place the loss but it is understood that musical equipment was damaged by smoke and water. The building, a recent addition to the college campus was not entirely consumed. It is a long frame structure. The fire which was discovered inside the building burned stub-

HELPING NEW ENGLAND

There are many organizations which are interested in and working for the best interests of New England. There are others which are laboring for the same purpose in the respective states of New England. Through their separate and combined efforts, this part of the country is bound, sooner or later, to experience the benefits of such work, if benefits lie in those directions.

President Proctor of the New England council gave an idea of how this work was being done when, in his address before the New England conference of State Federations of Women's Clubs, he pointed out the cooperation that is being carried on between these federations and the council in the matter of highway beautification, recreational development and in the farm marketing programme.

These are efforts which have come in for increased attention within recent years. New England has always had its attractions, but it has not always had its systems of good roads. The latter have made it desirable for tourists to seek out the delightful spots in New England according to their likes and enjoy them to their heart's content. They have been so impressed that one trip was not enough and their enthusiasm has been instrumental in stirring up similar interest among others.

As a recreation ground New England stands out prominently and highway beautification has its important bearing, both for the tourists and for the residents. Next to having good roads there is appreciation of the various touches which make the highways more attractive.

While there is a business in serving the visitors to New England that needs careful attention, there is also an opportunity for stimulating production on New England farms. This part of the country can and should raise a larger part of its requirements. Through the improvement of the farm marketing situation this development can be encouraged. In fact, something of that kind is needed in order to meet the competition from outside, and with organizations interested in New England working for these advantages for New England, desired ends should be attained. It is a joint effort that should bear good fruit.

RURAL RESIDENTS AROUSED

In the fight against the disfiguring billboards, which has been waged by various organizations, what promises to have an important bearing on the situation is the effort that is being put forward by the grange to put its shoulder to the wheel in behalf of the cause.

Membership in the grange includes those who are directly concerned with the billboards, those who might be considered to have an indirect financial interest in the signs, but it is the purpose, according to the National Grange Monthly, "to wage energetic warfare on this growing disfigurement of the scenic beauties of America, especially in the rural sections, where most of the granges are located. . . . The grange agitation is especially directed against smearing over the filling stations and roadside stands with all sorts of signs, as well as big announcement boards for a mile or two each side of the stand. Some of the most beautiful scenic drives in the country have thus been ruined and the grange takes the position that a halt must be called on such disfigurement."

It is thus made apparent that the people in the country are recognizing the need of joining hands in the movement for the prevention of undesirable landscape conditions in the districts outside of the cities. It is realized, of course, that many of the farm owners have profited from the selling of the right to erect large advertising signs, that they have had their barns or other buildings painted in exchange for the signs they carried, but with the increased use of the highways the heavy motor traffic and the efforts to appeal in various commercial ways to such traffic at points along the highway, it has not been overlooked by those in whose neighborhood the signs have been erected that there is a disfigurement and that the unobstructed views, the natural landscapes and the attractive countryside are preferable.

With those in the country giving their support to the efforts being made by those in the city against the billboard idea, the movement is certain to receive a reinforcement that will be both valuable and far reaching.

POSTAL RATES

In view of what the postmaster general has had to say concerning the postal deficit and the need of increasing the revenue, there is bound to be much thought given to the situation, and it is apparently as the result of the postmaster general's discussion of the deficit that a suggestion is offered by a Philadelphia correspondent of the New York Tribune.

This correspondent, from the city which produced one of the country's greatest postmaster generals, looks over the situation and recognizes that it is costing the government just as much to handle a postcard as it does to deliver a letter of the first class and, as an onlooker, he makes the suggestion that the rate for postcards be increased to two cents, the same as a letter. He figures that no single piece of mail should be posted for less than two cents and as he turns it over in his mind he sees where the department could profit largely by the increased income that would be obtained.

That idea is not so different from the one that was put into operation some few years ago, when the postcard rate was made two cents. That provided an opportunity for demonstrating what the reaction of the public would be to such a move. It was quickly recognized as a burden, one that did not need to be assumed, and the result was that the number of postcards sent, even the picture cards, fell off tremendously. It was the means of causing many who did a picture postcard business to shut up shop. There were cards sent at the increased rate but the number was so greatly decreased that the revenue suffered. What happened then it could reasonably be expected would be repeated if another doubling of the rate should be resorted to.

When it comes to handling postal matter, there is much of so much less value than a postcard that is handled at greater expense, it seems probable that the doubling of the postcard rate would be a matter of last resort. Working out a readjustment of postal rates is not the simplest thing imaginable. It never has been satisfactory to everyone and it probably never will be, regardless of what the rates are.

STIFFENING IMMIGRATION BAN

When President Hoover announces that the state department has served notice on consul generals that closer attention must be given to determining the financial status of applicants for entrance into this country, it will be appreciated that it is certain to have a salutary effect upon the unemployment situation.

With employment opportunities at a lower ebb than usual there is not the attraction for aliens to come to this country that there has been, but with unemployment, large or small, it is evident that such employment opportunities as exist belong to those in this country rather than those desiring to come in.

Furthermore, it is apparent that this is not the place for those aliens who are not in a position to take care of themselves. With plenty of work it might be expected that they would be self-supporting, and the expectation is that industrial conditions will continue to show improvement, but if they are not able to sustain themselves through sufficient possessed funds and would simply be increasing the number of unemployed, if admitted, it is a wise and timely move that is made to see that they remain where they are.

It is for the best interest of those needing employment in this country, and it is for the good of such applicants that they remain under conditions with which they are familiar than to be allowed to face the uncertainties of a strange country at an unfavorable time. Thus the tightening of the restrictions must be looked upon as meeting the present-day situation, and even with improvements a situation which ought not to be handicapped by a flood of aliens unable to take care of themselves. Such a situation is bad enough under favorable conditions. It is wisely met by stiffening the ban just now.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF

Georgia has much to its discredit in the record of lynchings in that state. It led all the others for a time in its disregard for the Constitution and the laws of its own commonwealth. During that time there was the claim that it did not represent the better sentiment of the state and, although it was a long time manifesting itself, that public spirit finally came to the front and lynchings took a drop. Instead of resorting to lynch laws, Georgia has for some recent months been shunning such practice until it was being believed that a much needed reform has taken place down there.

Perhaps it was too much to expect that all the lawless activity could be wiped out so quickly and it may be unjust to judge the state by the latest demonstration of mob rule, but for the time being at least there is created the impression that Georgia has taken a backward step. It is like bringing up old history when reports disclose the placing of Darien, in that state, under marital law, after armed men had forced their way into the county jail and shot a Negro, charged with killing a police officer, though he maintained he was innocent.

This was another one of those instances where the mob had refused to permit the law to take its course. There was nothing to indicate that the accused and his companion, for whom search was being continued, would not receive an early trial and proper punishment. Without waiting for any formalities, without making certain they were right, without complying with the laws of the state themselves, they proceeded to take life, thus doing illegally the very thing for which they were imposing punishment upon the accused.

It adds another to the long list of disgraces which Georgia has suffered at the hands of just such mobs. The reaction to it will indicate to some extent whether the state gives its endorsement.

ANGEL CHILD

"My dear," whispered Mrs. Cabell-Smyth to Mrs. Humphrey Vandermere ten minutes before the Saturday Afternoon Discussion club was called to order. "Mrs. Archmore won't be here today. She's absolutely prostrated at her home, poor dear, and she asked me over the telephone this morning to give her excuse to the secretary."

"What in the world has happened to her?" queried Mrs. Vandermere in consternation.

"Oh, nothing really tragic," related Mrs. Cabell-Smyth, "but a real tragedy nevertheless, from Mrs. Archmore's point of view. You know her daughter, Vivienne?"

"Oh, yes," returned Mrs. Vandermere. "I know her—that is, I did know her, as a child. But she's been abroad so much lately that no one has seen much of her here at home. Let me see, I guess it's been five years since I saw her, just before she entered Miss Manchester's fashionable girls' college in the east and started spelling her name the French way. Sweet girl, but spoiled! Oh, my dear!"

"Her mother's pride and joy," commented Mrs. Cabell-Smyth. "And, as you say, spoiled. She's been taught to think no one was as good as she, and given opportunities enough for ten girls. Governesses, tutors, exclusive schools, music lessons, dancing lessons, art lessons—months in France, Germany and England to study art and music, a year in Italy to study Italian architecture—a French modiste at home—to make her clothes, jewels and furs made to order, automobiles in the latest mode—my dear, there's nothing Vivienne Archmore hasn't had to make her the paragon of women.

"And men—my dear, only the most eligible young bachelors have been entertained at the Archmore home since Vivienne 'came out.' There was that British viscount something or other—Mrs. Archmore made it clear to every one she fully expected to become the mother-in-law of a title as soon as Vivienne had blushingly accepted her distinguished suitor. But did Vivienne fulfill the parental expectations? She did not.

"Then there was a diamond prince from the east so rich he oozed money. It was plain to every one he considered Vivienne, with her accomplishments, a suitable mate for him in his villa on the Riviera. But Vivienne couldn't see him for dust. There was also a prominent young French composer, a novelist, a gridiron star from Harvard and a rising young attorney, all of whom were regarded by the senior Archmores as desirable suitors for their made-to-order daughter."

"My goodness," breathed Mrs. Vandermere, "I had no idea. All this sounds perfectly thrilling to me. But what on earth has it to do with Mrs. Archmore's sudden upheaval this morning that you spoke of?" Mrs. Cabell-Smyth looked portentous.

"Everything," she said softly. "Everything, my dear. You can well guess from what I've told you that she considered her Vivienne the best educated, cultured and trained young woman under heaven—a perfect wife for any man."

"Of course," acquiesced Mrs. Vandermere. "And wasn't she?"

"That's just the point," said Mrs. Cabell-Smyth. "Vivienne telegraphed her mother a long night letter"—Mrs. Smyth's voice was vibrant with excitement—"to tell her she eloped last night!" Mrs. Vandermere looked surprised.

"Well," she replied evenly, "is that all? An elopement isn't so shocking these days. Whom did she marry—the young French composer, the novelist or the rising young attorney?"

"None of them!" confided Mrs. Cabell-Smyth in a drawn voice. "She married her mechanic—the young man who had charge of all her automobiles at their garage and studied medicine at night."

"Her mechanic!" repeated Mrs. Vandermere dully. "No wonder her mother—"

"It wouldn't have been so bad," concluded Mrs. Cabell-Smyth, "if Vivienne had merely announced her marriage to a poor man, together with her intention of helping him become, if possible, the kind of husband acceptable to the elder Archmores. But the blow that nearly killed her mother, after all these years of training, was Vivienne's last words in the telegram: 'Just think, mother, dear, with my very own kitchenette, and cooking and sewing and saving money, how hard I'll have to study to learn to become the kind of wife John expects me to be!'—Exchange.

A Washington Bystander

Associated Press Staff Writer

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9—An eyesore war relic that greeted every Washington visitor who stepped out from the great railway terminal for his first view of the capitol is vanishing.

No longer will its ugly stucco front mar the vista of the capitol dome that is the first impression of any new comer traveling by rail.

For the old guard of some 500 or 600 women clerks in government departments who dwell in the war-built government hotels came to their waterloo in the senate despite all the oratory of Blaine of Wisconsin, their last champion.

The buildings are being razed and the capitol plaza, planned so long ago, at last is to be made beautiful for the throngs who will come in 1932 for the George Washington bicentennial celebrations.

No Man's Land

Many of these temporary buildings rushed up in 1917-18 to take the overflow of tens of thousands of women war clerks who trooped to Washington have already gone.

The blocks where they stood show heaved and tumbled earth piles reminiscent of no-man's land in France.

The prospect of rearranging and landscaping the plaza site that will join the capitol grounds with the terminal plaza itself has waited on removal of the last of the stucco buildings.

During the war and for some years thereafter, the government hotels were very busy places. They provided women clerks with a room and two meals a day at a cost of $45 or $50 a month.

They also provided visitors' rooms where wartime romances flourished under watchful eyes of government hostesses, places for dancing and other entertainment, and did much to make the lot of feminine war workers easier socially and economically as they did their bit for the nation.

The remnant of that devoted band is composed of permanent clerks in the government service; most of them older women. They have known for years that their grip on these flimsy built structures was very slight.

Every year congress refought the battle of government hotel appropriations without which the service must be discontinued, although no actual cost to the government was involved.

And every year the dwindling population of the buildings mustered strength and influence enough to hang on another 12 months.

Last Stand

Leading their last forlorn hope, Senator Blaine produced a petition variously signed by these good ladies pleading to be allowed to continue in occupancy a few more months. Women from 43 of the 48 states were represented.

Their distribution by states was interesting. The largest state group was from New York, 52.

Next largest was Pennsylvania with 41, then Illinois, 36; Massachusetts, 35, Ohio, 28, Maryland, 27; Missouri, 24, Indiana and Virginia, 20 each; Louisiana, Minnesota and Tennessee, 16 each; Iowa 15; District of Columbia, 14; Georgia, 13; Wisconsin, 11; New Jersey, 10.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Constitution Day

Mr. Editor: The Declaration of Independence was the engagement ring of the 13 colonies; the Constitution their wedding certificate.

Constitution day, September 17th, draws near.

George Washington said that the stars on the flag were taken from heaven.

It would be a fine thing for the flag, and for them, if the teachers, parents and children of each state knew at least the position of their state's star on the flag. I do not find that they so know it except here in New Jersey.

Connecticut's flag star is the fifth, it being the fourth from the right on the top row.

How many state stars from Delaware to Arizona do you and the youngsters know? You are going to display the American flag on Constitution day, so that all may see just where Connecticut's star shines, aren't you?

Cataract Way Back When And Now

By Harry S. Gradle, M. D., Chicago.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

"Way back when" is not such a long time ago when it comes to the question of cataract of old age. Within the ken of our immediate forebears, a simple senile cataract meant blindness except for a favored few who could be operated upon and had the good luck to have a successful outcome to the operation. With the lack of anesthetics and the lack of surgical cleanliness that prevailed up to some sixty or seventy years ago, an operation for cataract held far greater dangers than flying across the ocean does today, and the proportion of success was not as great.

But that was all "way back when" and the entire picture is changed today. Now a patient with a cataract of old age is referred by his family doctor to the oculist and if the time is ripe, is sent to the hospital. There a thorough physical examination is made and various tests are taken to prove that the tissues around the eye are surgically clean. Under aseptic precautions that are as strict as for a major abdominal operation, the cataract is removed in about two minutes. The patient experiences no pain for the eye is deadened completely with drops. Both eyes have to be bandaged for several days in order to avoid motion and absolute rest in bed is enforced for the same reason. In from ten to fourteen days, the patient walks out of the front door of the hospital with dark glasses or a light bandage over the operated eye and some three or four weeks later, is fitted with glasses that restore the vision of the pre-cataractous years. Such is the history of 95 per cent of the cataract operations of today.

Many elderly people are afraid that they are too old for successful operation and in consequence, walk in darkness for years that should have been filled with eye happiness. At a recent meeting of the American Medical association in Detroit, there was read a paper dealing with this very question. Leading eye surgeons from all parts of the world combined their statistics as to the age of patients at the time of cataract operation and these figures were divided into two groups. The first group dealt with patients operated upon in hospitals of Europe and the United States and numbered 4,230 cases. 6 1-2 per cent of this number were less than fifty years of age; 17 1-2 per cent were between seventy and eighty; and the remainder were over eighty years of age. The second group dealt with cataract patients operated upon by one Colonel Wright, in Madras, India, and also numbered 4,230 cases. 19 1-2 per cent of this group were less than fifty years of age; 32 3-4 per cent were between fifty and sixty; and 49 per cent were between sixty and seventy; 7 per cent were between seventy and eighty and the small remainder over eighty years of age.

So it can be seen that the majority of patients are operated upon for cataract between the age of sixty and seventy years, which certainly is not even a ripe old age and much less than the Biblical allotment. The average age in the statistics of one surgeon was sixty-four and a half years and in the statistics of another surgeon, sixty-five years. Quite a number operated upon after fourscore and ten years enjoyed subsequent good eyesight.

The moral of all this talk and figures is this: Don't let the opinions of superstitious friends and neighbors prevent the cataract operation for the aged. Let your family doctor and the eye surgeon be the ones to determine such matters. The world progresseth apace and physicians in all branches of medicine are trying to hold up their end of the job by keeping good health and useful sight for people as long as they may live.

Hankow: China's Busiest Interior City

Hankow, an armed camp because of the constant recent threat of invasion by armies of Chinese communists, is one of China's most important cities, ranking commercially as the busiest of the interior trade centers of the republic, according to a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"While Shanghai can be identified as 'China's New York,' Hankow can, with good cause, be considered the celestial republic's New Orleans, Pittsburgh and Chicago rolled into one," continues the bulletin. "Although 600 miles inland the city, thanks to the great Yangtze Kiang, is, like New Orleans, a port for ocean steamers. China's greatest steel and iron mills are located there; and the city is the assembling point and shipping center for tremendous quantities of produce from the farms and gardens and groves of China, and of ores from her mines.

"In its purely local geography, Hankow can be compared to New York. It consists of three cities grouped across the water from each other like New York, Brooklyn and Jersey City. The group is situated where the narrow Han river meets the broad Yangtze, which is two miles across at this point. Hankow proper, by far the largest of the three communities lies in a triangle between the left bank of the Han and the left bank of the Yangtze. Across the Han is Hanyang, where the tall chimneys of great steel mills pour out an incessant stream of smoke. Across the Yangtze from both is Wuchang, capital of Hupeh province, and for ages an important political center. Together the three closely associated cities have a population of one-and-a-half million people, with close to a million of the total in Hankow. The group is often referred to as 'the Wu-Han cities.'

"Hankow's best aspect is presented to the traveler who approaches the city by river steamer from down stream. For more than two miles the international Bund stretches along the north bank of the river. It is a broad boulevard, paved, shaded by rows of trees, and faced on the land side by group after group of imposing buildings. In the distance can be seen the extensive concrete 'go-downs' (warehouses) in which hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of cotton, silk, tea, wood-oil, beans, and dozens of other commodities are stored for shipment.

"Farthest up stream, adjoining the native city, is the British concession which was the first unit of the 'international city.' It was established in 1861 when Hankow was first opened to foreign trade. It extends for half a mile along the river and is joined by the Russian concession which dates from 1896. Next lies the French concession established the same year, and beyond it the former German concession, now taken over by the Chinese. Farthest down stream is the Japanese concession set apart in 1898. There is no separate American settlement. The consulate of the United States and that of Denmark are in the French concession. In the British area are the Spanish, Dutch, and Belgian consulates. The Italian, Swedish, and Norwegian consulates are in the former German territory. The concessions are marked by relatively broad, well-kept streets and by the handsome buildings that house the legation offices, hotels, banks, and shops. Modern water and sewer systems and electric lighting have been installed. These improved conditions have attracted tens of thousands of well-to-do Chinese families to take up their residences in the concessions.

"The native city of Hankow presents a marked contrast to the concessions. Houses and hotels are crowded in narrow streets devoid of sanitation, and the populace are dependent on water from the Yangtze, much of it carried in pails by coolies. The city was practically destroyed by fire in 1911 during the revolution which overthrew the empire and established the republic. It was hoped that the city could be rebuilt along modern lines with wide streets, but instead the old tangle of alleys and crooked streets lined by haphazard structures sprang up, so that congestion is even worse than before.

"China's dependence on man-power can be seen in striking fashion when ships are being loaded and unloaded at one of the many 'hulks' (floating piers), along the river. An unbroken string of men under bales and bags and packages toils back and forth, swarming over the hulk and its gangplanks, the dry mud of the river bank and up streets for perhaps two or three blocks to and from warehouses. They remind one of labor armies of ants carrying leaves and bits of food.

"In normal times the white population of Hankow's concessions find time for recreation at one of the most complete clubs to be found in the Orient. Known as 'The Race club,' it provides facilities for horse racing, riding, shooting, golf, swimming, tennis, baseball, cricket, bowling and dancing."

The Fur Flies

Jealous rage! It's very clear
That such you'll find may cost you dear.
—Old Mother Nature.

Impy the black Chipmunk was in a jealous rage. He was jealous of a big handsome stranger who had been paying attention to little Miss Frisky, the prettiest Chipmunk in all the Great World. Anyway, that is what Impy thought. Impy thought to make himself look very big and fierce. "Go away from here!" he barked.

"Go away yourself!" retorted the stranger.

"If you don't, you'll be sorry," barked Impy.

"Who'll make me sorry?" demanded the stranger.

"I will!" replied Impy fiercely. "I'll make you sorry!"

"Come and do it!" retorted the stranger. "Just come and do it!"

"I will!" said Impy, and ran a few steps toward the stranger. Then he stopped. That stranger looked bigger than he had thought. "He certainly is bigger than I am," muttered Impy to himself. "If he is bigger, he must be stronger."

These two Chipmunks used their claws, and they used their teeth

"What's the matter? Are you afraid?" taunted the stranger.

"No!" declared Impy, and he tried to make his voice sound very brave. "Do you think I would be afraid of any one like you?"

The stranger chuckled and it was a most unpleasant sounding chuckle. "You are afraid," said he.

"I am not!" retorted Impy.

"You are afraid; and it is a good thing for you that you are," said the stranger.

"I tell you I am not afraid!" cried Impy, trying very hard to make his voice sound as if he really meant it.

"Then why don't you come on and fight?" retorted the stranger.

Just then Impy saw little Miss Frisky peering out at him from behind a big stone. He wanted to run away; but with Miss Frisky looking on, he couldn't do that. Right down inside, he really was afraid of this big stranger. He would have given anything to be able to run away. But to run away with little Miss Frisky looking on wouldn't do at all. So, instead of running away, he ran forward. Yes, sir, he ran right straight toward that big stranger! He did it so suddenly, and it was so unexpected on the part of the big Chipmunk, that the latter was not ready for him. Impy struck him and struck him hard. He knocked the big stranger right off that stone.

My, my, my such a mad Chipmunk as that stranger was! He flew back at Impy and knocked him off the stone. Then the fur flew! Yes, sir, the fur flew! Those two Chipmunks used their claws and they used their teeth. They kicked and they scratched and they bit. The fur flew. Little Miss Frisky came out to where she could see better. Her eyes were very big with fright and excitement. Had you been there, you couldn't have told which one she hoped would win.

Impy forgot that he was afraid. He forgot that this stranger was bigger than he. He just used tooth and claw for all he was worth. He didn't even feel the bites and the scratches that the big Chipmunk gave him. They rolled over and over on the ground. Once in a while they had to stop for breath. Then they went at it again. Without realizing what she was doing, little Miss Frisky crept nearer and nearer. Which one would win? Which one did she want to win?

Stories That Recall Others

Helping Out on the Farm!

Several weeks ago a young city chap married a farmer's daughter and not finding a job in the city he urged his bride to take him home to her folks—he would help out on the farm! Their homestead was not far away and they made their way there.

His old buddies missed him around the store corner. One of them asked: "What's become of Speedy?"

"He's down on the farm with her folks," was the reply.

"What doing?"

"Milking the family bank account, I reckon."

Slight of Hand

A young miss who had not mastered all the vocabulary necessary to describe articles in the grocery, was asked by a friend what it was that she held in her hand after having hastily withdrawn a plum from the basket.

An inspection of the fruit first in one hand and then in the other followed, but no opinion as to its identity was expressed. This continued for a few minutes when a lightning-like reach for another basket brought forth the remark: "It is a green bean!" The article described was obtained in the quick exchange in the second basket.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Stanley P. Rockwell Company Hartford.

The Stanley P. Rockwell company was incorporated in 1923, originally under the name of The New England Heat-Treating Service company and later changed to its present form. In its early days the company operated principally as consulting metallurgists and as sales agents for heat-treating equipment and supplies. Offices were located on High street in Hartford and as more room was required, were later moved to Trumbull street. One of the principal selling items was the Rockwell hardness tester, an instrument used to measure the hardness of metals, which is now universally used throughout the world and is considered a standard for hardness tests.

About this time the company further developed and commenced the manufacture of the Rockwell dilatometer, an instrument used for the precise heat-treatment of steels. As the sales of this instrument grew, and as its use extended to all parts of the United States and many European countries larger quarters were again required, and in 1929 a move was made to Homestead avenue in Hartford where a building was erected especially designed for the requirements. At the same time the activities of the concern were enlarged to include commercial heat-treating. Job or contract heat-treating is done for other concerns in all parts of Connecticut and for many at greater distances. The heat-treating shop is the most modern in New England, the latest types of electric and gas furnaces all with automatic temperature controls being used. In addition the chemical, physical, and metallurgical laboratories offer a complete service to other industries, and greatly assist in maintaining the high quality product of the Connecticut craftsman.

The aim of The Stanley P. Rockwell company is to offer to other Connecticut industries a reliable and trustworthy source for metallurgical equipment or advice, and a place where contract heat-treating may be carried out under ideal conditions. To bring this about a high grade personnel is augmented by most modern and up-to-date equipment.

The present officers are: Stanley P. Rockwell, president; Marcus E. Gere, vice president; Raymond W. Woodward, secretary and treasurer.

MT. MISERY FROGS FAVOR VOLSTEAD MODIFICATION

The migrating frogs of Mt. Misery are again attracting attention. Over in one section of the Ekonk road there are two ponds, some acres in extent one on each side of the highway. One, evidently fed by springs, holds to nearly high water mark during the dryest seasons. The other, which depends on a small brook for its supply, is down now to a peculiar looking floor of lily pads, with an occasional small mud-hole. People coming through that section Tuesday found the road spotted with frogs which were leaving the dried pond in favor of a little less Volstead quarter. From great green chaps, with eyes like marbles, that would weigh from two to five pounds, the new tenement-seekers scaled down to little striped fellows that seemed to make no effort in jumping six feet. Here and there along the road there was sad evidence that the big green boys didn't seem to possess the trick of traffic dodging, while the small sorts cleared the wheel tracks at a single leap.

Temperature Of 40

This section escaped a frost just before sunrise Tuesday by the scant margin of 8 degrees, for the mercury fell to 40. Dahlias and other early fall flowers are now in their finest bloom. Local weather sharps are figuring that if this section can get by this full moon, and into the last quarter the 15th, that there will be another month of medium summer temperature. Last fall the first freezing frost came Oct. fifth, with another the seventh, followed by three weeks when the mercury held above 40.

COMMERCE CHAMBER WILL HAVE MEMBERSHIP MEETING

Directors of the chamber of commerce, with President Frank R. Murdy presiding, met Tuesday evening in the chamber of commerce rooms, and decided upon having a membership meeting on Monday, Sept. 29, which will be at the Wauregan hotel and at which time the new board of directors will be elected.

The meeting also gave consideration to the question of choosing a new secretary to take the place of John Richardson, resigned. It was understood that several names were before the directors, but no choice was made and the probability is that a secretary will not be chosen until after the membership meeting on the 29th.

Connor, Jr., second son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Connor, of 15 Lincoln avenue, Norwich, was solemnized by the cousin of the bridegroom, Rev. Richard Fanning, of St. Ambrose's church, Bridgeport. Preceding the ceremony there was an organ recital by Prof. O. F. DeVaux. The cathedral quartet sang the music of the solemn nuptial mass, celebrated by Rev. Father Fanning, with Rev. Raymond G. RE-ELECTION FOR RUTLAND WOMAN AS CHAIRMAN OF N. E. CLUB FEDERATION

The New England Conference of the State Federation of Women's clubs, in session Monday and Tuesday at the Griswold hotel, Eastern Point, re-elected as chairman Mrs. Omeron H. Coolidge of Rutland, Vt., at a general meeting at noon Tuesday. Mrs. Edward L. Pride, of Somerville, Mass., was re-elected vice chairman, and Miss Greta C. Kerr of Portland Me., was elected press chairman.

At the Tuesday morning meeting, Mrs. Guy E. Speare, presiding, Sidney A. Edwards of the Connecticut Bureau of Markets gave an address on What New England Means to the Consumer. He said that New England agriculture is facing the problem of western and southern competition but that he felt sure that Yankee ingenuity and perserverance would not allow its markets to go by default.

Highway Beautification

Luther M. Keith, Connecticut highway tree warden, spoke on the advantages of beautifying the highways. He said that every so often the state takes over new sections of the old Connecticut roads for the purpose of widening them to meet the new demands of traffic and that the rebuilding necessitates rebeautifying the roadsides to cover the scars of construction work.

James H. Taylor, Massachusetts highway landscape supervisor, talked in the same vein, stating that to make a highway beautiful is to make it safe. He advocated teaching roadside manners in public schools, model eating houses, all wires and cables strung in the woods out of sight and the abolition of signboards.

The principal speaker of the day was Redfield Proctor of Vermont, president of the New England council, who described the initiation of a program of highway beautification by the council in cooperation with the women's clubs in the six New England states.

We believe, said Mr. Proctor, that the New England council's most important accomplishment has been the change and improvement in New England's morale. Unlike conditions in 1925 when the council was formed, New England is today more than ever alert, progressive, aggressive, sanely optimistic and alive to capitalize upon its opportunities. The New England council today sees New England with its future before it. What it makes of that future depends upon New England's own intelligence and initiative. We apply our talents, our Yankee ingenuity, unremittingly and without fear, to our problems. We must pull together, not separately.

Other addresses were by Robert C. Deming, supervisor of adult education in Connecticut, who spoke upon Our Foreign Born, and by Miss Mary Anderson of the woman's bureau of the United States department of labor, who spoke upon the work of the department.

In the evening at 6:30 the conference banquet was held with Lieut. Gov. Ernest E. Rogers, President Katharine Blunt of Connecticut college, Mrs. Gilbert A. Davis, former chairman of legislation and general federation as the guest speakers.

At the session Monday night Senator Frederick G. Walcott addressed the group on the subject Conserving Our Natural Resources. He said that fire is now the most destructive agent in forest waste throughout the country, taking a greater toll of the nation's woodlands than the lumber industry.

He urged fire protection by an adequate system of wardening and reforestation or original growth. He indicated that a conservation program surpassing anything before attempted will soon be adopted by the federal government to protect for coming generations the forests, which have in the past been recklessly devastated.

During Monday afternoon a garden party was given by President Katharine Blunt of Connecticut college and the college to the members of the conference. About 250 attended.

The wide green by the Palmer library was arranged for the festivities, with refreshment table and chairs arranged facing the wide sweep of the sound view with distant towns beyond.

Assisting Dr. Blunt in the reception were Mrs. Robert F. Gadd, president of Connecticut State Federation, and Miss Louise C. Howe of this city, of the college board of trustees.

Four Connecticut men, Frederick G. Crabb and Mahlon Glascock of New Haven; Norbert Girard of Willimantic and Harry R. Boyd of Danielson, will enter the army's primary flying schools on November 1 for the strenuous eight months' course of training, the war department announced Tuesday. A total of 246 new students will enter the schools, and those who successfully pass the course will later be sent to the flying school at Kelly field, San Antonio, for a four months' advance training course.

Glascock, chosen from civilian ranks, and Girard, a private in the air service, will enter the flying school at Brooks field, San Antonio, as flying cadets. Boyd and Crabb, both graduates of West Point, will go to the flying school at March field, California, as second lieutenants.

CAT DELAYED TROLLEY IN FRANKLIN SQUARE

A big black cat that settled itself under a trolley car in Franklin square caused a delay of about five minutes at 8:30 Tuesday evening before it could be induced to come out so that the car could start without danger of decapitating the cat.

"Kitty, kitty, kitty," uttered in the most coaxing tones which Starter Douglass could command, failed to induce the cat to move and others who tried to lure the cat out were equally unsuccessful. Mild attempts to scare the feline from his secure retreat also produced no results, but at length an iron bar pushed under the car reached near enough to make the cat scurry out and the trolley trip towards Yantic could be started.

EVANGELINE WILLOW IN TOWN ST. SCHOOL YARD

Recent mention that the willows around the duck pond at Mohegan park were from slips from the willows in Evangeline park at Grand Pre, Nova Scotia, has brought out the fact that there is an Evangeline willow in the yard at the Town street school and that another Evangeline willow was recently cut down at 33 Grove street.

Both these trees are from twigs brought from Grand Pre by William G. Tarbox when he made a bicycle trip in Nova Scotia a number of years ago.

Mrs. Carl Holdredge, of Ledyard, vice president of the council for this district, presided at the meeting.

STATE'S GENERAL FUND AUGUST RECEIPTS $2,131,475

Receipts of the state's general fund during the month of August were $2,131,475, an increase of $314,237 over the receipts in the same month of last year, according to the monthly report on the state's finances forwarded this week by Commissioner of Finance Edward F. Hall to Governor Trumbull.

Expenditures for the month of August increased at a slightly greater rate than receipts, $2,142,014 being expended or $318,846 more than in the same month last year. Expenditures for capital improvements in the same period were $39,917 greater than last year.

The general fund balance stood at $10,943,703, an increase of $2,471,311 over last year's figures, excluding $500,000 loaned to the highway fund in anticipation of revenue to that department as is customary at this time of the year. Receipts of the general fund during July and August increased $712,930 over last year's receipts.

Receipts for the highway fund during August decreased $356,179 to $547,618, the loss being partially accounted for by the fact that less federal aid funds were received during the month this year, and also by the fact that in August, 1929, receipts from the gasoline tax proceeds for both July and August were included, while this year only the July receipts were included. At the same time the expenditures during the month by the department increased $282,380 as compared with last year and the highway fund balance stood at $566,788, or $207,395 less than on August 31 last year.

HIGHWAY PLANS SHOWN TO WESTERLY RESIDENTS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Sept. 9.—Seventy-five residents and taxpayers of the Central park section of Westerly attended the hearing of the Westerly board of highway commissioners on Monday evening in the council chambers of the town hall. The meeting was held on the proposed laying out, enlarging, straightening, improving and altering Perkins avenue from Pierce street to Varietyville road; a street from Pierce street to Perkins avenue, or the street railway right-of-way, Joseph street from Brendan road, northerly to Central park plot line, Koon lane, from High street westerly to Ann street and Joseph street; Ann street from Joseph street to Perkins avenue and a street leading from the former Norwich-Westerly railway right of way across the land of Catrina Turano and other land owners to the corner of Joseph street and Brendan street.

A large blueprint was spread on the council table and those interested were asked to step up to see the proposed changes. Joseph Sisco asked if it would not be better to consider the layout one street at a time. Highway Engineer A. L. Leon said that the board could best answer this question if the property owners involved would point out their properties on the map.

The changes contemplated call for the cutting out of Ella and Ruben streets. Two houses will have to be turned around on Ella street, one owned by Frank Vitealino and the other by Peter Fusaro. From James Capalbo, seven feet will be taken off of the house and much of the yard. Several property owners asked if the taking of property would cut down their square footage and prevent them from building under the Westerly zoning law. They were told that the zoning board would take care of this condition.

From each side of Ann street, now 33 feet wide, 8 1-2 feet will be taken from the abutting property owners. Some day plans call for a viaduct over Pierce street and out onto West. Koon lane will be widened to connect the Central park section with High street for the Nooseneck hill state highway out of Westerly. A profile was shown and explained of the proposed grades on Koon lane.

Highway Commissioner Charles F. Berry said that a commission of three disinterested parties would be named to interview the land owners and nothing would be done till a proposed street line would be stubbed out and the property taken up on one or two streets to begin with, which might be started this fall.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS SHOW SOME GRADES CROWDED

As the year opens for the public schools of Norwich, the enrollment of pupils is shown at 4,535, according to figures compiled by Superintendent E. J. Graham. These may be increased somewhat by pupils who have not yet returned from vacations, but at the present time the enrollment is 117 less than last year when the total was 4,652. The year before that it was 4,715.

Although the enrollment is less than last year there are still some places in which crowded conditions exist. In the sixth grade room at Broadway school, which was originally built to accommodate 40 pupils, there were 60 last year and there are now 70, with two teachers.

The fifth and sixth grades which are combined at Laurel Hill school have nearly 50 pupils and will need to have some provision made to decrease this crowding.

Another Broadway school grade which is crowded is the eighth, which has 132 pupils. Its planned capacity is about 90 to 100 pupils, and it has taken care of 111, but it is now evidently overcrowded and extra desks will have to be installed.

The seventh grade at Greeneville, which has two teachers, will also need to have some provision made to take care of crowded conditions there.

The enrollment in the different schools, by grades, shows as follows:

William F. Karkutt, of this city, is the plaintiff in a suit for $10,000 damages brought in the superior court against Ernestine D. Sullivan of South Windsor, for injuries sustained by Karkutt on Dec. 20, 1929, when he was struck on Market street, Hartford, by an automobile owned by Sullivan.

URGES PHILADELPHIA TO HONOR WASHINGTON

Alumnus of Norwich Free Academy, a prominent man of Norwich ancestry—through the Lanman family—Dr. James H. Penniman has made a suggestion regarding which a Philadelphia paper says: Distinguished among cities for its association with George Washington, Philadelphia should lead all others by observation of the bi-centenary of the birth of the great general and first president in 1932, according to Dr. James Hosmer Penniman, noted authority on Washingtoniana.

The brother of Dr. Josiah H. Penniman, provost of the University of Pennsylvania, today expressed his opinion of what the coming celebration should be. Surrounded by rare books, well worn, dealing with the careers of the foremost Americans, the Philadelphia scholar, at his home, 4326 Sanson street, became enthusiastic over the contribution that Philadelphians might make to honor the 200th anniversary of Washington's birth.

"The present is not too soon," said Dr. Penniman. "A definite plan of action should be decided upon and committees should be at work now.

"I think Philadelphia has neglected to honor two people closely connected with Washington. One is his wife and the other is Lafayette.

"In the winter of 1778 'God Bless Martha Washington' was the watchword at Valley Forge. After her arrival in February of that year Martha Washington was greatly beloved by the soldiers. She visited the sick, carried them food and prayed with them.

"Her services at Valley Forge are unrecognized. And she was a Gold Star Mother too. Her son, John Park Custis, died in 1781 after Cornwallis' surrender at Yorktown."

REQUIRES FINANCIAL PROOF FROM YOUTHFUL DRIVERS

The state department of motor vehicles warns operators between the ages of 16 and 18 of the purely provisional character of their operator's license as regards financial responsibility. Though warning has been made repeatedly since the legislative act three years ago lowered the age of operators from 18 to 16, the fact is often overlooked by youthful drivers that the license is valid only when operating a car whose ownership is financially responsible.

Legal minors between 16 and 21, when applying for automobile registration, must show proof of responsibility in the same manner as adults. Parents' or guardians' consent is necessary for the issuance of operators licenses below the age of 18.

GOLF PROS GIVEN KEEN COMPETITION IN MATCHES IN P. G. A. TOURNAMENT

FLUSHING, N. Y., Sept. 9—(AP)—The Professional Golfers association championship, the annual match play battle of the pros, almost lost its host today in the very first round.

Gene Sarazen, home pro who has held the title twice and has won the open crown, was brought to the 35th hole by Charles Schneider, young Philadelphia pro, before he could shake him off, one up.

Stocky Gene went one down at the 31st hole when the courageous Schneider holed a chip shot 30 yards from the green.

Schneider, however, could not stand prosperity and his tee shot at the next hole came to rest in some bushes along a fence. He tried to play a left handed shot out but did not get very far and after another effort had made only slight progress, he conceded the hole, leaving the match squared.

Sarazen then sent a long brassie to the 34th green and dropped an eight foot putt for a birdie four, enough to win the hole, and, as it turned out, the match.

Horton Smith, another favorite, was one down to Billy Burke, Greenwich, with only six holes left to play, but the tall Missourian promptly levelled matters and then won two straight holes to become dormie. The margin was two and one.

Leo Diegel, the defending champion, won with little effort from Henry Ciuci, young pro who is either very good or very bad. He was good in the afternoon but he was bad in the morning and when he struck his stride, Diegel was too far ahead to be overhauled.

Tommy Armour had the widest margin of the day, with a victory over Dave Hackney, Lowell, Mass., eleven up and ten to play.

Densmore Shute, Columbus, Ohio; Joe Kirkwood, Philadelphia, and Johnny Farrell, New York, eliminated Joe Frank, Kenosha, Wis., Gunnard Johnson, St Paul, and Norman Smith, Yakima, Wash.

Wiffy Cox, one of the colorful figures of the tournament, was put out by Bob Crowley, Haverhill, Mass.

The Fry brothers from California, Mark and Earl, were defeated after they had led their opponents at the luncheon recess. Mark Fry was stopped by Al Espinosa, two and one although Al was four down after 18 holes. Earl fell before Laurie Ayton after the Evanston pro had trailed two holes at the half-way mark. Ayton went out in the afternoon in par 35 and than played the next six holes, three under even fours.

Al Watrous and Eric Seavall fought out a great battle before the Michigan pro nosed the Californian out. They were all even when 30 holes had been played.

Bill Mehlhorn and Harry Cooper, not only played great golf but introduced the double stymie to the competition. Cooper finally won after trailing two holes at the recess. Cooper twice stymied "Wild Bill" on one hole, the 34th, when the Chicago pro held a lead of only one hole and the Floridian had a putt for a win to square the match. Cooper putted and left Mehlhorn stymied. Mehlhorn then tried to jump the ball and when Cooper putted the next time, his ball again cut Mehlhorn from the cup.

Charley Lacey also benefitted hugely from stymies in his match with Charley Guest, won by the Philadelphia, three and two.

Pairings for the second round tomorrow:

Watrous vs. Lacey; Samson vs. Diegel; Armour vs. Shaye; Shute vs. Farrell; Sarazen vs. Crowley; Cooper vs. Espinosa; Kirkwood vs. Collins; Smith vs. Ayton.

PHELPS BLANKS CUBS AS ROBINS GAIN A GAME

BROOKLYN, Sept. 9.— (AP)— The strong right arm of Ray Phelps, freshman star of the Brooklyn pitching staff, threw the National league more than ever into a four-cornered dog fight today as he pitched the Robins to a 3 to 0 victory over the Cubs in the first game of the Chicago's eastern invasion.

Phelps held the National league champions to five hits, scattered through as many different innings, and put the Robins into a virtual tie for second place with the St. Louis Cardinals, who lost a 2-1 decision across the river in New York. Brooklyn is only one point behind the Cards and both teams are only 3 1-2 games behind Chicago.

The Robins scored a run in the first inning on a swinging bunt with two out and two in the eighth when Babe Herman drove his 31st home run into the left field bleachers with one on base.

Through the rest of the game, Phelps and Pat Malone, Cub pitching ace, engaged in a close duel. Malone gave the Robins seven hits and was kept out of trouble most of the time by brilliant fielding behind him. Three times Chicago double plays checked threatening Brooklyn rallies.

The big Chicago right hander almost pulled out of his first inning hole, created when Frederick started the game with a triple for the first of his three hits. Gilbert grounded to the infield and Frederick was out at the plate, the batter reaching second on the run down. Gilbert reached third as Herman grounded out and scored when Wright beat out a hit to Bell.

The game was air-tight from that point until the eighth when Frederick opened with a single. Gilbert fanned but Herman hit a tremendous drive into the left field bleachers for the deciding runs.

In four of the nine innings, the Chicago lead-off man got on base and in only two were the Cubs retired in order. But in every pinch Phelps was remarkably steady and the Robins played tight ball to shut off any runs.

MITCHELL BESTS GRIMES AS GIANTS NOSE OUT CARDS

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.— (AP)— An old-fashioned pitchers' battle today with the veterans, Clarence Mitchell and Burleigh Grimes, as the principals, enabled the Giants to gain a full game on the two leaders of the National league pennant race with a 2 to 1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals. The triumph placed the fourth place Giants only three games behind the league leading Chicago Cubs and a half game behind St. Louis and Brooklyn.

For six innings the duel progressed without a score with the Cards getting three hits off Mitchell's left handed spitball hurling while Grimes allowed only one more. All the scoring came in the seventh, the Cards taking a brief lead only to see the Giants go ahead in the same inning. Grimes gave way to a pinch hitter in the eighth and Jim Lindsey finished the game, allowing one of the seven New York hits in the eighth. St. Louis also was limited to seven hits.

Frisch paved the way for the game's first run when he opened the seventh by beating out a grounder. Bottomley sent him to second with a sacrifice and Blades sent a single to left to drive in the run.

The St. Louis run looked very big for a moment but Jackson and Roettger soon changed the aspect of the game. Jackson led off with a single and reached third as Roettger followed with a double. Hogan, pinch-hitting for Critz hit to the infield but Jackson beat Gelbert's throw to the plate for the tying run. Roettger scored the winning tally on the next play as Leach sent a high bounder to Frisch and was thrown out at first.

Mel Ott provided the fielding feature of the game in the next inning when he made a diving catch of Douthit's liner with one on base.

RECRUIT'S HOMER WINS GAME FOR ATHLETICS

DETROIT, Sept. 9—(AP)—Jim Moore, a recruit outfielder late of Dallas, Texas, batted out a home run in the fifth inning of today's game, scoring Bing Miller ahead of him to provide the margin by which the Athletics defeated Detroit in the series opener, 3 to 1.

Moore's circuit blow enabled Lefty Grove to mark up his 26th victory of the season. Except for that moment of weakness, Earl Whitehill pitched on even terms with Grove in a hurler's duel. Whitehill allowed seven hits to eight accumulated by the Tigers off Grove. Whitehill gave three passes to none by Grove, but struck out six batters to four fanned by Grove.

Spectacular catches by McManus, Stone and Funk featured the Tiger defense. The score:

YANKEES TAKE WEIRD GAME FROM INDIANS

CLEVELAND, Sept. 9.—(AP)— The New York Yankees increased their third-place margin over the Indians today by winning a wild see-saw battle, 8 to 6, as they opened their western tour. The Tribesmen used four pitchers and the Yanks three with George Pipgras getting credit for the victory and Pete Jablonowski being charged with the defeat.

This array of hurlers yielded 37 hits, of which the Yanks made 16, and eight walks and hit five batsmen. The Indians had the game well in hand going into the seventh but the wildness of Miller and Jablonowski allowed the Yanks to score three runs on one hit and tie the score. New York won in the eighth on singles by Ruth and Gehrig, Lazzeri's sacrifice fly and Jorgens' single.

FAST CARD OF AMATEURS AT DANIELSON TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, September 9—Danielson boys who are to take part in bouts at the amateur boxing show at the North Street arena here Wednesday evening took their final workouts this afternoon and evening at the Peloquin gymnasium. All appeared to be in good condition and capable of making good showings in the bouts of tomorrow night.

Fans here today appeared to be keyed up with interest over the bout between Gene Billings of Goodyear and Eddie Young of Worcester. This Billings boy went great guns in his comeback bout at the arena a fortnight ago after nearly three years of absence from the ring, and won easily and in highly impressive style. Since then he has trained earnestly and has very much improved his physical condition. He has a tough customer in Young, but likes them that way. Billings is a whale of a hitter and an aggressive fighter.

What looks like another great shot for Wednesday night is the semi-final between Patsy Flynn of Worcester and Jack Labrun of Warwick. This will most assuredly be no petting affair, but a crashing battle for so long as it may last, the limit being three rounds.

The other six bouts on the card shape up as assuring an evening replete with action.

PLENTY OF BASEBALL ON THE AIR TODAY

Local fans will have their "radio baseball" served up to them in real fashion today for besides the Braves-Pittsburgh game at Boston, broadcast by WNAC and WEAN, there will also be the Cubs-Robins game sent out over WOR, Newark.

In the Boston game local interest centers on the probable appearance in the Pittsburgh lineup of Lefty Dugas, local boy who joined this club Sunday after a most successful season with Wichita in the Western loop. The Boston game starts at 3:15 and the Brooklyn one at 3:20.

JOHNNY GREENE TO PITCH FOR CITIZENS SATURDAY

Johnny Greene will be the Polish Citizen pitcher as the local champs take the field for their third conflict in the inter-city five-game series with the Kaceys, champions of the New London loop, Saturday afternoon at the Academy campus. The Cits have taken the two games and intend to close the series with this game. There will be no stalling around Saturday, even though the local boys have a big edge in the set of games. The Polish team is intent on making a clean sweep and thus providing a big boost for local baseball as compared to that played in New London.

Greene, when he takes the mound Saturday, will be after his second victory of the series, for he let the Whalers down with four hits in the first game played here Labor day and gained the decision by a 2 to 1 count. His brother, Boots, then turned the trick again Sunday at Mercer field in New London, this time by a tally of 3 to 2. Joe McInniss was the unfortunate hurler in each game. He pitched well enough to win most any time but received scant support at the plate from his mates.

The series has aroused interest of major proportions all through Eastern Connecticut. The two games have drawn a combined attendance of about 4,000; 1,500 at the campus on a dark and gloomy day with rain up to within an hour of game time, and 2,500 at New London. Saturday's attendance should surpass both marks, provided there is a little help supplied from the weatherman.

It was announced last night by Manager George Bizinsky of the Citizens that the teams will play a fourth game at New London next Sunday, no matter what the outcome of Saturday's tilt. The Kaceys have secured Mercer field and are to go through with the game, win or lose in the game here.

It was rumored about town last night that the Kaceys are to surely have Tilly Daniels on the mound Saturday. Tilly was their mainstay during the league season and has been pitching great ball on Sundays for Ivoryton in the Middlesex County league.

BARBER AND WEISGRABER TO ATTEND W. AND M.

Frank Barber and Butsy Weisgraber left the city Saturday for William and Mary college, Williamsburg, Va., to add two more to the list of Academy athletes enrolled at this college. Barber was the main offensive cog in the Wildcat eleven last fall and has also starred in track, while Weisgraber was a leading member of the baseball teams during the 1929 and 1930 seasons.

Weisgraber made a name for himself when he filled in the pitching gap in 1929 that had been left by the graduation of Lloyd Jarvis and Johnny Greene. Last spring he divided his team play between the outfield and the mound. Barber, besides carrying practically the entire ball-carrying burden on the 1929 football team, also broke the league record for the shot put in the spring of that year.

Other former Academy athletes now at William and Mary include Johnny Greene, Mace Goldblatt, Jack Marks, Buck LaCroix, etc.

VIENNA, Sept. 9—(AP)—The former Empress Zita's chamberlain today issued a bulletin saying she refused to sanction the marriage of Archduke Albrecht to the former Madame Irene Von Rudnay.

SCHWARTZ BROS. MAKE ELABORATE PLANS FOR 25TH ANNIVERSARY

Schwartz Bros. are going to celebrate their 25th year in the furniture business. Plans are now ready. Friends and customers, and all the people of Norwich and vicinity have been invited to participate in the celebration. Beginning Thursday, September 11th, a series of events will be held at the store—there will be entertainment for the entire family, music, prizes, a special anniversary cake and other features. Arrangements have been made to have special days set aside for the events of the celebration. These special days will be announced later. Each one of them will be a source of enjoyment to the guests, and besides they will be offered an opportunity to profit by their timely attendance.

This gala celebration has been planned for many months. Every detail has been carefully worked out, as one would a birthday party or a 25th wedding anniversary and to be sure it is something to be mighty proud of.

If it means anything at all to the many they have served during these years, it means that Norwich's largest furniture store is glad of this occasion to show its appreciation. Everybody for miles and miles around should be here on the opening days to join with the hundreds that will participate in this celebration.

Twenty-five years winning the confidence and respect of its friends and customers, and with the years growing and increasing our volume, is the best criterion of successful management and good sound friendly methods. Schwartz Bros. is part and parcel of the city to which it owes its growth and prosperity—and to the people who have shown their approval by their ever-increasing patronage.

The Schwartz Bros. furniture store and its officers and employes have at all times shown that they have at heart the interests and welfare of the city. The civic patriotism in helping to start the nurses home of the Backus hospital would have been almost impossible if it had not been for their interest at the beginning. Ten per cent of a day's receipts were given towards the fund. That day was widely advertised and many sales were crowded into the day to raise the fund.

There is no doubt but that this encouraged many to get behind this drive and raise the $260,000 that was successfully subscribed. The Schwartz Bros. furniture store bought a room in the hospital.

Their whole-hearted support in the Liberty drive and other government measures for raising money during the war was given generously. The spirit of co-operation has been a policy of the company and its officers—every measure that will help Norwich and the community, will help the business interests and to this they have strictly adhered.

Below is given the story of the work of the officers and employes in civic and community life. Besides their regular duties they seem to find time to devote to interests that appeal to their love of Norwich, the city they have chosen to make their home and rear their families.

GROWTH OF BUSINESS IN QUARTER CENTURY

Twenty-five years in the furniture business—a short time at the mention of it. But twenty-five years divided into so many weeks and days, so much furniture coming in and moving out, so much money changing hands, so many changes in location, business, personnel—the problems coming up with the changing conditions, a panic, a war, crashes and failures, prosperity and depression. Twenty-five years, that is, the last 25 years, are probably the most important twenty-five years in the history of America.

Why, by comparison 25 years ago we lived more like the people of the Civil war than today. Some would even go farther in their comparison. There is good reason for it. Human relations and living may not have changed so very much. Human beings are very much the same in all ages and times. The changes have all taken place around us. Most of them have taken place in industry, substituting the machine for hand labor, preserving human energy, saving time, eliminating waste, shortening hours of labor, bringing more pleasure, greater comfort, increasing leisure and putting within the reach of all little luxuries unheard of 25 years ago—or at any rate unpractical then. To mention but a few would be sufficient. The radio, the aeroplane, and dirigible, the submarine, the automobile, electric refrigeration, and the thousands of household inventions, lightening the household tasks that made housework drudgery of the meanest type. Just these few are responsible for a new life and new form of living. We can best gauge this by comparing the children of today with those of the last generation. A really marvelous change has come over us in these last 25 years. Remarkable—almost unbelievable—and it's only a beginning to greater progress and growth, further development of scientific invention and mechanics.

Twenty-five years ago, Schwartz Bros. Furniture Store was born in Norwich, Connecticut, on September 6, 1905. Well, like so many other stores, the beginning of this one did not create much of a sensation, on the contrary it came into being in such a humble way that few outside of the immediate neighborhood knew of its existence. That was at Washington Square in a place known as the Washington Building. That was at the very beginning. It wasn't long to be unknown. The two brothers, Abner and Michael Schwartz were to put the Schwartz Bros. name in the foreground. At first they did this in a personal way, visiting people at their homes, working from early morning to late into the night, as the business required. They had but one helper. The bulk of their business came from the regular calls at the homes of these who might be prospects for furniture. In this way they came in direct contact with those that were to be good customers of the business. There were other duties and in this small way it fell upon the owners to act in nearly every capacity including that of salesmen, buyers, decorators, repairmen and occasionally making deliveries when that end of the business needed their assistance. Very little advertising was done in those days. Believers in advertising right from the start, they would put out announcements from time to time and these in turn would be followed up in person. This service brought the business to the people, saved them the time and expense of coming to town and shopping and won for Schwartz Bros. a good name, that stood for reliability, good service and square dealing. It wasn't very long afterwards that they were in the position to think of expanding and moving to a more central location, with more facilities and conveniences.

First Expansion in 1908.

In April 1908, they negotiated the purchase of the building on Water street from the Norwich Belt Manufacturing Co., spending $15,000 in alterations to make it suitable for their needs. It was a daring move for such a young firm and required a fortune of money, but they discounted the future and were satisfied that Norwich wanted them, liked to trade at their store and would continue to come and advertise the good name of Schwartz Bros. and bring their friends.

Water Street Location

Over $15,000 was spent in enlarging the Water street location because of the need to carry larger stock and more space for storage. Trade was brisk and came from the city proper and for many miles around. The New London trade was developing nicely and was continually increasing in volume. Their following became large enough to warrant the opening of a branch store as their Norwich business was taxing them to the limit.

The Lahn Brothers

Another separate and distinct history could be told here of the Lahn Brothers—Benj. Lahn and Jos. M. Lahn, two furniture men. Benj. Lahn was the head of a furniture business in this city. Jos. M. Lahn was piloting another in New York city. The latter was anxious to return to Norwich. He did and entered into a partnership arrangement with his brother. The firm Lahn Bros. thrived for two years when they decided to sell out their interests and pool it with Schwartz Bros. In 1917 they affiliated themselves with Schwartz Bros. becoming owners and officers of the company.

New London Store

This move made it possible to enlarge their store in New London, where a good following had been built up. Michael Schwartz, who had devoted much of his time to the New London trade, managed the store there. The same policies and methods of doing business, the same high quality furniture, the same management made this store thrive and expand, becoming a leader if not the leading furniture establishment in New London.

Move to 74-84 Main Street

Some may remember very clearly, the torn up street and cave where now stands the present Schwartz Bros. Furniture Store. For a year and a half this was a veritable stone quarry. A solid rock formation extending from Main street through to Church street with a level ranging from the street on Main street to the top on Church street—a difference equal to three floors in height. This site was purchased from the late Willis Austin. It was found inadequate, as it was then—not deep enough for the needs of a furniture store that was looking into the future and needed room enough to take care of possible expansion to come. The foundation was therefore laid and the building extended from street to street. It took grim determination and courage and pluck to see through to a finish this building program. Less enterprising men would have given up, rather than face possible ruin. An outlay of $75,000 was required for building and an additional $20,000 for blasting. A long story could be told of the trials and tribulations during this building period. To say the least it was a stupendous undertaking that only men with vision would be willing to risk. Sometimes when you visit the store you must see how it is laid out, so that there are entrances on Main street and Church street. One on the ground floor and the other on the third floor, which is on Church street and used for shipping and delivery departments.

LOOKING BACKWARDS OVER 25 YEARS OF LOOKING FORWARD

By ABNER SCHWARTZ

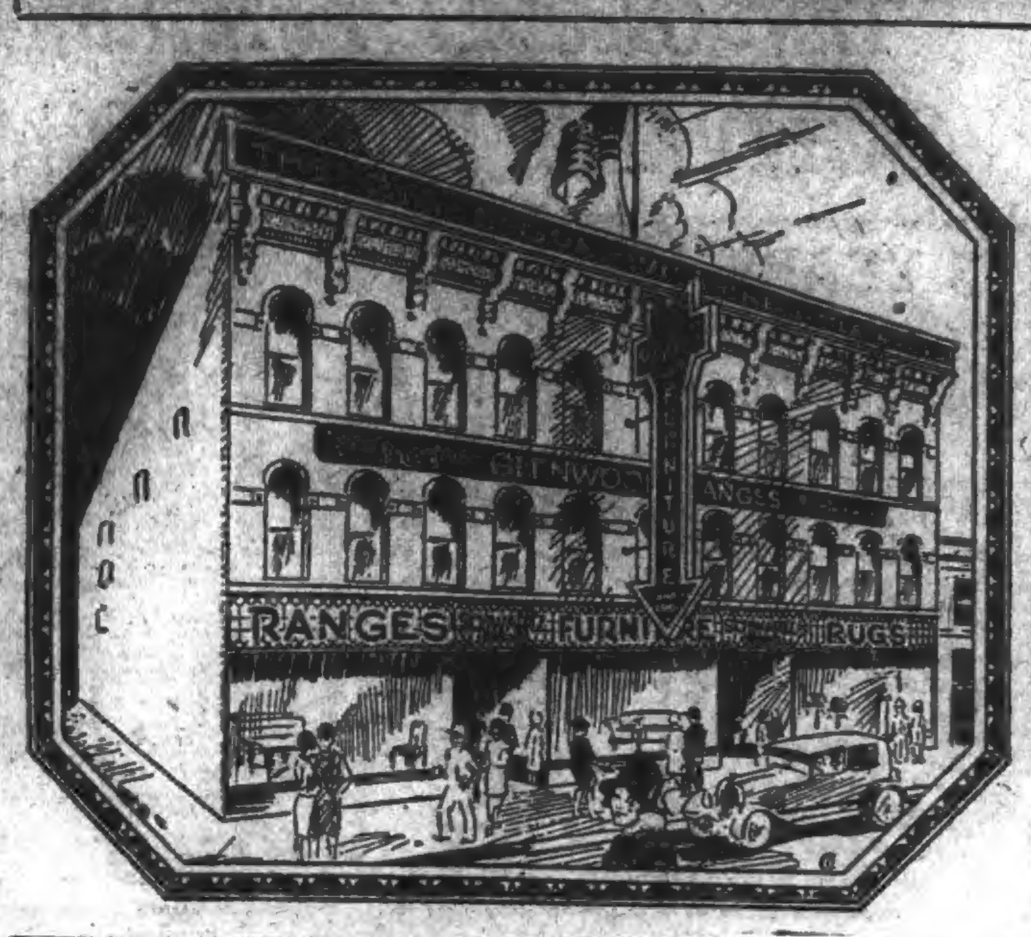
In these days of outstepping and outdoing ourselves, making records that go down in history, some for a short time, others for all time, one fact may be overlooked that is true this day just as it was at the beginning of things—"That without vision there is little to warrant admiration."

The twenty-fifth birthday of Schwartz Bros. is celebrated because a milestone has been reached—the 25th mile in life's journey. We stop and collect our thoughts, 25 years of survival over a period that without question is the most outstanding by far, over any other period in the history of America.

ABNER SCHWARTZ
President

Looking backwards gives us the strength and courage to look forward with optimism and lightness of heart. Schwartz Bros. has stood the test—has come out stronger—becoming veterans in this business of serving people, helping them get some happiness out of life—making them friends and well wishers of this business—a business that is backed and carried on by people who like to serve others.

SCHWARTZ BROS.' STORE—74-84 MAIN STREET



PURSUED PIONEER POLICY IN FURNITURE STORE EXPANSION

Too much is generally devoted to material things—too little to the human side of a business. The Schwartz Bros. Furniture Store is headed by men who have devoted the greater part of their lives to the furniture business. Foremost among them stands one of the founders, President and General Manager Abner Schwartz. Mr. Schwartz is active in the community and social life of Norwich and the active head of the Schwartz Bros. Furniture Store. He is known in the city and for miles around as a business man, who is progressive and successful. Those that know him more intimately know that he is also very devoted to his family and has a host of friends who are closely in touch with him. "Abner" as he is called so often by those that frequently visit him is the center of a number of movements carried on by organizations in the city with which he is affiliated.

JOSEPH M. LAHN
Secretary-Treasurer

Mr. Schwartz is a member of the Lions club, being Lion Tamer and a member of the executive committee. They meet every Thursday at the Wauregan hotel. He is a member of the Service Organization for Norwich, the purpose of which is to take care of the young ones, tender them a feed on Thanksgiving day (as many as 1,500 being fed), helping the blind, providing shows for the poor on Christmas, and helping the poor and indigent. He is vice-president of the Contact club, which is connected with the chamber of commerce, since 1928. This club is accomplishing a great deal in knitting together the different industries, professions and trades, the manufacturing, wholesale and retail firms of the city. Better understanding and cooperation in order to render greater service to the community. He is a member of the Tax Payers' association and is active in the work of cutting out waste and keeping taxes to a minimum. Member of the Knights of Pythias. Member of the Loyal Order of the Moose. Member of the Eagles. For three years he was president of the Merchants Bureau, affiliated with the chamber of commerce, also as a director of the chamber of commerce, and active even after retirement. During his incumbency this organization raised $3,600 the first year and $4,000 the second year with which to carry on their work. A program of advertising and other helps to bring new trade to this territory, as well as keep the old business, has been carried on with good results. Also, the merchants have been brought closer together and made to see that what is good for one merchant is equally good for another. Their cooperation has made possible closing Thursday afternoons during the hot summer months, making Suburban day a real event and big business day and other progressive movements. Mr. Schwartz was promised that he would be allowed to retire from this office at the end of three years, otherwise he would have been drafted again. As it is he served longer in this capacity than any of his predecessors. Mr. Schwartz was director of the Bankers Trust Co. up to 1929, when they merged with the Thames Bank and Trust Co.

GEO. LOWENTHAL
Sales Engineer in Charge of Celebration

Mr. Schwartz is ex-president of the B'nai Brith organization, an international organization and the Norwich branch has representation in Washington. He has been president for two years—the regular term of office is but one year. He is also president of the Community Synagogue recently organized. For eight years he has been president of the Zionist organization; for fourteen years president of the Free Hebrew school and one of the organizers of the school. They now have 150 children, three teachers and own their building which is valued at $15,000. He is ex-president of the High Street Synagogue, konwn as the Congregation of United Brothers. He is active in membership drives of the Y. M. C. A. He is a member of the executive board of the Boy Scout movement. He is active in drives of the Salvation Army, generally is a captain of a team. Besides all that he is very active in the company of which he is the president and general manager—the Schwartz Bros. Furniture Store.

Benjamin A. Lahn is vice president of Schwartz Bros. Inc. Buyer of all parlor and bedroom furniture, director of publicity, window and floor displays. Mr. Lahn has been associated with Schwartz Bros. since 1912. He has been in the furniture business for the past 26 years, all but a few years right here in Norwich. He owns his own home.

Mr. Lahn is a man of a creative turn of mind, resourceful and aggressive in his duties of store upbuilding. His purchases of parlor and bedroom suites are made with an idea of the modern, the price and the season of the year, after a study of the furniture trend. He often brings in his own interpretations of design and color in the purchase of special items for special occasions. The floor arrangements, lay-out and decorative scheme is under his charge. This, together with the publicity and advertising of the store, keep Mr. Lahn occupied often long after regular store hours. Much of the success of Schwartz Bros. is due to their aggressive advertising policy. Their advertising as is known to all, always features high grade furniture for every occasion, besides many bargains specially created and in demand at all times. The window displays are given careful attention and changed frequently. The windows are the eyes of the store. This is never forgotten. Exact reproductions of rooms, just as you would expect to find in the better homes, are arranged in the windows featuring the most modern furniture, right after they arrive at our warehouse and store.

HARRY SCHWARTZ
Attorney

Joseph M. Lahn is secretary-treasurer. He, also has been associated with Schwartz Bros. since 1912. Born in Norwich he was apprenticed as a furniture helper when but a boy, about 29 years ago. He received his experience with the better furniture houses in New York and Paterson, later opening a store of his own in New York city.

JOHN O'KEEFE
Driver

Mr. Lahn, was enthusiastic on being interviewed. He was anxious to let the public know something about Schwartz Bros.' methods of doing business, about their employes, their future program and plans and something about the furniture they have on their three expansive floors of their Main street location and their warehouse on Water street.

"The importance of always being fair to employes is not a theory here. It has been practiced since the very beginning. The employe is working for himself and is given every assistance and encouragement possible. Most of them have been associated with the store for many years. They are a happy family. This feeling is extended to the customers and visitors who come in from time to time. "Personal Service" may be a theory to many a modern store to this day, but here it is practiced. Very often a customer will ask for the officer or salesman by name when shopping. The satisfaction in buying at Schwartz Bros. and the buying satisfaction that comes with the years of service has spread from person to person. This is the most valuable asset of the store. Every other good-will agency may help and help a great deal but what one satisfied customer says about the store is more important than all the other things put together. We believe our methods of doing business are right. For instance, once a person buys an article of furniture here, that person has our guarantee that the article will serve as it should. What does this guarantee and service mean? It is very true that both have been very much abused in all businesses. To Schwartz Bros. they have meant this, and our old customers will attest to it. No matter for what reason if an article of furniture or suite or entire outfit of furniture—if it is not as it should be, we make it right. That holds good a day after purchase, a year or ten years. We have given this kind of service for more than ten years in many cases—given service of furniture and household goods for as high as fifteen years, without one cent cost to the purchaser. That's the Schwartz Bros. way. Ask any Schwartz Bros. customer!

"Everyone connected with the growth of this store, whether in our employ for a short time or long time, is a member of the Schwartz Bros. family. You are given a warm welcome, as you come in and you find yourself in an atmosphere that is cheerful and pleasant. The display on the floor, changed almost daily, show a few of the many new things, seasonal items and arranged in harmony, just as you would want it in your home. The window displays suggest furniture arrangements that are found helpful in laying out furniture in the home. Displays are changed frequently.

BENJAMIN LAHN
Vice-President

"The people of Norwich and vicinity should know that we are one of the largest stores carrying such a fine variety and selection of home furnishing. Many nationally known products have been carried for many years, such as the Englander Sleeping Products (22 years), consisting of beds, bedding, mattresses, springs, day beds, couches. S. Karpen Products of living room suites; Hoosier kitchen cabinets; Glenwood ranges; Simmons complete line of bedding. A most recent addition has been the Copeland line of electric refrigerators, for which Schwartz Bros. have been appointed exclusive Norwich agents.

"The future program and plans call for many improvements and expansions. At some future time it is expected to combine the 4-story warehouse on Water street with our Main street building by erecting two additional floors. In that way our complete stock will be in the same building and within easy reach at all times."

Mr. Lahn owns his own home. He is a member of the B. P. O. E., No. 430. United Commercial Travelers of America; B'rai Brith, Zionist Organization of America.

Director in Charge

LENET FURNITURE SALES DIRECT CELEBRATION

Messrs. S. S. Lenet and Geo. Lowenthal of the Lenet Furniture Sales Service with offices at 1044 Chapel street, New Haven, Conn., are here to conduct the 25th anniversary celebration. The Lenet Furniture Sales Service are managers and directors and advertising specialists, specializing in only the better furniture stores.

"We have the utmost confidence in their ability," said Benj. Lahn, vice president. "Without notice almost, they quietly work out every conceivable detail after the general plans are laid out and approved."

"We are fortunate to be able to secure the services of the Lenet organization," said Mr. Lahn. "Our business has grown to such large volume that we find that only specialists are qualified to handle a celebration of this scope."

Schwartz Bros.' enterprising and aggressive methods over the past 25 years have brought many customers to the store, for many miles away. The people of Taftville, Colchester, Willimantic, Moosup, Jewett City, Montville, New London, Westerly and hundreds of other towns know Schwartz Bros. because they can trade at Schwartz Bros. with as much convenience as they can at their local store. Deliveries are made daily and often more frequently. There is no extra cost for delivery and for variety of furniture and completeness of stock—you will be amazed.

Schwartz Bros. store has been classed as very well fitting a city of a population of 100,000 or more. This is a compliment which is appreciated.

Confidence

When a man comes in and says "Meet my wife—she wants to pick out furniture for our home."—And both of them go through the store and buy without once questioning price—that's confidence. To have the confidence of people is the greatest possession of this store. To have it means unimpeachable honesty, fairness and friendliness. That's Schwartz Bros.

Norwich Produce Market

Furnished by Bureau of Markets
Conn. Dept. of Agriculture

Peach supplies were still on the increase and holding the center of the produce market stage. Elbertas were making up a large share of the supply with Georgia Bells still quite liberal. Quality is good and this is the week when the housewife should secure her canning needs.

Other fruits were not receiving as much attention from either grower or buyer because of the activity of the peach market. Apples were in moderate supply and moving very slow.

Very few changes were noted in vegetables. Tomatoes appeared to be decreasing in supply to some extent with a slightly better feeling evident among the buyers. Sweet corn, lima and string beans were in light offerings and a little firmer and higher for good stock.

Old Home day has again passed into history. The rain during the morning prevented some from being present as is their usual custom. Those who forgot the weather and arrived per schedule found the customary pleasure in gretting old and new acquaintances, partaking of the shore dinner and listening to the afternoon exercises. Owing to unavoidable conditions the amount realized from the dinner and other sales will be somewhat less than usual, although when added to the church offering, the total will be well toward two hundred dollars. Members of the several committees are grateful to all who gave so generously and helped so willingly to put Old Home day across once more.

POETRY

Days Of My Youth

Days of my youth,
  Ye have glided away;
Hairs of my youth,
  Ye are frosted and gray;
Eyes of my youth,
  Your keen sight is no more
Cheeks of my youth,
  Ye are all furrowed o'er;
Strength of my youth,
  All your vigor is gone;
Thoughts of my youth,
  Your gay visions are flown.

Days of my youth,
  I wish not your recall;
Hairs of my youth,
  I'm content ye should fall;
Eyes of my youth,
  You much evil have seen;
Cheeks of my youth,
  Bathed in tears you have been;
Thoughts of my youth,
  You have led me astray;
Strength of my youth,
  Why lament your decay?

Days of my age,
  Ye will shortly be past;
Pains of my age,
  Yet awhile ye can last;
Joys of my age,
  In true wisdom delight;
Eyes of my age,
  Be religion your light;
Thoughts of my age,
  Dread ye not the cold sod,
Hopes of my age,
  Be ye fixed on your God.

—St. George Tucker.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Maid—Oh, ma'am! You know the best Crown Derby cream jug? Well, I've broken the set that goes with it!—Humorist.

The question is not whether man descended from the monkey, but when he is going to quit descending.—Louisville Times.

"I sometimes wish you'd give me a little money without my having to ask for it," said she.

"I sometimes wish you'd give me the chance," said he.—Pathfinder.

"What kind of book do you require, miss?"

"Oh, I'm not exactly particular. Anything that's been banned."—Humorist.

His Mother—"Bobbie, you have been very naughty after promising to obey me strictly."

Bobbie—"That's nothin'. You once promised to obey dad." — Detroit News.

Doris—Papa is immensely pleased to hear you are a poet.

Youth—Is he?

"Oh, very! The last of my boys he tried to throw out was an amateur boxer."—Yorkshire Post.

"Mamma," questioned five-year-old Jennie, "am I as tall as you are?"

"No, dear, was the reply. "Your head comes to my waist."

"Well," continued Jennie. "I'm just as short as you are, anyway. My feet are as far down as yours."—Brooklyn Eagle.

"A flirt, am I?" exclaimed the maid, under notice to go. "Well, I knows them as flirt more than I do, and with less excuse." She shot a spiteful look at her mistress, and added, "I'm better looking than you. How do I know? Your husband told me so."

"That will do," said her mistress frigidly.

"But I ain't finished yet," retorted the maid. "I can give a better kiss than you. Want to know who told me that, ma'am?"

"If you mean to suggest my husband—"

"No, it wasn't your husband this time. It was your chauffeur."—Pathfinder.

WESTERLY

SEVERAL AUTO VIOLATORS FINED IN STONINGTON COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Sept. 9 — Numerous cases were disposed of by Judge William A. Wilcox in the regular session of Stonington town court on Tuesday morning the majority being violations of motor traffic laws. Court matters were disposed of as follows:

John Montrello, 17, 57 Warren street, New London, through his father, George S. Montrello, appointed his guardian ad litem, pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving of an automobile on the Boston Post road on Sept. 6th. State Police Officer Arthur Whitmarsh, who gave him a court summons, said he was summoned about 5 a. m. to investigate an automobile accident when a car was reported over a wall and down an embankment on the north side of the Westerly-Stonington road near the Moss farm. The defendant had stated that he became drowsy and his eyes closed while operating behind the steering wheel and did not care to say why he had been out driving all night. While his was the only car involved and damaged to the extent of $25, the accused had sustained a cut over his right eye. He was found guilty and sentenced to pay a fine of $25 and costs which he paid, totalling $37.95.

Anthony Talarico, 20, of 30 Plymouth avenue, Norwalk, had a friend, Joseph Duveo, as his guardian in court, and a plea of guilty was entered to a charge of speeding on the Boston Post road on Sept. 6th. Being found guilty a fine of $10 and costs of $22.95 was imposed and on the recommendation of the chief of police of Norwalk, the state police officer was willing the defendant should return home to finish the payment of his costs.

William L. Seymour, of Lower Pawcatuck, was represented in court by Judge Herbert W. Rathbun on a complaint in which State Police Officer Frederick O. Johnson of the Groton barracks had issued a court summons on the charge of reckless operation of an automobile in Lower Pawcatuck. The case had several court continuances since the accused was charged with knocking down a stone wall of Laura Koontz, residing in Lower Pawcatuck on Aug. 16th.

Prosecutor Hammacher informed the court that the defendant operated his car so that stones were knocked down from his neighbor's wall, but that some one had placed stones in the road and that he had become aggrieved and stopped to take them out. In starting up the car the grass was moist and wheels had skidded and the mishap resulted. In this case matters of little ill-feeling had appeared and a climax resulted from a bunch of small matters which were best disposed of by an absolute nolle in the charge of reckless driving. The weakened wall did not require much to knock it down and the accused in going to the door of the house had knocked and received no response.

"Blessed are the peacemakers," said Judge Rathbun for the defense, and in his investigation there appeared only a civil offense without elements of reckless driving. His investigation had the cooperation of all authorities and there appeared that some feeling had been aroused. He said Mrs. Koontz had built a pleasant home and that misunderstandings had been cured by this experience. The father of the young man stood ready to pay for damage done. On the recommendation of the prosecutor the court granted an absolute nolle.

Sumner H. Post, of Cedarhurst, N. Y., charged with fast driving, made no court appearance and his $25 cash bond was called and declared forfeited.

Carl G. Peterson, 25, of 171 Waterman avenue, East Providence, R. I., apprehended on Sept. 7th by Officer Whitmarsh, pleaded guilty to the reckless operation of an automobile on the Boston Post road. The officer testified that he had followed the defendant at Clark's Chowder House and a truck and two cars were passed, another car at Wilcox curve in Quiambaug and 8 cars to Stonington at a 45-mile rate. The defendant stated that he considered his auto under control. Found guilty he paid the fine of $25 imposed with costs of $12.-95 added and his car was released from custody.

Elmer Drake, 18, of 377 Bergen street, Newark, N. J., had Dr. J. H. Weeks named his guardian and he gave in a plea of guilty. Officer Whitmarsh said that on Aug. 30th Drake, at 1:10 p. m. had turned out at the top of Moss hill in Pawcatuck at from 45 to 50 miles speed to pass a truck ahead when he could not see over the top of the hill. When the defendant explained that he was trying to catch up with an Illinois registered Ford which "had hit his auto in a nasty way." Prosecutor Hammacher asked to have the plea withdrawn. He was given a nolle on the payment of costs which were $14.45.

Thomas J. Fahey, of Dorchester, Mass., involved in the Labor day night mix-up of five autos at the White House inn, Stonington road, in a technical law violation of having a N. Y. plate and Massachusetts operator's license, also had a nolle granted him on the payment of $12.95 costs.

Thurston A. Rider, Bradford road, Westerly, with a R. I. operator's license with a Connecticut car, was granted a nolle on the payment of $12.45 costs.

Herman Graziano, 18, of 1635 Cranston street, Cranston, R. I., had his mother, Mrs. Jennie Graziano, as guardian and pleas of guilty were entered on two counts, the first driving an auto on Water street, Stonington, at high rate of speed and a second count of being without an operator's license. Fine of $10 was remitted on the first count and the $10 fine and costs of the second totalling $33.25 were paid.

Continuances to Sept. 16th were made of the case against Attorney Wytold Damanouski, 459 Garfield avenue, Jersey City, N. J., with $50 bond posted for traffic law violation; and also the case against Edward O'Connor, charged with speeding.

Special court session will be held this Wednesday morning when an alleged adultery case will be heard by the court after a number of continuances, State vs. James, the last continuance being from Aug. 22nd.

Clarence A. Vars, Westerly druggist and successor to his father, Enoch Vars, and grandfather as president of the First Hopkinton Cemetery association, was re-elected together with the other officers at the annual meeting of the association held at the cemetery building on Monday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

The other officers re-elected were M. Herbert Kenyon, secretary and treasurer; Herbert Crandall, sexton; Thomas T. Larkin, superintendent.

ANDERSON CHILD HAS LEG BROKEN WHEN HIT BY AUTO

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Sept. 9.—Marilyn Anderson, six-year old daughter of Thomas L. Anderson, of 23 Noyes avenue, Pawcatuck, is a patient at the Westerly hospital as the result of being struck and knocked down when she darted in front of an automobile on Mechanic street. The accident happened shortly before 6 p. m. Tuesday near the Lorraine mill. When the little girl was struck by the automobile operated by Mrs. Elnora Ozzane, of Lower Pawcatuck, so suddenly did the accident occur that Mrs. Ozzane did not realize that her auto had struck the girl.

She was taken to the Westerly hospital where she was given medical attention by Dr. John Champlin, Sr., and Dr. William Thompson, who found that both bones of her left leg had been broken and she received cuts on the head.

Pawcatuck Police Patrolman George L. Seidel, who investigated the accident, found several eye-witnesses and from their statements did not hold Mrs. Ozzane responsible.

AUTO DRIVERS TO SETTLE TEST OF CARS AND GAS

Auto drivers talk about their cars—how many miles they make on a gallon of gasoline. Recently several auto bugs were standing on the street corner holding a meeting, talking about cars—which was the best. The meeting got hotter and the corner almost had a fist fight about automobiles. Charles Wise, who has an auto, claims he can run on water. Careful Driver Wise was telling about a trip he took not long ago that was 800 miles. The roads were good—some of the finest in New York state and that good Essex car got 42 miles on a gallon of gasoline for that trip. "Gee!" one member of the drivers' club said, "we got to take off our hats to you when you can get all of those miles on a gallon of gas." Another fellow, who owns a Ford spoke up and said, "I don't believe it! If an Essex can stretch miles on one gallon of gas like our friend Wise here told us, what won't my Henry Ford get on a gallon? By all reports a new Ford can get more miles out of a gallon of gas than any automobile made!"

Charles was getting mad at not being believed about his story. "I will prove it to you! My friend, Max Long was with me!" "Got to see it done before I will believe it!" the Ford owner said. "Well, if you want to make a trip with me anytime, 800 miles or more, and if I cannot get 42 miles on a gallon of gas, I will buy you all new tires. If I do it, you will pay for the gas and the trip!"

So the two auto bugs shook hands, and by the last of this month the trip will be made to any part of the United States. What kind of gasoline do you use in that Essex? I always use the kind with not a knock in a tank full, also no dirt, it is the best gas I ever stepped my foot on with the starter.

The talk drew a large crowd to hear what the drivers' club members on the corner had to say. It was like a faker selling soap by standing on a box and showing the crowd how the boy could eat soap and it would not hurt him. That is what the auto bugs reminded you of, by telling about the cars they own, how much better each one is than the next fellow's car, etc. Sure was some meeting, but the medal went to Charles Wise when he told his story without a smile and looked them in the eye without a break—how his Essex car did 42 miles on a gallon of gas. No one threw the bird cage. Sam, ahem, who has a Noah's ark auto, a real old-timer, a Franklin, says he will start out with Driver Wise and make any hill on high, also will be there ahead of his auto any place he names. He will climb any hill, and will watch his car come up. The gang gave him the horse laugh on his old style machine. "You all can laugh all you want, for you cannot judge a car by its looks."

The meeting lasted for over three hours and was more fun than swimming to Mason Island with a bale of hay on your back. The way the wise cracks were coming from the auto drivers. But all will have to wait until the trip is made by Charles Wise and Hank Swan, the owner of the Ford, to see if 42 miles can be made on a gallon of gas. It won't be long now till the members of the drivers' club of the village will find out if it can be done by that Essex car.

Girls should set a good example if they want young men to follow them.

UTILITY SHARES HIGHER YESTERDAY; PROMINENT INDUSTRIALS SPOTTY

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Bullish activity in the merchandising and utility shares piloted the stock market to higher levels today, but the prominent industrials were spotty, the rails dull and the oils irregular.

The general trend of prices was upward with the exception of a mid-afternoon interval when selling of the independent steels and the oil shares threatened the day's gains in the stronger groups. But recovery from this decline was prompt and the last hour was the busiest period. Total sales fell somewhat short of 2,000,000 shares.

The weekly federal reserve member bank statement seemed to meet with the approval of the bull clan. It showed a gain of $30,000,000 in the so-called commercial loan item.

The market's eager search for stocks that will be the first to profit by seasonal improvement sent traders to the merchandising issues. Woolworth was a favorite, rallying more than 2 points on a large turnover. There were gains of 1 to 2 in Associated Dry Goods, R. H. Macy, Best & Co., Sears Roebuck, Spiegel May Stern and Safeway Stores. Schulte preferred rose 5.

The tobacco group was active and strong, American Tobacco 3 and the "B" stock 2. Foods, particularly Canada Dry, National Biscuit, Loose Wiles and General Foods, received some attention.

Selling of the steels may have been based on the expectation that the weekly unofficial production ratios, usually published on Tuesday, would be disappointing, but the report failed to appear and part of the declines were recovered. Bethlehem, which had been more than a point lower, closed unchanged. Michigan and Otis slumped 2 points and Republic was off nearly a point. U. S. Steel, whose August tonnage figures will be announced tomorrow noon, closed a point higher at 172 5-8.

Uneasiness over the crude oil curtailment program in Oklahoma, where legal action has been taken to prevent enforcement of the corporation commission's proration order against one company, affected the oils. Standard of New Jersey dipped a point and other members of the Standard group reacted fractionally. Houston, primarily a natural gas issue, advanced a point.

General Electric, Radio, Westinghouse Electric and Eastman Kodak made nominal gains. General Motors lost its aggressiveness and yielded half a point. Auburn Auto slipped back in profit taking, while Pierce Arrow preferred went to a new low on a 5-point break. Diamond Match turned heavy when the market received a denial of rumors that the Kreuger interests were seeking a one-third holding in the company.

A dozen or so of the utilities rallied 1 to 3 points. Postal Telegraph preferred was one of the few soft spots in the group, making a new low at 85.

Wheat and corn moved in opposite directions. The former declined 1 cent on hedge selling and a poor export demand but corn closed unchanged to half a cent higher. Cotton was up 6 to 13 points. Crude rubber equalled yesterday's low.

Call money held at 2 1-2 per cent, although some loans were made in the outside market at 2 per cent, apparently forecasting an official return to that level in a few days. An interval of easy money is anticipated in connection with the government financing.

A marked improvement in Latin-American rates featured the foreign exchanges. The Spanish peseta was strong.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Further efforts to whip up speculative enthusiasm were concentrated in the electrical power and natural gas stocks in today's curb market, but gains were modest. Several of the oils and specialties were permitted to backslide. Trading was moderately active for these days, with transfers totaling 445,000 shares.

United Gas was sent up 1 1-4 points to 17 1-4 and was the day's most active issue. Electric Bond & Share, parent of the United Gas group, was also a favorite, rising 1 3-8. Duquesne gained fractionally. Other natural gas issues were sluggish. Eastern States Power B, St. Regis, International Utilities B, and American & Foreign Power warrants gained a point or so.

Oils were under the influence of gasoline price cuts, and were steady to heavy. Humble dropped 2 points and Gulf lost more than 1. Cities Service closed unchanged. Further pool activity appeared in Texon, which sold up about a point.

There was little activity in the industrials. Novadelagene was again strong, rising 1 3-8 to a new high. Midvale Co. sold up a point to equal the year's high in a few sales. Pepperell Manufacturing rose nearly 4, in a few odd lot sales, and Stromberg Carlson gained a point, reflecting report that its business was running ahead of last year's.

In the investment company group, U. S. and Overseas dropped a point in profit taking on yesterday's rise. Reliance Management was heavy, losing 2. The Prince and Whitely issues were firm.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Bonds were steady to firm on an increased turnover today. Scattered liquidation of some of the prime rails cut small fractions from their quoted prices, but funds thus realized seemed to be finding prompt reinvestment elsewhere, especially in issues offering higher yields.

Argentines firmed. The Republic 6s of 1958, series "B," gained more than a point on a large turnover, while the October 6s of 1959 rallied 2 points. Advances in the other items were fractional. Buenos Aires bonds likewise were taken at considerably higher levels, and the improved tone found reflection in firmer prices for the Brazilian and Chilean government listings. Rio De Janeiro and San Paulos eased.

Stock warrant and convertible bonds enjoyed a fairly good market. American International 5 1-2s, Remington Rand 5 1-2s with warrants, Texas Corp. 5s and Warner Brothers Pictures 6s, were among the firm spots. Rails carrying stock features sagged, for there was little vitality in the railroad shares on the stock exchange. Reading Coal & Iron 6s gained a point.

Small declines in Atchison general 4s, Baltimore & Ohio 5s, Chesapeake & Ohio 4 1-2s, Illinois Central 6 1-2s, Frisco prior lien 4s, Wabash 4 1-2s, Union Pacific first 4s and Western Maryland 4s, as well as a drop of nearly a point in Frisco 4 1-2s, suggested that buyers were willing to give some of the recently active rails a rest.

Chicago Great Western 4s, the St. Paul general 4s and 5s, Great Northern 7s, Hudson & Manhattan adjustment 5s, Missouri Pacific general 4s, Northern Pacific 6s and Northern Central 4 1-2s, were active on a rising price scale. Kansas City Southern 5s made a new high.

Utilities and industrials were firm. Armour Real Estate 4 1-2s, Bush Terminal 5s, International Cement 5s, U. S. Rubber 5s, Sinclair Oil 6 1-2s, United Biscuit 6s, Laclede Gas 5 1-2s, Colorado Fuel & Iron 5s, American Ice 6s and Postal Telegraph 5s averaged more than half a point higher. The Postal bond recovered yesterday's decline.

Dealings in listed United States governments were the smallest in some time and prices held steady.

Announcement was made early this evening that a $10,000,000 issue of St. Louis-San Francisco series "A" 4 1-2s, due 1978, had been taken by a New York syndicate, subject to interstate commerce commission approval, and privately placed with institutions and dealers at 92 3-4. The offering was largely responsible for the softness of the listed 4 1-2s.

MONEY

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Call money steady 2 1-2 per cent all day. Time loans steady, 30 days, 2a2 1-4; 60 days, 2 1-4a2 1-2; 90 days, 2 1-2a 2 3-4; 4 months, 2 3-4a3; 5-6 months, 3. Prime commer ial paper, 3a3 1-4. Bankers' acceptances, unchanged.

COTTON

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Futures closed very steady, 6 to 13 points higher. Spot steady; middling 11.20.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—(AP)—G. E. Buckland, chairman of the board of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad said that although August figures have not been compiled as yet, gross revenues will be substantially under last year's results. He added the seasonal upturn in business has not been up to normal proportions, but that inventory has been completed to the point where purchasers are returning to the market. The New Haven, he said, is "continuing to prune expenses in line with the current business volume."

Business of the Great Lakes Aircraft Corp., a subsidiary of Allied Motor Industries, is steadily improving and the Cleveland plant is running full time, B. F. Castle, president, said. About 200 men have been added since August, an additional 200 workers will be added soon and night work probably will go into effect by the end of the month, he added.

The Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. has received an order from the government for high pressure and cruising turbines, with accompanying reduction gears, for installation in the battleships Pennsylvania and Arizona, which are being modernized. The cost of the new machinery is approximately $500,000.

Photocolor Corp. is negotiating with a large motion picture producer for production of natural color films. It is said the preliminary negotiations involve photographing 26 short subjects of approximately 1,000 feet each.

"CALLING A DOCTOR" IS EASIEST IN U. S.

CHICAGO (AP) — The United States has more physicians in proportion to population than any other country, according to figures compiled by the American Medical association.

Ratings for leading countries are, United States, per 100,000 of population, 1,266; Austria, 1,139; Great Britain, 1,114; Iceland, 850; Switzerland, 799; Spain, 711; Japan, 768; Cuba, 758.

Persia rates 41st with 25.

Submarine Bells Warn Ships.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Some lightships are equipped to send underwater signals for several miles when weather obscures their lights. These signals are submarine bells, which can be detected only by vessels equipped with underwater "ears."

Better keep your temper, otherwise it is apt to give you away.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—(AP)—Oppressed by the weight of hedging sales from the northwest and by weakness at Winnipeg, Chicago wheat prices closed today at almost the season's bottom levels. Wheat values were on the down grade from the start with only a mild rally or two to check the steady descent. Scattered selling by Chicago operators and commission houses forced values down until only a fraction separated the final quotations from the lowest levels reached this season. A lack of foreign demand, gloomy reports as to the French wheat crop this year and continued heavy movement of the spring wheat crop northwest were all weakening factors. Corn was unsettled, but prices averaged higher. Sufficient buying by commission houses developed to more than offset the weakness engendered by the downward trend of wheat.

Wheat closed nervous and unsettled 1 1-4a1-2c net lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1-8c lower to 3-8a 5-8c higher, oats 1-4a3-4c down, and provisions ranged from unchanged to a decline of 17c.

Provisions broke early on selling pressure by commission houses, but rallied later because of some buying.

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9—(AP)—Treasury receipts for Sept. 6 were $5,481,178.47; expenditures $8,313,587.12; balance $70,292,962.79.

South Woodstock assumed its familiar September aspect today with the unofficial opening of the 73rd annual exhibition of the Woodstock Agricultural society. Tuesday and Wednesday will be the big days for on these dates native sons and daughters will gather at the ancient meeting place for the races, both automotive and horse and a visit to the exhibition hall and ways of the concessionaires, which were gaily decorated today with the well known banners and tents of the vendors and fakirs. The cattle show to be arranged is expected to be one of the best in the history of the society. Excellent racing cards are scheduled. This year will see the introduction of the automobile entered on the track for competitive racing honors. The vegetable and fruit galleries contain the county's paramount specimens of the growers which are bound to elicit keen competition for the prizes offered for the best exhibits.

ACTIVE MIND LEARNS EASILY TO AGE OF 50

MINNEAPOLIS—(AP)—There is no reason why man cannot learn as easily at 50 as at 15. Dr. Herbert Sorenson of the University of Minnesota has concluded.

He says his experiments show that the mind, like the body, remains efficient only so long as it is exercised.

Up to the age of 50, he said, he was unable to find any decline in "learning power" for those actively engaged in study.

SAILOR JACK HYLAND HAS HIS CASE CONTINUED

John Hyland, Utica, N. Y., ex-service man, familiarly known as "Sailor Jack" Hyland, was arraigned in the Waterford town court this afternoon, charged with conversion. His case was continued until tomorrow morning, when Judge Fred Schofield will sit in special session. Hyland last June rented a car of Newell & Glidden, Groton automobile dealers, and did not return the auto when he promised to do so. After waiting several weeks for the auto to be returned and when Hyland failed to keep to his agreement, the state police, Groton barracks, were requested to arrest the former sailor. Yesterday afternoon information was obtained that Hyland was at the Golden Spur and Officer William Elmer MacKenzie went there and arrested him. Hyland, besides being wanted for the theft of the automobile, may be prosecuted elsewhere on a charge of fraud, for prior to stealing the automobile he was employed by a hosiery concern. He padded his order accounts in order to obtain the bonus offered by the manufacturers for the largest sales, but after rendering the checks it was ascertained that Hyland had given fictitious names and addresses of the alleged purchasers.

CITY MANAGER HOLT FINDS PATROLMAN SHEEHAN GUILTY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 9.— Patrolman Patrick Sheehan was given a hearing on charges of conduct unbecoming a police officer in the juvenile court room, municipal building, this morning by City Manager William A. Holt, the hearing being the result of the officer's alleged attack and beating of Frank Storey, a submarine base sailor on the night of Aug. 21. At the conclusion of testimony, City Manager Holt announced that Sheehan was found guilty on three charges, using vile and indecent language, wilful maltreatment of a person by using unnecessary violence and acts contrary to good order and discipline. In announcing Sheehan's guilt the city manager said that discipline would not be meted out to the officer, who has been suspended since Aug. 21 for a day or two. It is understood that the recommendation of Captain Charles A. Finney that Sheehan be dismissed from the force will not be the penalty imposed, but that on the contrary, Sheehan will be ordered to perform patrol duty without compensation for a period of a month or more. Sheehan's hearing was the result of his having been convicted in the police court two weeks ago on a charge of breach of the peace and for which offense, Judge Daniel M. Cronin imposed a penalty of $50. Sheehan, through counsel, gave notice of an appeal, but last Saturday vacated the appeal when he paid the fine. Because of Sheehan's offense, if found guilty, which was today, carrying with it a penalty of dismissal, Judge Cronin Deputy Judge John McGarry and Mayor Cornelius D. Twomey, the city's board of appeals, were in attendance at the hearing and at the conclusion of testimony, went into conference with City Manager Holt.

Today, Sheehan did not have witnesses as he did when in the police court, for Elroy Stammond and James Paul, East New London youths who testified in favor of the accused officer, were not present. Sheehan, however, testified in his own defense. Sheehan said that he had reported off duty and at the corner of John street he heard Storey and his companion, Leland Flannagan apply an insulting remark to four women who were passing. It was the remark made by one of the bluejackets that caused the officer to take the sailors to task. Sheehan declared that he had not been drinking, neither did he use a blackjack for had he done so the sailors would have been in a hospital. He said he was married and that his wife and three children are dependent upon him for support. The eldest of the children is 11 years and the youngest is two and one-half years. Storey and Flanagan related practically the same testimony as they gave in the police court.

Earl L. Williams, another sailor, testified that he observed Sheehan hit Storey also was a witness to the officer dragging the civilian by the coat.

H. E. MacLean, Providence, said that he followed Wells and the sailors along Main street to where Sheehan and the civilian were standing and heard Sheehan apply vile language to the young man.

Frank Denazzo, a clerk, said that he had observed Storey with his lip bleeding freely also testified to witnessing Sheehand striking the civilian. Denazzo also testified that civilians threatened to stop Sheehan's abuse if Wells did not do so.

Wells testified to parting Sheehan and the civilian and to Sheehan striking at the civilian, but witness said he did not observe a blackjack used by Sheehan. Wells said that he advised Sheehan to exercise judgment and that no charge against the latter or anyone else was made to the witness.

Palace Theatre

Paul Whiteman, the king of jazz, will make his first appearance on the screen of the Palace theatre Thursday in his talking picture, "The King of Jazz, the most costly, the most spectacular and the most entertaining revue ever presented on either screen or stage. It is loaded with the most celebrated headliners of stage and vaudeville and has the greatest stars of the studios including John Boles, Laura La Plante, Jeanette Loff, Glenn Tryon Slim Summerville and a list of others too long to enumerate.

The picture consisting of eight stupendous musical spectacles between which are interspersed innumerable specialties and comedy acts, dramatic skits and blockouts, is filmed entirely in technicolor.

On the same program with this marvelous production is another film, "Double-Cross Roads," an all talking picture which is based on the theory of regeneration. It tells the story of a young ex-convict who is making an attempt to live his life in the best possible way. He is tempted in many ways to return to his old path of thieving but the love of a good woman brings him at last to a full realization of his wrong-doing.

This double feature, which will be shown at the Palace through Saturday is absolutely unequalled in the history of Norwich. For first class entertainment and pleasure this is the best thing that the public has been offered to date. No one should miss this fine opportunity to enjoy one of the greatest shows on earth.

"The Unholy Three," with Lon Chaney and a fine supporting cast, will be shown at the Palace for the last times today.

Broadway Theatre

Gary Cooper, hero of "The Virginian" and "The Texan" becomes a gallant captain in the U. S. Engineers in "A Man From Wyoming," which opens at Warner's Broadway today.

During a particularly stiff engagement June Collyer, a society girl ambulance-driver, craving thrills, makes her way to the front. She is fascinated by his stern manliness, and the result of their friendship is marriage in a small French village back of the lines.

They spend three happy days together in happy abandon. But he is ordered back to the trenches again, and they part. Later on June reads a report which lists Cooper as among those killed in an engagement with the enemy. Meanwhile Cooper, not killed but badly wounded, is sent to the base hospital where June is an attachee. He is shocked to learn of her scandalous behavior. Their differences lead to a bitter argument, but after a series of exciting events they are brought together finally in a happy reunion.

New Frigidaire

DAYTON, O., Sept. 9—Overwhelming public approval of two popular priced electric refrigerators, announced by Frigidaire corporation in July, has caused this subsidiary of General Motors to supplement them with two still larger models in the low price range, E. G. Biechler, president and general manager, announced today.

"The two new models, one with eight, and the other with nine square feet of shelf space," he said, "round out a complete line of popular priced units. In rounding out our popular priced line we have practically reached one of our earliest goals—that of providing an electric refrigerator model for every home. In addition to the four low-price models for the millions of families in the average income class, we have our regular household refrigerators plus a line of multi-cold Frigidaires that offers the finest in domestic electric refrigeration.

"During the two months that Frigidaire has been in the popular price electric refrigerator market, we have experienced a marked demand for our new product, and found that there is a need for large as well as small refrigerators. The same production economies and lower raw material prices that enabled us to enter this field with two Frigidaires of four and one-half, and six square feet of shelf space, made it possible for us to offer the larger sizes at slightly higher prices.

"Besides having life-time porcelain finishes, the popular price refrigerators incorporate outstanding Frigidaire features, one of the most noted of which is the cold control for better frozen dessert and salad making. Models in this line now are on display in showrooms throughout the country."

MARRIED MAN EVEN SERIES WITH THE BACHELORS NINE

At the J. B. Martin baseball diamond Monday evening the Swanees Married Men defeated the Single Men by the score of 10 to 5. By winning this game it evened the count with one game for each side. John Dowling, the Married Men's twirler, kept the Single Men's hits well scattered and was credited with six strikeouts. Arthur McGowan was the starting twirler for the Single Men and he was relieved in the fourth inning by Henry Mileski, who proved to be no puzzle to the Married Men. The features of the game were the heavy hitting of Harold Wickham, the star center fielder of the Married Men, who got three hits out of four trips to the plate, and the fielding of Peter Rowkowski, second baseman on the Benedicts, and John Parkinson, who made a beautiful one hand catch in deep center field with the bases loaded and two out. The hit was labeled for a home run. The line-up for the Married Men was as follows: Schoffield, c; John Dowling, p; David Shahan, 1b; Peter Rowkowski, 2b; Stephen Hoffman, 3b; Edward Riordan, ss; John Tennant, lf; Harold Wickham and Atchinson, cf; William Evans, rf. The Single Men: Henry Mileski, c and p; Arthur McGowan, p and c; Peter Farrell, 1b; Michael Shahan, 2b; Robert J. Swanton, 3b; Richard Seed, ss; Edward Delaney, lf; John Parkinson, cf; Red Moran and Alvin Barrows, rf. Peter Gauthier umpired in a very capable manner behind the plate, while Cap Grady had charge of the bases. Edward Delaney, who was the heavy hitter of the first game, failed to reach first base in four trips to the plate.

Mrs. Charles Gauthier, Mrs. Joseph Duquette and Miss Cecelia Duquette and Elton Loney were week end guests of Joseph Duquette at New Haven.

FUNERAL

Miss Mary J. Conroy

The funeral of Miss Mary J. Conroy was held from the home of the Misses Lee at 151 Boswell avenue Tuesday morning at 8:30 o'clock with a requiem mass at St. Patrick's church at 9 o'clock, with Rev. James H. Dargan as celebrant. Chopin's Funeral March was played by Henry LaFontaine as the body was borne into the church. At the offertory De Profundis was sung by Roderick Sullivan and Lead Kindly Light was played at the recessional. The bearers were John Corcoran, Daniel Lee, George Lee, Andrew Deneff, John B. Galivan and Daniel O'Neil. The esteem in which the deceased was held was evidenced by the large attendance of mourners. The floral tributes were both numerous and beautiful. Relatives were present from Branford, Bridgeport and Middletown. Burial is to take place Thursday morning in a family lot in Plattsburg, N. Y., going by auto cortege. Undertaker Thomas J. Shahan was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Few Communicable Diseases

Diphtheria and whooping cough are the only communicable diseases reported this week in eastern Connecticut, according to the state board of health. There is one case of diphtheria in Willimantic and the whooping cough reports show two cases in Groton, two in New London and three in Stonington.

COAST GUARD TO BE NAVAL POLICE FOR RACE

Owners of local yachts, passenger vessels, work boats and other marine craft who expect to navigate the waters of Eastern Long Island sound and in the neighborhood of Newport, R. I., during the holding of the America's Cup races beginning September 13th, will be interested in the patrol regulations issued by Captain W. H. Munter of the United States Coast Guard which has charge of controlling the great spectator fleet and the warning of all other vessels out of the area in which the races are being held.

Captain Munter, who is commander of the eastern division of the Coast Guard, will assign to the work of patrolling the races enough destroyers, cutters and small vesels to form around the cup yachts a double patrol line, inside which spectator boats may not venture; and seven other craft, posted at strategic points, will divert coastwise traffic into courses where they will not interfere with the races.

The latter function will be performed by Coast Guard boats stationed off Brenton's Reef Lightship at the entrance to Narragansett bay, off Point Judith, off the north and south ends of Block Island, at the mouth of Buzzard's bay and of Vineyard sound, and off No Man's Land. This will cover all the usual coastwise traffic lanes used by tows, schooners and steamers, and any vessels approaching the race area on those lanes can be diverted either in shore or off shore to prevent their blundering into the course of the international races. This will be a fairly simple job, but the work of the actual course patrol will be more difficult. Before the start of each race the Coast Guard vessels will form in two lines on a V formation, with the starting line inside the open end of the V and half a mile distant from the nearest point of the patrol line. Excursion steamers and yachts must all keep outside the lines.

If the start of the race is to windward, as it generally is, these lines will follow the general course of the yachts to the first mark, and every time the yachts tack the patrol vessels will change their courses in such a way as to keep half a mile away from the yachts at all times. On a windward and leeward race this will suffice to get the fleet to the weather mark, and when the yachts round the mark to start their run home the Coast Guard boats will form two parallel lines, each half a mile to one side of the course of the racing yachts. Triangular races are more difficult to handle, and on these the V line of patrol boats will follow the racers most of the way to the first mark. At a certain point the patrol fleet will blow its whistles and dip flags to half mast as a signal to change course. At this signal all yachts and passenger boats are supposed to alter their course until they are more than half a mile beyond the second turning buoy. There the patrol vessels will form a line half a mile outside the triangle to be sailed by the racing yachts and proceed to the finish.

All this sounds very complicated but boiled down it means that all passenger vessels and yachts following the race must keep outside the lines established by the Coast Guard. If they do so everything will be all right. If they don't, they will be in a good deal of trouble.

The federal law on the matter gives the Coast Guard complete charge of all "regattas and marine parades." In case of violation of these regulations officers of the offending vessels are liable to suspension or revocation of their licenses. Persons who are not licensed officers and who violate the regulations are liable to fines of $500, whether they are in charge of the offending boats or are their owners, and according to a strict interpretation of the law, it looks as though anybody who happens to be aboard such a boat would be liable to a fine of $250 just for good measure.

Furthermore, any offending boat will find herself tied up to a dock somewhere. The Coast Guard has power to put a man aboard any vessel and, under his charge, send her into port if the vessel is breaking the rules.

The only craft to be allowed inside the patrol lines are the flagship of the New York Yacht club—in this case Commodore Vincent Astor's Nourmahal—Sir Thomas Lipton's steam yacht Erin and such other vessels as are necessary to carry out the details of the race and the patrol. These will carry Coast Guard flags.

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER FOR MISS STELLA KORENKIEWICZ

A pretty surprise, miscellaneous shower was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Korenkiewicz, of Yantic, for their daughter Stella, in honor of her approaching marriage to Harold Esterbrook, of Putnam. After the bride-to-be showed her numerous and very beautiful gifts to everyone present, Mrs. Peter Korenkiewicz and Miss Laura Korenkiewicz served sandwiches and ice cream. The home was beautifully decorated. Novelty dancing was enjoyed until 12 o'clock, to the accompaniment of a guitar and radio. Those present were: the Misses Esterbrook, of Putnam; Miss Alice Korenkiewicz, Pauline Nawrocki, Stacia Szymanski, Laura Korenkiewicz, Mrs. Joseph Korenkiewicz, Mrs. Tomovick, Lila Smith, Blanche Richards, Elsie Whitmarsh, Jennie and Stacia Lienko, Mary and Olga Koleda, of Yantic; Mrs. Peter Korenkiewicz, Joy, Jean and Helen Slavikowski, and Stacia Danilowicz, of Norwich.

GROTON MAN SCORES HIGH EXAMINATION MARK

Two Connecticut men, Jewell A. Newcomb of New Haven, and Victor M. Gadrow of 45 Deane street, Groton, made the highest marks in a competitive examination held Sept. 2 at Newport for a course at the Naval academy preparatory school at Hampton Roads, Va., to prepare for entrance examinations in April for the Naval academy at Annapolis.

Newcomb, who enlisted in the navy at New Haven on May 20, averaged 94, and Gadrow averaged 92. The latter enlisted at New London May 26, 1930. He is a brother-in-law of J. J. Kenerleber, recruiting officer at New London.

At the expiration of a 15-day leave they will be sent to the preparatory school.

NOLLE FOR DRIVER ON CHARGE OF MANSLAUGHTER

Alex Chmielewski, 21, of Norwich was presented in the city court Tuesday morning on a charge of manslaughter but the charge was nolled by the court. Chmielewski was exonerated by Coroner Edward G. McKay of criminal liability in causing the death of Meyer Silverman, 5, late of No. 24 Asylum street. The child was fatally injured August 2nd when struck by a machine operated by Chmielewski, the accident occuring on Maple street.

FINE AND JAIL SENTENCE FOR NEW LONDON MAN FOR RECKLESS DRIVING

Frederick Leroy Glynn of No. 152 Willetts avenue, New London, was fined $10 and costs and sentenced to jail for 30 days on a reckless driving charge when he was presented in the city court Tuesday morning. Judge Arthur F. Libby imposed the sentence, and an appeal was taken to the court of common pleas. The trial lasted several hours an a number of witnesses were heard.

Glynn was originally charged with manslaughter in causing the death of John R. Tennant of No. 510 North Main street when his machine struck the man several weeks ago. He was exonerated from criminal liability by Coroner Edward G. McKay.

A son of the deceased, Robert Tennant, was the first witness heard. He said that he was near the scene of the accident when his father was struck by the Glynn car. He testified that the machine, a Buick, was traveling in the direction of Taftville over North Main street prior to the accident. He stated that the car was traveling at a fast rate of speed, although he could not give an exact estimate as to the number of miles per hour it was moving. The son, according to his testimony, was the first to reach Mr. Tennant after he was struck.

Mrs. Tennant, wife of the deceased, told of seeing the machine strike her husband. She said the accident occurred almost in front of the Tennant home and he was in the center of the highway when hit.

Sergt. Matthew Delaney of the local police force, who investigated the accident with Officer John Dunion, stated that measurements taken from the point where Tennant was alleged to have been hit and the point where he was said to have been picked up showed a distance of 53 feet. The sergeant testified that he inspected the Glynn car and found that the radiator had been pushed back several inches and that the hood of the machine had been sprung in the crackup.

Walter Gronski and John Okuniski testified that the car passed them while they were walking from Sixth to Seventh streets and that it was traveling at an excessive rate of speed at the time. One of the boys remarked to the other, "If Crary was around he would surely 'nail' him."

Glynn denied that he was travelling at an excessive rate of speed and stated that his car had been stopped within two or three feet after the man had been hit.

Attorney G. C. Morgan of New London, who represented Glynn in court, called on several other witnesses. In the course of his questioning he asked whether Tennant appeared intoxicated, but all the witnesses said he was perfectly sober.

WOMEN VOTERS LEAGUE HAS PLATFORM PLANKS

Prominent democratic members of the Connecticut League of Women Voters will appear before the resolutions committee of the democratic state nominating convention in New London this (Wednesday) evening to ask that the following planks be included in the party's platform:

Jury Service For Women—Inasmuch as women now exercise all the privileges and duties of citizenship with the exception of jury duty, and as they are now in the court room in every other capacity, we believe that women should be made eligible for jury service on the same terms as men with suitable exemptions.

Women in Industry—We believe that the conditions under which women are employed are necessarily a concern of the state and must be safeguarded in order to protect the vitality of the race. We urge the adoption of a shorter working day for women in industrial and mercantile establishments, and adequate provision for the enforcement of labor laws.

Preventive Methods in Public Welfare—We believe that the development of a comprehensive program looking toward the prevention of delinquency, dependency and defect should be the state's first concern. We therefore recommend the strengthening, by increased appropriations, of those state departments and institutions which can study and carry out such preventive projects. We also believe that special attention should be given to constructive treatment of dependents, defectives and delinquents in our state institutions, and to securing such trustworthy supervision of these institutions as will insure the proper care and training of the inmates.

Education—We favor a constructive program for education, state aid for special classes, increased support for the division of special education and standards, and maintenance of the state normal and trade schools at a high standard of efficiency under the direction of the state board of education. We believe that to make this principle effective it is necessary that the state should develop a system of state aid for education which shall insure that a reasonable minimum standard of education shall be available to every child in Connecticut.

These planks, representing principles for which the league has long stood and worked, will also be presented at the republican state convention in Hartford next week. Furthermore, they will form the basis of the league's legislative program for 1931.

Miss Marjory Cheney of Manchester is chairman of the league's committee which prepared the planks. Among those who will speak for them at the democratic meeting are Mrs. Ward Duffy of West Hartford and Miss Martha E. Moore of New Haven. Republicans who will speak for the planks at the Hartford convention are Mrs. Edith Valet Cook of New Haven and Mrs. William F. Worrall of Meriden.

BOILING WILL PROTECT MILK FROM TUBERCULOSIS

A woman from a distant part of the state came to Hartford the other day and brought a sample of milk to the bureau of laboratories of the state department of health hoping to have it examined for the germs of tuberculosis. She had read that the laboratory had recently found these germs in the sputum of a milk handler working in a dairy which produces high grade milk. As the milk was used to feed her baby she was especially concerned to have it free from the germs of tuberculosis.

Methods of examining milk in the laboratory do not include tests for the presence of tubercle bacilli. Milk is protected by eliminating tuberculosis from the cows producing it and by making sure that persons having tuberculosis do not handle milk. Pasteurization will destroy such germs if present.

In conversation with the woman who brought the sample of milk to the laboratory it was learned that she always boils the milk for five minutes before feeding it to the baby. She was assured that this process would kill any germs of tuberculosis present. Thus the baby was in no danger of getting tuberculosis from drinking milk. She was boiling the milk on the advice of her physician.

Methods of safeguarding milk from the germs of tuberculosis include making sure that the cows are free from the disease, that the handlers do not have tuberculosis, and then pasteurization as an additional safeguard. Pasteurization will destroy other dangerous germs as well as the germs of tuberculosis. If the consumer is not sure the milk is safe, it can be boiled for five minutes and thus destroy all dangerous disease germs. In fact heating milk to a temperature of 160 degrees fahrenheit for five minutes will kill all disease germs ordinarily found in milk.

Well Child Conferences

Well child conferences to be held under the auspices of the state board of health, each in the afternoon from 2 to 4 o'clock, are the following: Monday, Sept. 15, Attawaugan, club rooms; Wednesday, Sept. 17, Flanders, town hall; Thursday, Sept. 18, Quinebaug, lyceum hall; Friday, Sept. 19, Oneco, town hall.

HENS AT STORRS KEEP AHEAD OF LAST YEAR

In the forty-fourth week of the Storrs egg laying contest, total production for all pens amounted to 3,562 eggs or a yield of 50.9 per cent. This is a drop of only 56 eggs as compared with the previous week and is 255 eggs more than was produced in the same week last year.

It appears at present that the total for the full year will almost exactly equal or perhaps slightly exceed last year's record of 205 eggs per hen for the entire 1,000 birds. At the moment there is a margin of almost one-half an egg per hen in favor of the birds in the current contest.

Five pens of Rocks, Reds and Leghorns ran neck and neck last week in that only three eggs separated the lowest from the highest pen. Barred Rocks had the edge in that they got away with first and fourth places and tied for second. R. C. Cobb's pen from Littleton, Mass., led with a score of 58 eggs.

Pratt experiment farm's pen of Barred Rocks from Morton, Pa., and Cloverdale Poultry farm's White Leghorns from Cortland, N. Y., tied for second place with 57 eggs each. Rhode Island Reds entered by Edward N. Larrabee of Peterboro, N. H., were a close third with a tally of 56 eggs and James Dryden's pen of Barred Rocks from Modesto, Calif., was an equally close fourth with a mark of 55 eggs.

The leading pens to date in each of the principal varieties are as follows:

White Wyandottes—The Locusts, West Cornwall, Conn., 2131; Jack Wrennal, Barton, Nr. Preston, Eng., 1971.

Barred Rocks—R. C. Cobb, Littleton, Mass., 2315; Pratt experiment farm, Morton, Pa., 2212; Spring Brook Poultry farm, South Wethersfield, Conn., 2086.

White Rocks—E. H. Rucker, Ottumwa, Iowa, 2612; Davidson Bros., Upton Mass., 1744; Kalerok farm, Westford, Mass., 1723.

Rhode Island Reds—Edw. N. Larrabee Peterboro, N. H., 2442; F. S. Chapin, Longmeadow, Mass., 2292; Homestead farms, Newtown, Conn., 2262; W. Otis Day, Westford, Mass., 2216.

DIDN'T OBEY ORDERS, SO COURT FINED MILK MAN

Found guilty of violation of the state dairy laws, Thomas Lebjko, Norwich Town milk man, was fined $25 and costs and given a 15-day jail sentence, suspended. He was arrested Monday by Constable Lucius Fenton on orders of the state dairy and food commissioner. Inspectors of the state dairy and food department visited Lebjko's place some time ago to inspect his diary plant. He was presented in the Norwich city court Tuesday morning.

It was learned that he was in the habit of cooling his milk in a well. He was advised to correct this violation of the law. Aug. 30 an inspector again visited the farm and it was found that he was cooling his milk in the open air, thus exposing it to flies, etc. He was ordered to stop selling milk, but, it is understood, continued to carry on his business, paying no attention to the order.

The accused claimed he did not understand the order issued by the state commissioner.

POSSIBLE SKULL FRACTURE IN FALL FROM SILO

Edward Minor of Amston, this state, was badly injured when he fell from the top of a 30-foot silo Tuesday morning, about 11 o'clock, at the farm of John Wade of Colchester. He is on the danger list at the W. W. Backus hospital, suffering from injuries to his back and a possible fractured skull. Mr. Minor had the contract to paint the silo and with his two sons started work on the silo Tuesday morning.

For some unexplainable reason he fell from a ladder on which he was standing. He was taken into Mr. Wade's home and Dr. Edward Howland was called to attend him. Dr. Howland ordered his removal to the hospital and he was taken there in the ambulance.

METHODIST CHURCH WILL HAVE POLLOCK'S PLAY

The Enemy, a play by Channing Pollock, will be given at Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, for the evening service next Sunday.

The Enemy is a play which had notable runs in New York and London, but which could not be taken on the road, owing to the excessive cost. It is a play about what happens to people who stay at home during a war. Not a shot is fired or a drum heard, but friends become enemies overnight, the ordinary things of life—food, shelter, kindness, home, happiness—disappear, and the day becomes a strained fear of the dissolution of all that life holds dear. The Enemy is anyone who happens to be on the other side. After the war the soldier returns, jobless and unwanted, the profiteer looks forward to the next war, the people who had nothing to do with it are taxed for generations and then the whole thing goes on again. The play is a vivid picture of the uselessness of war but is not propaganda.

WOMEN WILL MEET METHODIST MISSIONARIES

Thousands of women from New England will be present at the executive meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society of the Methodist church, to meet with missionaries, nationals from India, China, Malaysia, South America, Africa, Japan, Korea, Europe and the Philippines, and women from other parts of the United States, to discuss world conditions, at Springfield, Mass., Oct. 23 to 28.

Seven bishops of the Methodist church will be present at the sessions and speak, including Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes of Chicago, Bishop William Anderson of Boston, Bishop Francis W. Warne of India, Bishop Raymond J. Wade of Stockholm, Sweden, Bishop Adna Leonard of Buffalo, Bishop Edwin F. Lee of Malaysia and the Philippines, and Bishop Frederick B. Fisher, formerly of India.

DISMISSES CLAIM FOR WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION

Compensation Commissioner A. J. Bailey has disallowed the compensation claim of Mrs. Lillian E. Oddo, widow of Charles P. Oddo of Mystic against Clarence L. Brockett of Ocean avenue, New London. Commissioner Bailey finds that Mrs. Oddo failed to substantiate her claim that Mr. Oddo died from injuries arising out of and in the course of his employment.

Oddo was a carpenter and had been employed by Mr. Brockett. The latter claimed that at the time Oddo was injured he was engaged in doing some work for himself.

FINDS REPUBLICAN PARTY TAINTED WITH CORRUPTION

Homer J. Cummings So Informs His Fellow Democrats in "Keynote" Address at Opening of the Democratic State Convention at Eastern Point—Holds the Republican Party Responsible For All the Nation's Economic Ills—Also Accuses President Hoover of Shortcomings and J. Henry Roraback of Near-Tyranny—Nomination of Cross For Governor Assured

EASTERN POINT, Conn., Sept. 10.—(AP)—Full responsibility for the nation's economic ills was placed upon the republican party tonight by Homer S. Cummings, former chairman of the democratic national committee, in delivering the "keynote" address at the opening of the democratic state convention here.

Mr. Cummings, in reviewing nine years of republican rule, which he found "tained with corruption," attacked the party in power for failure to redeem campaign pledges, for an "unsound and unjustifiable" tariff law and urged a sweeping change of regime.

The new tariff law, he asserted, "has increased the burden upon the back of the taxpayer; it has impaired the purchasing power of the farmer; it has dealt industry a staggering blow at a period when it could least endure it; and has produced ominous reverberations in every country with which we had built up a friendly relationship and a favorable trade balance."

Asserting that "prosperity cannot be created by presidential proclamation," Mr. Cummings took President Hoover and members of his cabinet to task for issuing statements of a favorable and hopeful nature before and after the stock market collapse last October.

"The whole experience," he said, "serves to show to what a pass statesmen will come when they pretend to possess unusual wisdom as to the course of the stock market or business depressions; and it is particularly distressing in the case of Mr. Hoover who, in his campaign speeches, had said, "The victory of the republican party would insure stability of business and employment.'

The republican party failed to give farm relief, Mr. Cummings asserted and the agricultural problem is as far from solution as ever. The farm board, he declared, has only been giving advice which "has accentuated the misfortune of innumerable farmers who unfortunately relied upon it."

General prosperity does not depend on continued republican rule, he said in a declaration that the time had come "when the assumption of superior wisdom by republican leaders as to business and finance should give place to a little real humility."

"We are deeply concerned," he continued, "with the problems of our country, its happiness, its prosperity and its honor. We have a right to suggest to the republican leaders that they abandon for all time the hypocritical pretense that they are the only class fit to govern, the only group who understand the machinery of government, the only people who can create or keep prosperity. Far too long has this pretense of superior wisdom been maintained."

He attacked the control of J. Henry Roraback, state chairman of the republican committee, as bordering on a tyranny, "not only a system repugnant to free minds, but bringing in its train a retinue of evils."

PROGRAM OF DEM. STATE CONVENTION TODAY

EASTERN POINT, Sept. 10—(AP)—The unique experience of being gathered under one roof for all convention activities, political and social, came to delegates to the democratic state convention, tonight. They ate in Griswold hotel dining room and later in the same spacious room listened to the keynote speech.

Tomorrow after breakfast they will turn to and adopt a platform and select a state ticket. If the work is not completed speedily they can recess for luncheon. More likely after the work is done they will lunch together and make the windup meal a ratification affair.

Yesterday's Proceedings

In the afternoon as delegates arrived the social side of the gathering was uppermost. Everybody was hatless and what with merry laughter and hearty handshaking it was evident all were having a good time.

At supper a long table of women delegates sang campaign songs, The Sidewalks of New York being the favorite and bringing encores.

The first session did not start until after 9 o'clock, there being no urgency to start early, as bed time could be forgotten as the distance to one's room was not long.

The big assembly dining room was well filled when Chairman Walsh called to order and Rev. G. B. Gilbert, of Middletown, offered a fervent prayer that all jealousies be ended and that God's blessing rest on all. (There was applause after the prayer.)

Senator William C. Fox, of New London, welcomed the delegates to the largest, best and most socially successful convention ever held by the party. He asked them to come again and feel that New London always could hospitably entertain those within her gates. He also gave a political tinge by forecasting democratic victory. (The audience gave him a great hand.)

Mayor Cornelius D. Twomey also welcomed the audience, both officially and as a democrat.

A burst of enthusiasm came when Chairman Walsh took the delegates into his confidence by saying: "I have learned a secret in the last week from the councils of the national party. That is that our keynote speaker is being talked of as a presidential candidate two years hence."

Mr. Cummings then arrived and was presented. The Stamford and Greenwich delegates marched in front of the platform while all others stood and applauded.

Cross by Acclamation

Most of the discussion before and after the session was as to selection of a ticket below governor, which place will go to Prof. Wilbur L. Cross. It seemed likely that a ballot would be taken, although many delegates believed nomination would be by acclamation.

No one mentioned Burton Mansfield as a contender.

Probable Ticket

For lieutenant-governor, the Waterbury delegation wants Comptroller Daniel Leary, of that city, and they offered to support David A. Wilson, of Hartford, for attorney-general. However, many delegates favor Wilson for second place and prediction was that if Wilson's friends persisted that he should be placed second there would be a contest.

For treasurer, Alton T. Miner, of New London, is proposed. There was a desire to honor Fred P. Holt, of Hartford, for his long service as committee treasurer but he refused to allow his name to be offered.

For secretary of state, as Mr. Miner had been switched to treasurer, there was a search for candidates.

Mayor Anthony Sunderland, of Danbury, has a clear field for comptroller.

Might Be Test of Strength

The indications were that on the convention floor there might be a test of strength between the organization forces led by State Chairman Walsh, and those who have been against him and who elected Archibald McNeil as national committeeman. The lines late tonight seemed to be sharply drawn.

In case the strength test does not come during the convention session, it may be the feature of the meeting to organize the committee.

The platform draft, which had been put in shape by Francis P. Guilfoile, of Waterbury, was ready for the committee on resolutions.

To Present Wet Plank

The only definite plank was that demanding repeal of the 18th amendment.

The platform draft brought by Francis P. Guilfoile and read to his colleagues on the sub-committee, was so incomplete that it was decided to rewrite it before handing to the resolutions committee. The planks proposed were quite different from the forecast. The preamble dealt with unemployment, and the tariff. No direct reference was made to old age pensions but this subject and working men's dependency were to be studied by a legislative commission. Other planks in rough were on women's jury service, larger appropriations for human welfare institutions, greater attention to dirt roads and a denunciatory of what was termed "one-man power." A plank for more rigid supervision of public utilities was to be offered.

Disabled Veterans of the World War of Bridgeport will ask that the state-aid fund for war veterans be increased from $2,500,000 to $4,000,000 and distribution be through a commission of four veterans appointed by the governor.

The caucuses during a recess of the convention to complete membership on committees developed contests in the 14th and 17th districts for state committee. In the latter William P. Palmer, of Oxford, was reelected. The first ballot was 15 to 14. One vote was thrown out and on the second ballot Palmer won, 17 to 12. In the 14th district Miss Catherine FitzGerald, of West Haven, retained her place by one vote, her opponent being Mrs. VanReyfer.

Changes in Committee

The changes in committee were: Third district. C. H. Miller, for T. J. Conroy; sixth, J. E. R. Keeves, for W. F. Mangan, New Britain; eighth, T. F. Keyes, for Thomas Dwyer and Mrs. Julia Blakeslee, for Eleanor Carroll; tenth, Ruth Gargano, for Adela Tennion; 11th, Anthony Adinolfi, for Samuel Tator and Elizabeth Creighton, for Mrs. Mae Heffernan; 12th, Mrs. Lucy Bracken, for Mrs. J. J. Carter; 17th, Alcine McCarthy, for Mrs. Catherine Reardon; 23rd, Leo C. Loughlin, for P. J. Umstatter, and Mabel McQueeny, for Mrs. Josephine Kiley; 27th, Rose Russell, for Mrs. Bissell, of Norwalk; 29th, Margaret Hurley, for Mrs. Lena Fletcher; 30th, J. M. Heffernan, for William Driscoll and Mrs. Susan Hotan, for Mrs. Giselbrancht; 31st, W. J. Brennan, for E. O. Wagner, of Lakeville.

BODY OF SLAIN WOMAN FOUND BY HUNTSMEN

NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 10—(AP)—The body of Mrs. Mabel B. Carter, 23, wife of Clyde D. Carter, also known as Solomon Carter, of Philadelphia, was found by huntsmen in the woods on Davis Island tonight.

Carter was arrested by county and city police on a charge of murder. The couple had been staying with Carter's father on a houseboat near where the body was found.

An examination of the body showed the woman had been shot with a shotgun, the load entering the left side of her breast. The body also showed signs of an attempt to destroy it by burning, according to the police.

Carter was brought to the Norfolk city jail after his arrest, and later taken to a hospital as the police believed he had taken poison in an effort to end his life.

REVOLUTIONARY GOVERNMENT IN CONTROL OF ARGENTINA

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 10.—(AP)—The revolutionary government of Gen. Evaristo Uriburu, which on Saturday displaced that of the aged President Hipolito Irigoyen, tonight appeared to have obtained a master hand in a situation which for 48 hours had presented all of the earmarks of incipient civil warfare.

There has been no firing in the streets of Buenos Aires or elsewhere throughout the republic of Argentina, so far as Provisional President Uriburu and his newly installed official family are aware. The Uriburu sentiment seems to be prevalent by an overwhelming majority.

A DIVORCE GRANTED J. P. EVERELL MARLEY

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 10.—(AP)—The troubled domestic life of Lina Basquette went through another episode today with the granting of a divorce to J. P. Everett Marley who married the film beauty in January, 1929.

Marley complained of his wife's jealousy. As a motion picture cameraman, he recited, his life brought him into contact with many actresses. This so enraged Miss Basquette he finally gave up the work and went with her on a vaudeville tour.

Thus began the end Marley said. They separated and several weeks ago when the actress was recovering from an attempted suicide, she told Marley to get a divorce. The suit followed.

Thelma Todd, actress, testified that as recently as last May, Miss Basquette threatened to slap Marley's face at a ball because he nodded to a woman acquaintance.

Miss Basquett's first husband was the late Sam Warner, of Warner Brothers motion picture producers.

His death several years ago led to disputes over custody of their four-year-old daughter, not yet settled. The child lives with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Warner, of New York. Harry Werner was a brother of Sam and is president of Warner Brothers.

FALLING OFF IN TRAFFIC THROUGH PANAMA CANAL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—(AP) — Revenue traffic through the Panama canal was said today by Colonel Harry Burgess governor of the Canal zone, to have fallen off sharply during the last three months as a result of the world-wide business depression.

The statement was made as he left the white house after a conference with President Hoover. Burgess added that the disturbed political situation in Panama had resulted from differences of opinion among members of the same party and said there was nothing acute about it.

Basing his estimate upon the revenues over the last three months, Burgess said he expected a decrease in canal revenues during the present fiscal year of about 1,000,000 or 1,200,000 tons as compared with the 1930 fiscal year. This would leave, however, he said, approximately $17,000,000 to be turned over to the government from operation of the canal.

Burgess discussed with the president budget plans for next year.

THREE MEN PERPETRATED "GHOST" HOAX IN MILFORD

NEW MILFORD, Sept. 10.—(AP)—The "ghost" who moaned, talked and sang this town to excitement for the past week and which drew hundreds of spectators from all over the state and New York to its home in the old warehouse during the past three days, suddenly stopped functioning today as three men were caught talking into a pipe which led to the warehouse from a tailor shop.

The hoax was perpetrated by employes of a restaurant owned by Gus Jones, of New Milford, to scare a new chef who came to work about a week ago. At first the ghost sounds were transmitted from a pipe in the rear room of a restaurant, but when crowds began to mill around the place both night and day the pipe was transferred to a tailor shop secretly one evening.

COMMUNISTS IN BERLIN DISPERSED WITH GUNFIRE

BERLIN, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Communist demonstrations started up all over Berlin tonight and in one of them, on the historic Wilhelmstrasse, the disturbers got rough with the police and were dispersed with gunfire.

The demonstrators marched up to the presidential palace, where they were met by the armed guards and warned to disperse. When they refused to do so, the police fired shots into the air and the communists took heed and left.

Police used their clubs freely at other points and arrested nearly 50 of the manifestants.

Senators Blease And Ransdell Defeated

Couzens Renominated—Dry Representatives In Michigan Are Hard Pressed

(By the Associated Press)

The primary pitfalls which ena[illegible] two democratic senators and thre[illegible] republican house members on [illegible] day were sidestepped yesterda[illegible] Georgia senator.

Seeking the democratic nomination which in Georgia assures election, Senator William J. Harris won an easy victory over former Governor John M. Slaton who had sought to re-enter public life after an absence of more than a decade.

At the same time new casualties from Tuesday's primaries were being arrayed beside the defeats of Senators Coleman L. Blease, of South Carolina, and Joseph E. Ransdell, of Louisiana, both democrats, Representatives Louis C. Cramton and Grant M. Hudson, of Michigan, and John F. Miller, of Washington, all dry republicans, were placed on the short side of the tabulations of their encounters with wets.

James F. Byrns, for 13 years a house member, was recorded as the victor in the South Carolina democratic senatorial primary, and Governor Huey P. Long, in Louisiana, State Senator Seymour H. Person and Jesse P. Wolcott, a Port Huron attorney, were placed ahead of Hudson and Cramton, respectively. In Michigan, Ralph A. Horr won over Miller. In both Michigan and Washington, other house members either were leading their opponents or had no opposition for renomination.

In Michigan Senator James Couzens had been renominated as had Senator Henry W. Keyes in New Hampshire. Both are republicans.

Colorado had selected George H. Shaw as the republican and Edward P. Costigan as the democratic candidate for the senatorial post to be vacated by Lawrence C. Phipps, republican.

Arizona had chosen George W. P. Hunt for the eighth time as its democratic candidate for the governorship now held by John C. Phillips, a republican.

In South Carolina, the democratic contest for the governorship was so closely contested by Olin D. Johnston and Ibra C. Blackwood that the prospect arose there would be a demand for a recount.

Other gubernatorial nominations included:

Michigan, Wilber M. Brucker, republican.

New Hampshire, John G. Winant, republican; Albert W. Noone, democrat.

Vermont, Stanley C. Wilson, republican; Park H. Pollard, democrat.

CONTEST IN THE POLISH CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES

WARSAW, Poland, Sept. 10.—(AP) — Shouting crowds milled in the streets today as Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, prime minister, minister of war, and "strong man" of Poland, began a political struggle with the opposition party in the chamber of deputies.

The first round was taken by Marshal Pilsudski who caused the incarceration of former Premier Witos and former deputies in the parliament. Political observers said this coup tended to paralyze the opposition's campaign in the elections set for Nov. 16. They said the opposition would speedily be rendered helpless if such arrests continued.

At first the opposition was stunned by the blow, but they recovered speedily. They first protested to the minister of justice that the arrests were illegal, inasmuch as the law permits incarcerations only by order of the court. The minister, however, replied that he was sorry, but could do nothing because the authorities had gone over his head in the matter.

Failing in this move, members of the opposition began public protests in Warsaw's streets. Small crowds paraded, singing radical songs, and shouting "Down with Pilsudski." Preparations were started for a big demonstration to be staged next Saturday.

Among those arrested were the organizers of the summer opposition congress in Cracow, at which resolutions were adopted attacking Marshal Pilsudski. The government began investigation on the theory that these resolutions were revolutionary, but parliamentary immunity of the deputies saved them from arrest for the time being.

MEMBER OF BYRD PARTY GUILTY OF DESERTION

READING, Pa., Sept. 10—(AP)—After Clair A. Dietrich, alias Clair D. Alexander, a member of the Byrd Antarctic expedition, had pleaded guilty to the charge of malicious desertion today, Judge Paul N. Schaeffer, of the Berks county court, suspended sentence and directed the defendant to pay $10 a week for the support of his two children, Robert, 8, and Rita, 7. He also was directed to enter bond of $1,000 to assure payment of the support order.

Dietrich was arrested in New York city after his wife, Mrs. Bertha Dietrich had recognized his picture in the Rotogravure section of a New York newspaper as a member of the Byrd party. He had left his family in 1922. In his return from the polar trip and before his arrest he married an Ashland girl and a bigamy charge is pending against him in Columbia county.

Drought Reflected In Monthly Crop Report

Shrin[illegible] of 229,058,000 [illegible] Last Month Indi[illegible] in Corn Crop

[illegible]SHINGTON, Sept. 10.—(AP)—The [illegible]est crop yields in 20 years or more, [illegible]cept possibly in 1921, was predicted by the department of agriculture today as weather reports continued to show large sections of the drought area still unrelieved.

Corn suffered another staggering blow from the excessive heat of August, the prospective yield falling off 10.4 per cent during the month for a prospective crop of only 1,983,000,000 bushels. As now forecast, the corn crop will be the smallest since 1901 and the first in 29 years to fall below 2,200,000,000 bushels. It will be 24.2 per cent less than the 1929 production and 26.6 per cent less than the five-year average. The actual shortage is estimated at more than 700,000,000 bushels.

Continuation into August of the record-breaking drought in most of the states affected in July and an extension of drought injury northward into states that had not previously suffered severely damaged a wide variety of late crops.

Prospects for potatoes were reduced by 84,000,000 bushels, hay more than 1,000,000 tons and serious declines were recorded for beans, grain sorghums, buckwheat and vegetables for canning. Important declines were shown for tobacco, flax seed, soy beans, cowpeas, sweet potatoes, sorgo and cane for syrup, broomcorn, grapes, cabbage and various northern vegetables.

NEW PHASES IN CASE OF MISSING JUDGE CRATER

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(AP)—A step toward an official investigation of the disappearance of Supreme Court Justice Joseph F. Crater was taken today.

District Attorney Crain asked Chief Magistrate Corrigan to sanction an open John Doe hearing into the circumstances surrounding the mysterious absence of the jurist since August 6. One of the objects would be to determine whether the missing judge is alive or dead.

Likelihood that the hearing would actually take place became questionable, however, when Magistrate Corrigan replied to the district attorney's request that he doubted whether he had authority to hold a John Doe hearing.

Meanwhile, the police, who have conducted a search for the missing man without direct authorization from the city, state or the judge's family, were baffled in attempting to follow the few contradictory clues available.

The mystery in Justice Crater's reported withdrawal of $5,150 from two banks just before his disappearance was heightened today by the assertion that the endorsement on a check for $3,000 is a forgery.

Mayor Walker announced today that he had requested a special meeting of the board of aldermen for the purpose of voting $5,000 as a reward to anyone supplying information as to the whereabouts of Justice Crater.

IMMIGRATION CONFERENCES ARE TO BE HELD IN EUROPE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—(AP)—The state department announced today that in carrying out President Hoover's wishes for more strict application of the immigration laws to aid unemployment, three consular conferences will be held in Europe within the next three weeks.

A conference at London September 22 and 23 will draw the consular officers in England, Ireland and nearby points on the continent. Officers from France, Germany, Switzerland, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Sweden, Hungary, Italy and Jugoslavia will meet at Stuttgart, Germany, September 26 and 27.

A third conference for the consular officers in Poland, Finland and Latvia, completing the plans for all large immigration centers in Europe, will be held October 1 and 2 at Warsaw.

The department announced also conferences would be held in Winnipeg and Vancouver, Canada, on Sept. 15 and early in October. Foreign Service Inspector Monnett B. Davis has been designated to attend the Canadian conferences, while Assistant Secretary Carr and A. Dana Hodgdon, chief of the visa office, will attend the three European conferences.

MAN FOUND LYING PARTLY IN WATER AT MYRTLE BEACH

MILFORD, Sept. 10.— (AP)—A man about 45, tentatively identified as Cornelius J. Shay, of Hartford, tonight lay in a semi-conscious condition in Milford hospital while physicians fought desperately to ward off a threatened attack of pneumonia.

The afternoon the man, fully clothed, was found lying partly in the water at Myrtle Beach, here. Miss May Downing, of Milford, who found him, notified police after vain efforts to revive him herself. After working over the man for half an hour with an inhalator, police succeeded in resuscitating him. An Elks membership card from Lodge 19, in Hartford, bore the name of Cornelius J. Shay.

Doctors at the hospital said the man's condition was critical. He had not yet recovered consciousness tonight sufficiently to identify himself or explain how he came to be at the beach.

400,000 CHINESE NATIONALIST TROOPS IN GREAT OFFENSIVE

SHANGHAI, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Hurling 400,000 troops against the northern war lords' forces in Honan province, the nationalist government today began a great offensive to end the rebellion which has menaced its existence since May.

Forty divisions of soldiers began converging toward Chengchow, rebel base. Moving northward along the railroad from Hankow, the nationalists hammered their way to within 100 miles of the strategic point.

Thousands of other government troops plunged westward toward Chengchow along the Haichow-Tungkkan railroad, crippled by weeks of floods. Wallowing in mud and splashing through water, the troops made little progress west of Kweiteh.

GOV. ROOSEVELT, N. Y., OUT FOR REPEAL OF FEDERAL DRY LAW

Had Been Silent For Five Years On the Question—Advocates Repeal of the 18th Amendment and Substitution of a Federal Statute Granting Each State the Right to Control the Sale of Intoxicants—Goes Further and Says States Should Grant Each Community Local Option On the Matter—Declares That the Time Has Come to Stop Talking and Seek Action

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 10.—(AP)—Governor Roosevelt today broke a two-year official silence concerning the prohibition question to announce himself for repeal of the 18th amendment and substitution of a federal statute granting each state the right to control the sale of intoxicants.

In a letter to United States Senator Robert F. Wagner, made public here, the governor included the subject of prohibition among the topics he believed should be stressed at the democratic state convention in Syracuse the latter part of this month and added he was "positive in saying that there must be some definite assurance that by no possibility at any time or in any place the old saloon can come back."

The governor urged that not only should states be given control of liquor but that there should be "definite recognition of the extension of home rule to the lower sub-divisions of government—in other words, a recognition of the right of cities, villages or towns by popular vote to prohibit the sale of intoxicants within their own borders."

The 18th amendment, the governor declared, "has not furthered the cause of a greater temperance in our population." He expanded this statement by quoting a resolution of the American Legion which said the law had "led to corruption and hypocrisy" and added the declaration "I personally share this opinion."

"So widespread in this state is the resentment against the results of the 18th amendment," the governor wrote Senator Wagner, "that the time has come to stop talking and to seek action."

The governor's expression of attitude had been awaited almost since the moment he took office on New Year's day, 1929.

The announcement was regarded with special interest in view of the frequent mentioning of his name in connection with the presidential candidacy for 1932. Although the governor has refused to comment or even indicate indirectly his intention to run for reelection this fall, such action has generally been presumed by both members of his party and republicans. His statement of attitude precedes any possible similar statement by a republican gubernatorial candidate, since the man most prominently mentioned by republicans, United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle, also has refrained from committing himself either on the candidacy or the subject of prohibition.

ITALIAN DELEGATE LEAVES THE L. OF N. ASSEMBLY

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 10—(AP)—The league of nations assembly celebrated the opening of its eleventh annual session today with accustomed formality, but the spot light of real popular interest played upon an empty chair.

This chair was abandoned by Dino Grandi, Il Duce's foreign minister, and its emptiness created something of a sensation among delegates and international observers.

On the eve of a definite explanation by Foreign Minister Briand of France of his "United States of Europe" plan which he is scheduled to deliver tomorrow before the assembly, Signor Grandi suddenly cancelled all his engagements and returned to Rome.

His automobile sped away from Geneva just an hour before the assembly session was opened by Cesar Zumeta, of Venezuela, president of the league council and ex-officio temporary chairman of the assembly.

Signor Grandi had been listed as the chief Italian delegate to the assembly, and the field of speculation was wide throughout the afternoon and evening.

He gave no explanation himself but delegated his powers to Senator Scialoja. Only late last night he cancelled an engagement for this afternoon to discuss the Franco-German question in the Saar basin with M. Briand and Dr. Julius Curtius, German foreign minister. Today he cancelled others.

The assembly elected as its vice-presidents today Arthur Henderson of England, Tsuneo Matsudaira, of Japan, Foreign Minister Briand of France, Foreign Minister Curtius of Germany, Quinones de Leon of Spain, and Costa de Rels of Bolivia.

TWO NEGROES LYNCHED IN MISSISSIPPI BY MOB

SCOOBA, Miss., Sept. 10—(AP)—County authorities were tonight without clues as to the personnel of a masked band of 15 men who today lynched two Negroes after forcibly taking them from two Kemper county deputy sheriffs.

The Negroes, Pig Lockett and Holly White, were being taken from Dekalb to Scooba for preliminary hearing on robbery charges when they were seized and hanged in trees.

The two deputies, Guy Byrd and J. J. Dotson, were tied to a tree by the masked band, but later released.

Lockett and White had been accused of robbing Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McCoy as the couple motored from California to their home in Athens, Ga. The McCoys were returning from a honeymoon trip.

SAILORS ARE CLEANING THE STREETS OF SANTO DOMINGO

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic, Sept. 10—(AP)—Sailors from the British cruiser Danae came ashore this afternoon, adopted the role of "White Wings" and, before night had made a decided change in the appearance of the streets of this hurricane-stricken city.

Clad in white and wearing their regulation cork helmets the seamen were assigned in squads to direct the work by local labor. They quickly tired of the part of directors, pitched in and moved vast amounts of the accumulated refuse which has been threatening to cause a serious epidemic.

The tropical heat soon caused the tars to become begrimed but did not halt their labors, while their junior officers, as bosses, remained spotless and natty.

The coming of American marines to join in the cleaning work, as requested by the president, tonight seemed uncertain.

His ship is similar to the one in which Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh made the trans-continental speed record recently beaten by Capt. Frank Hawks. Getting the Slates Ready

Notices have been posted for the republican and democratic caucuses to be held Saturday evening for the nomination of town officers for the election in October. The republicans have been hard at work on their slate this week and it is understood their ticket will be headed by Charles A. Kramer and George Standish for first and second selectman respectively and Joseph Dember is expected to be the G. O. P. candidate for tax collector. Mr. Kramer who is to come up for renomination has been first selectman for four terms, during which time he has been influential in reducing the town debt and in various ways has succeeded in cutting down the town expense. His conservatism and businesslike transaction of the town's affairs has won him popularity among members of both parties. With George H. Standish of the Westchester section of town as his running mate, the republicans feel that their ticket is one of the strongest in many years. Mr. Standish is a well known farmer in Westchester center and has a considerable following in that section. Joseph Dember, the G. O. P. prospective candidate for tax collector has been prominently affiliated with the local Jewish civic and social organizations and is a prominent summer hotel proprietor here. At a recent meeting of the Jewish voters he was unanimously endorsed for the office, and it is expected that his name will be accepted with favor at Saturday's caucus, as he is understood to have the backing of a large number of the townspeople who desire more effective tax collection. This strong line-up of candidates, coupled with the large number of eligibles to be made voters who are claimed by the republicans has the G. O. P. leaders predicting that their usual majority will be even bigger this year.

Democrats Are Not Idle

James F. Purcell of Meriden and Dr. Eugene M. Clifford of Hartford, members of the local democratic town committee have been here the past few days perfecting the democratic ticket for Saturday's caucus. It had been rumored that Samuel McDonald, a former selectman would be put up for first selectman this year but he is understood to have declined to run. Several other possibilities have been suggested by the democrats but it is understood the democratic defeats of recent years have disheartened some of the former aspirants. Latest reports disclose that the democrats hope to run Harold H. Bailey and Guy B. Clark for first and second selectmen, respectively, and Harold Clark is slated for renomination as tax collector. Mr. Bailey, manager of the Red Wing Lumber Co., here, is to move within a few weeks with his new bride into his new home in Hebron. He has a considerable following about the town. The probable candidate for second selectman, G. B. Clark held that office a number of years ago and he is credited with a big following in the Westchester district. Harold Clark is expected to be renominated for another term as tax collector. His party workers claim a big following for him in the Westchester section of town and also in the borough in view of his past record in filling the office.

There is much heated discussion daily now among the townspeople, over the relative prospects of the many different candidates slated for nomination. Bets on a 3-2 basis in favor of the republican ticket were being placed Wednesday by several of the residents.

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 10. — Death claimed Judge James N. Tucker at his home in East Killingly just before 11 o'clock last night. In his passing this town loses one of its outstanding citizens, a man it had honored in many ways on many occasions. Its people generally paused in respect to his memory today. Judge Tucker had been in failing health for the past two years or more, his ailments being incident to his advanced years. He would have been 82 years of age on October 8.

James Nelson Tucker was born on the Tucker homestead farm in East Killingly October 8, 1848. He was the son of George Ambrose and Betsy (Young) Tucker, and of a family, on the Tucker side, that first came into this section of New England, in the nearby town of Gloucester, R. I., in 1732.

Judge Tucker's education was obtained in the schools of this town, and upon completing his studies went to work with his father on the farm. Possessed of a keen, studious and analytical mind, Judge Tucker really was a student throughout his long life. He delved in the classics, in history and was fascinated by scientific works. He found real enjoyment in reading along almost any line that would add to his impressive store of knowledge. Little of the important things in the political activities of the past half century throughout the nation escaped his attention and careful review. In the later years of his life he rated the best informed man living on the history of the town of Killingly during the past 70 years. His mind was a veritable storehouse of information pertaining to the town, its people and its industrial development. He often had been urged to write a history of Killingly covering the period of his life, but seemed disinclined to undertake the task owing to his advanced years.

Significant of the high estimate his fellow citizens placed upon his ability and sterling worth is the record of the number of times they called upon him to serve in public office. As long ago as 1882, he represented Killingly in the legislature, serving on the committee on cities and boroughs. He was again elected as representative in 1890, and also was a member from this town in the famous deadlock session of 1892.

In 1897, he was appointed deputy judge of the town court of Killingly, and continued to serve in that capacity until October 8, 1918, when he reached the age of 70 years, and was automatically retired from the position under the operation of a state law.

For 20 years Judge Tucker served Killingly as a member of the board of assessors. He also had been a member of the board of relief, voluntarily retiring from that office two or three years ago. In every official position he filled Judge Tucker left a worthy record of faithful, intelligent service.

During close to half a century of his life Judge Tucker was a newspaper correspondent, chronicling in accurate and tersely interesting manner the weekly record of events in East Killingly, for the Windham County Transcript, and also for years for other papers. In 1915, he was named by the stockholders to be editor of the Transcript, and filled that position for two years, his editorials attracting widespread attention and eliciting much favorable comment. He continued his newspaper work until nearing his 80th birthday.

Nov. 5, 1871, at East Killingly Judge Tucker was united in marriage with Miss Almira Bartlett, a native of that community. Mrs. Tucker died a number of years ago.

Judge Tucker, a life-long republican, commanded the admiration and respect of citizens of every political viewpoint. They enjoyed his fascinating and colorful companionship. They liked his rugged honesty and clear-cut vision of life. They mourn his passing. He leaves no relatives nearer than cousins, nephews and nieces.

Last night, at the home in Goodyear, the death of Mrs. Christina Carrolla, 23, wife of Antone Carrolla, occurred. She had been in frail health for the past three years. Mrs. Carolla was born in Seekonk, Mass., a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Consalves Olivira, natives of Portugal. She leaves her husband, her mother, one sister and six brothers.

Flames that roared up toward the ceiling from the range in the kitchen of the Puritan restaurant about 9 o'clock this morning for a minute startled those who saw it into the belief that a really dangerous fire had gotten underway. It was squelched in a jiffy, however, by the use of a tank of chemical rushed over from the nearby railroad station by Rodney Lloyd. There was practically no damage from the fire, said to have been caused by grease suddenly blazing, and patrons out in the dining room continued with their meal.

The few members who attended the September meeting of the chamber of commerce at the Attawaugan hotel last evening discussed in informal manner plans for the meetings that will be held monthly during the fall and winter season. One suggestion that likely will be adopted is that some speaker be obtained for each meeting. These speakers will discuss some matter of general interest with which they are especially familiar. Last night's meeting was the first the chamber has held since early summer.

Rev. Albert Abbott, of the Danielson Methodist Episcopal church, conducted a funeral service for William Ryan at the Kennedy funeral home on Furnace street this morning and the body later was interred at Dayville. The service was a particularly lonely one, with no relative of the dead man there. It is possible that he has no relatives. He never told much about his life during the years he lived in this town. No one ever came to see him.

There was a lull in the political situation in this town today, as the citizens awaited the republican caucus at which that party's candidates for town offices will be nominated tomorrow evening. Thereafter, with both tickets made up, the campaign will get underway, and it promises to be the liveliest this year, as to electing selectmen, that this town has seen in a long time.

Armand Bussiere has purchased from Arthur Keith, of Putnam, a cottage on the north shore of Alexander's lake. Mr. Bussiere has as his guests there during the month of September, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bodo.

Leonard Bartlett, of East Killingly, is a patient at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam.

Unless there is some unforeseen development, the third voting district of the town will not be represented on the board of selectmen during the coming twelve months, and the second district may possibly have two selectmen.

Some Brooklyn residents have suggested that a red light be suspended over the intersection of the Danielson-Willimantic and the Canterbury-Pomfret state highways at Brooklyn Center as a precaution against accidents at this dangerous cross over.

Numbers from the official and business ranks of the town had planned today to attend the funeral of Judge James N. Tucker at East Killingly.

PUTNAM

ADAMS PLANT WILL BE SOLD AT AUCTION

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 10.—Of interest to people of this city was the announcement relative to the liquidation sale of the large Main street plant of the Adams Manufacturing Co., which will take place on Thursday, Sept. 25. The announcement of the sale of the mill has been expected in manufacturing circles for some time. About three months ago it was made known that the Adams company had decided to consolidate their manufacturing interests in one center and shortly would merge the Putnam plant equipment with that in the mills at Shelton, Conn. Removal operations have been underway throughout the summer months and at present the 60,000 square feet of floor space there is nearly cleared.

The plant is modern and is one of the largest in the city. Previous to its ownership by the Adams company, manufacturers of curtain and cloth screen materials, it was occupied by the Nightingale-Morse concern that disappeared through the process of liquidation some years ago. Although manufacturers are reported to be considering the purchase of the property, it was impossible to learn definitely whether or not the new owner of the property will be a manufacturer intent upon installing some nature of industry in the mill. Since the plant is an excellent proposition for investment, when the fact that several tenement houses and a number of square feet of land suitable for building lots is considered, it is likely that a group may seek to acquire the property in its entirety for speculation purposes.

STATE POLICE ON WATCH FOR MAINE KIDNAPERS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 10.—State police of Danielson and Groton barracks and police of every city and town in eastern Connecticut, have been called into a hunt for a kidnaper's auto as the result of a note dropped on the state highway in a section of Lewiston, Maine, Monday night by a girl, who in her missive stated she was a victim of a plot to kidnap her. Advising that the destination of the band was Connecticut, Maine police informed state police headquarters at Hartford and the word was immediately relayed to other police organizations in the state. A first report of the car being sighted came to Danielson barracks from police of Attleboro, Mass., yesterday, when an alarm from that city stated that a car bearing Maine registration 13098 was observed passing in a southerly direction towards Providence. Rhode Island state troopers and officers of the Danielson barracks maintained a careful watch of all the highways connecting this state with Rhode Island, but no trace of the reported car was found. Lieut Ross V Urquhart, commanding officer at Danielson barracks, said this afternoon that the vigil over the roads in the territory hereabouts is being continued by the officers, who are carefully checking all cars of a suspicious nature in hope of undoing the kidnaping plot.

The note referred to by police read as follows: "Help—help I am being kidnapped, I am with kidnapers from Canada. Think destination is Connecticut. Please do this quickly.—Lucille Berauex." Lieutenant Urquhart intimated that Maine authorities were unable to learn anything concerning the girl.

A fine of $25 and costs of court was paid by Louis Solari of 16 Emerald street, Medford, Mass. when he was found guilty of a charge of reckless driving this morning by Judge A. Macdonald, Jr. Solari was arrested late yesterday afternoon by State Officer Lionel Poirier of Danielson barracks, following his investigation of an accident occurring on the state highway between Danielson and Putnam at a point near the David Clark farm, which involved Solari's car and another owned and operated by William Shriber of 118 Locust street, Medford, Mass. Three were injured when the cars came together in a head-on collision. They were Shriber, the driver, and his father, William Shriber, Jr., and Bruno Gatti of Boston, all of whom were taken to the Day Kimball hospital for treatment.

In court Officer Poirier explained that the accident occurred, according to statements of witnesses, when Solari, who was traveling in a northerly direction toward Putnam, attempted to pass another car on the Clark curve. In cutting out of line, he was confronted with the oncoming Shriber car, and being unable to return to his position in the column of traffic, he swerved to the left of the road and smashed into the Winthrop automobile. Both cars were badly damaged as the result of the crash.

THE ELECTION IN MAINE

As was to be expected, the democrats are endeavoring to get a lot of consolation out of the election which was held this week in Maine. This isn't because any of the democratic candidates were elected, but because it is possible for them to point out that the successful republican candidates did not receive as large a plurality as President Hoover did two years ago.

Of course the democrats do not take into consideration that there is always a smaller vote in an off year election, and that there is always a smaller vote in the state election than in the presidential contest, the latter always bringing out voters who never think it necessary to go to the polls at any other time.

What is needed for a proper comparison is to take the vote of the previous off year state election in Maine, held four years ago. That shows that there was a slightly larger republican plurality, but on each occasion the state was concerned with state problems. There was as much of an endorsement of national policies as could be expected in any vote. In the contest for the senatorship in Maine, in that the republican candidate rolled up a much larger vote than did the republican governor, but even that could hardly be expected to approach the presidential vote or plurality.

Up in Maine there has been a rabid contest over the question of what that state shall do with the electric power that is generated therein. It has persistently clung to the idea that none should be exported, that all should be retained for the benefit of Maine industries, even though it is known that Maine cannot begin to use what can be produced. Trying to force industries to locate in Maine in order to obtain it has been the purpose of the policy, but that has meant and continues to mean a tremendous wastage of water power. Governor Gardiner believes that Maine should get the benefit it can from the power it can generate and export. He made a successful fight on that proposition. He encountered opposition of a substantial nature because the democratic candidate took a contrary view, but it is clearly evident that the small vote and the lower plurality given him than was given President Hoover cannot be attributed to national policies.

Judgment on Maine can best be reached when consideration is given to the fact that it elected a complete republican delegation in congress by good majorities with a light vote.

VERMONT ROADS

For the most part there is little difficulty in anticipating the outcome in Vermont elections. When there are contests within the republican party and the voters have to decide them in the primary, the situation may be a bit different, but Vermont seldom goes off at a tangent and it doesn't appear that it did this week.

While it was a question of selecting a candidate for governor that was before the voters of that state, the decision rested to a considerable extent upon the road construction policy which the three republican aspirants advocated.

Vermont is one of the states which can stand considerable road construction. It needs better permanent roads and it needs more attention for its gravel roads, but it doesn't believe that it should plunge into heavy debt and devote money which might be used for road construction to paying interest on road bonds. Rather is it convinced that the pay-as-you-go policy is the right one when it comes to building roads quite the same as for other expenditures. At least, that is the judgment rendered at the state primary contest in selecting as the republican candidate for governor the present lieutenant governor, who is committed to the policy of better roads, but building such roads within the means provided by the gasoline tax and such other outlays as may be met without bonding the state.

In making this decision Vermont turned down a candidate who urged a $10,000,000 bond issue, the money to be spent over several years and to be paid off in 20 years. It doesn't turn down better roads but it is unwilling to rush into burdens which it doesn't believe it should assume by mortgaging the future. It knows what it wants and it isn't to be stampeded into something else.

DRY AGENTS

Evidently it is the view of Director Woodcock of the prohibition bureau that if there is to be an enforcement of the dry law, and that is what is expected of him in that office, it should be done by men who are fully acquainted with the rules and regulations of the bureau. With that in mind he has established a teacher's training course for a couple dozen men who have been selected from various parts of the country in order that they may be taught lawful and decent enforcement. Having received this training and been able to pass examinations, thereafter it will be their duty to return to their respective districts and act as teachers for all those engaged in enforcement work.

There is plenty of objection to the dry law. There is objection to the manner in which it is enforced, and there are determined efforts being made to have the 18th amendment repealed and prohibition left to the respective states, or dealt with in some other manner than through an amendment to the Constitution. How soon there will be developments that will change the existing situation is uncertain, but it is apparent that enforcement must be undertaken in the meantime and, that being the case, it is important that those engaged in the work should be taught what "lawful and decent" enforcement is.

It will be recalled that there have been many cases of shooting in the course of enforcement. Some have been upheld. Others have brought rebukes from the prohibition bureau and the information that firearms are not to be used except for purposes of defense. Furthermore, the cars of enforcement agents must bear markers identifying their connection with enforcement activities.

As long as there is a question as to what should be done in meeting certain conditions there will be various interpretations given by the agents. If the school that has been opened will serve to eliminate conditions which have caused much criticism, though it cannot be expected to remove the general objection to the dry law, it will be beneficial to all concerned.

GOVERNMENT MACHINERY

Getting a reorganization of the government through the abolition or shifting of bureaus is more easily discussed than accomplished. At various times it has been pointed out that certain changes ought to be made, that the overlapping which exists ought to be overcome and that greater efficiency could be obtained if action should be taken. Such actual study as has been given to such a matter has not as yet been able to produce a plan that could get the necessary sanction. It is always easy to see where improvements could be made, but the removal of the political impediments is a different proposition.

Thus, when it is reported that Secretary Wilbur of the interior department has reached the conclusion that that department could be eliminated, a matter which will have to set forth personally before it will get very serious consideration, it is certain to face plenty of discussion and opposition, if previous efforts in behalf of reorganization can be used as a basis for judgment.

This department handles the business relating to the general land office, bureau of reclamation, geological survey, bureau of Indian affairs, bureau of pensions, office of education, national park service and certain hospitals and eleemosynary institutions in the District of Columbia. The secretary has general supervision of the government railroad in Alaska and certain powers and duties in relation to Alaska and Hawaii. This department was created 80 years ago, various duties being added from time to time, and in the meantime certain of the reasons for its existence have practically disappeared.

Should this department be abolished it would mean that certain of the bureaus would have to be transferred to other departments, a step which would involve no serious difficulty, but whenever efforts are made to junk or simplify government machinery there is always plenty of political opposition. Political effect rather than efficiency is the governing factor in the minds of many when it comes to making any such changes. If some have their way there will be more departments, instead of fewer, and yet those who are in close touch with the situation have long since urged different action.

THE UNPOLICED STREET

At a meeting of the board of police commissioners in New Britain this week the attention of the board was called to a complaint by a resident of that city that a policeman has not passed his door in 30 years.

In making such a statement it would seem quite important that a citizen should be sure of his ground. He ought to know what he is talking about, and it is possible that he does, for an explanation suggested was that the street in question was an intersecting one and the patrolmen might cover the ground by looking up and down it as they passed at the corner. Likewise, it is probably a peaceful neighborhood.

It doesn't appear that the resident backed up his complaint by claiming the failure of the policemen to make hourly trips through the thoroughfare had had any detrimental results. Rather does it appear to have been an expression on the part of those who pay the bill that the servants of the city had been confining their attention to a part instead of all the city and that those on the unvisited streets had been paying the bills without getting any visible results.

Such a situation would have been the cause for more serious consideration had it been possible to show that the residents of that street had actually suffered from the negligence complained of. Much of the sting is removed if it cannot be shown that any harm followed and it may be that those on the street which has been without police visitations for 30 years are anxious for someone to pass along in order to break the monotony of the peaceful situation. Though there is no threatened harm, there are always those who feel much safer if they know a policeman passes the house some time during the night. They seldom figure that crooks plan their activities when the police are on another part of their beat.

RESIGNED TO SPINSTERHOOD

"Have you decided on the bridesmaids' gowns inquired the girl in the forest-green hat with lizard pumps to match. "Because if you haven't here are some perfectly stunning—"

"They will not be needed. I am going to remain a spinster," decisively announced the prospective bride with the taffy-colored hair and the distracting dimples. "I returned Woodridge's ring last night, and I never want to see him again!"

"But what has happened?" asked the friend who had dropped in for a visit.

"What, indeed!" echoed the erstwhile engaged girl bitterly. "Woodridge had the colossal nerve to plead a business engagement at the last moment after I had that blue frock made especially for the Dramatic Artists' Guild charity ball, and when I remonstrated he stalked away in a perfect rage, as if I meant no more to him than an—an adding machine in his office.

"There are plenty of others who would jump at the chance of taking me—Hennessy Corbet, Tommy Pritchard and Pembrook Tanker asked me ages ago—but I don't want to go now. I hate m-men—the b-beasts—"

Her friend (who was in love and had practically captured her man) listened incredulously. "You really think old-maidship attractive?"

"There, I knew you would bring in that 'old maid.' Let me tell you, there is a great difference between a spinster and an old maid," replied the dimpled girl heatedly. She plumped herself down on the triangular and octagonal cushions piled on the modernistic divan and elucidated. "Somebody defined the spinster as one who had a proposal but refused it, while the old maid never had a bid to refuse. So, you see, I hardly come under the old-maid category," she pointed out a bit naughtily. The next instant she jumped up nervously and sat down again, apologizing, "Oh, I—I thought that was the telephone."

The lizard-shod visitor looked alarmed. "You aren't going to develop into one of those pathetic creatures like poor Miss Arnold, whose only thrill was driving out into the country week-ends to gather purple mushrooms and bittersweet for her Monday botany classes—"

"I," said the other loftily, "mean to sacrifice myself to the uplifting of the poor by doing settlement work in my spare time. When work becomes too arduous I shall travel abroad. Isn't the very freedom of doing what one pleases immensely appealing?" Her friend conceded that it was, and she continued to expound her theories.

"You know, the more I consider the serenity and comfort of spinsterhood the more alluring it seems compared to marrying a selfish brute—never mind, I don't care if he did give up his old alumni banquet to drive mother and me to the I. L. A. convention. Even being private secretary to crabby old Pegsaw is heavenly compared to spending the rest of one's days with a roaring lion.

"Think of the comfort of wearing flat-heeled oxfords and the pleasure of consuming innumerable calories without being in dread of losing one's man! I only hope to meet him ten years from now just for the satisfaction of seeing him register horror—he simply detests fat women and oxfords," and she vindictively dug the four-inch heels of her own smart suede slippers into the rug. "I'll show him that—" A faint preliminary "ting" reached her ears, and the girl with the taffy-colored hair and the distracting dimples fairly flew to answer the telephone. After some moments she returned to the room, laughing excitedly.

"My dear, it was Woodridge, and he does regard me more than a piece of office equipment! He was so contrite. The old darling confessed he invented that business engagement for tomorrow night to relieve him of the necessity of admitting he had applied too late for tickets to the ball. Now a friend who was suddenly called out of town gave Woodridge his tickets, so we're going after all. And we're engaged again!"

The girl in the forest-green hat with lizard pumps to match, recognizing the futility of reminding her friend of her recent dissertation on the bliss of spinsterhood, discreetly reverted to her original topic. "Now, what do you think of these perfectly stunning designs in chiffon velvet for the bridesmaids' gowns?"—Chicago News.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A Condition and Not a Theory

Mr. Editor: Frequently when I pick up The Bulletin, I notice the name of C. H. "Dad" Shaw, and the query as to what has become of him. Now I happen to be the individual in question and to this I will say, I have been and am now very busy due to the fact that I have many irons in the fire. Please note I said, I am busy, and surely this is an unusual condition during these strenuous times that we are facing, for there are many men out of work who would be willing to give a fair day's labor for a fair day's pay. The cause of this prostration in business is many sided, and one man's opinion is as good as another's, for we all grope around for an answer, and after you have made a theoretical analysis of the cause, you will wander around in circles and return to where you started and must admit you don't know. It is here and this much we do know—that it is a condition, and that it is caused by many contributing factors. One of the most prolific causes, say what you will, or take whatever stand you may, is this so-called 18th amendment. Where the national government is spending millions of dollars in futile efforts to enforce this unhappy law it would be better to suspend this act, at least temporarily, and use the money in public improvements and put the thousands of poor men to work who today are looking for work while their wives and little ones are actually in distress. We are now at this time enjoying the blessing of warm weather but the gloomy prospect of a long hard winter is facing the people and this is only just around the corner and then comes the time when it is hard and cruel. Those who have positions and are prosperous know little and they care less, and it can be said there is none so blind as him who won't see. I do not seek first hand information on this subject, for I have been doing welfare work for the past 28 years and if a man doesn't see many pathetic cases during that time he never will. I am not in this letter sowing socialistic propaganda, but I am trying to hand you the gospel of common sense. There are many poor; of course there are, and always will be. The Greatest Leader this world has ever known truly said: "The poor ye have with ye always." The most beloved American, perhaps of all time, Abraham Lincoln, had said: "God must have loved the poor people for he created so many of them."

I neither condone nor exalt this law, for it is written on the statute books of this, the most glorious country on the earth. But, when it runs counter to the welfare of the toilers there must be some fly in the ointment to create an unhealthy disturbance in the business world, and as a natural result create a chaotic condition in the ranks of the workers and be the means of causing unnecessary suffering and privation.

Perhaps someone who has studied this question from another angle will hand out a plausible answer but say what they may, there is at this time a serious condition confronting the people and not a theory. It strikes me that when people are hungry they don't want to sit down and read a treatise on how to keep vinegar from turning sour, but they want to put their feet under a table where there is plenty of bread and meat.

Now after you have read this far don't get the erroneous impression that I have one foot on the "brass rail." I realize that it is passing strange that now and then and then and mostly then, many gallons of demon rum are released from bonded warehouses, and what has me guessing is, where does it go? Who gets it? Of course some one in the know will rise up and tell me it goes to the hospitals to be used for medicinal purposes. Thanks for the advance information. Surely, then, there must be some "balm in Gilead," some merit in what is a good servant but a very bad enemy. Somewhere I have read you should love your enemy but I don't have to swallow it. Signing off here.

A Washington Bystander

Associated Press Staff Writer
By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10—Quite by chance, the Bystander stumbled over a clipping dating back to 1916 which had much of interest.

It purported to tell in his own words what the late Champ Clark of Missouri, the speaker of the house, thought about the speed at which legislative machinery ought to operate.

Clark was satisfied that all the work of a session could be put through in 61 legislative days—if certain things were done first.

The first of those was to cut down gallery space and reduce audiences to the minimum. The second was to abolish the Congressional Record.

No Gallery God

"It isn't difficult to see that the galleries and the Record cause an awful waste of time and money," the speaker said. "Any time that the galleries are full, the orators on the floor are posing and wasting time. And everybody knows that there are a great many members of congress who talk for the Record a great deal more than is necessary.

"The Record isn't necessary. The English house of commons has none. A journal is kept. Dr. Johnson used to keep it writing it up after a day's proceedings. He simply recorded who spoke and which side they were on."

Another scheme to expedite house proceedings favored by Speaker Clark was installation of voting machines.

It takes more than 40 minutes to complete a quorum call of the 435 members and around an hour to record a vote.

At one time a study of the possibility of setting up an electrical voting board with key controlled buttons at each member's seat was talked over.

That would have given any member a chance to know from the board on the wall how a vote was going before he recorded his own vote. No serious movement to put in such a device ever developed, however.

"I haven't much hope that I'd receive support if I started a fight for smaller galleries and no Record," Speaker Clark admitted in 1916; "but there is hope that the present method of taking roll calls will be abolished. It's archaic and a time waster."

And 14 years later it is still all of that and still the only means of finding out what the house thinks about anything. There would be a lot more nose counting on issues in the house if it was not for that trying process of calling the roll.

Lost Record

Incidentally, about the time Speaker Clark was recalling the English system of keeping a journal only of legislative proceedings, a missing link of proceedings of congress dating back to Jackson's administration reappeared.

It was the journal of the twenty-fourth congress.

A junk man offered to sell it to the clerk of the house.

He had bought it from a woman in whose family it had been for years.

YOUR HEALTH

Exercise And Its Relation To Health

By R. G. Clapp, M. D., Professor of Physical Education, University of Nebraska.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

When Surgeon-General Gorgas' statistics revealed that about one-third of the candidates for service in the World war were physically defective, it was unexpected and shocking news to the general American public but it was not news to the physicians on his staff whose duties included the making of physical and medical examinations of young men and boys.

This condition was due largely to lack of muscular work, and today, more ever before, regular, systematic exercise and physical recreation are absolutely essential to good health. In the early days necessary physical labor kept the individual fit, but today there are all kinds of mechanical devises invented to relieve men and women of physical effort, making it necessary to substitute some artificial form of exercise to replace the compulsory work of earlier generations.

The body is as strong as its weakest part, and if that part is the muscular system, which makes up about four-fifths of the bulk of the body, it is evident that this must have an important bearing on the general health of the individual. Inactive muscular system means poor, sluggish circulation to all parts of the body.

Just what are the most beneficial types of exercise for the average person and what factors should be considered in the selection of the best types of exercise? First and foremost, it must be interesting and pleasureable if it is to be most beneficial. From a physiological standpoint, certain kinds of exercise may be best for a certain individual, yet if he dislikes it and is keenly interested in some less desirable exercise, he will derive more benefit from the latter than from the former. Of course, common sense should be used in the application of the above. For example, it would be suicidal for a person with a serious heart lesion to participate in some very strenuous sport just because he enjoys this much more than some other mild and safe form of exercise. Every person should have a thorough annual or biennial medical and physical examination by a competent physician and receive expert advice as to desirable restrictions in the matter of exercise.

Notwithstanding some statements to the contrary, home "calisthenic" exercises for ten to fifteen minutes night and morning may be highly beneficial and may furnish all of the muscular exercise that one needs. However, this type of exercise should not take preference to a corresponding amount taken in open air and direct sunlight.

The most important rule of all regarding exercise is that every individual shall participate in some form of physical activity regularly and systematically. One hour of golf per day is more beneficial than the same total number of hours once per week. Develop exercise habits early, and in this respect compulsory exercise in colleges and schools is considered a step in the right direction. By the time the man or woman is engaged in the pursuits of the work-a-day world, he will have developed a liking for these activities and will continue them whenever possible. From this standpoint, the most desirable activities are swimming, tennis, golf, riding, etc.

The tendency of American people is to go to one extreme or the other in their exercise. We need more than anything else to develop a spirit of "sport for sport's sake" in our athletics and put the soft pedal on the idea that the individual in school or out is a failure who does not excel his colleagues. In this respect we might well take a lesson from our English cousins.

A program of moderate and systematic daily exercise and recreation will pay high dividends in improved health longer and happier lives, and increased physical and mental efficiency.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

The End of the Fight

Who puts his courage to the test,
Though he may lose, has done his best.
—Impy the Chipmunk.

There was nothing cowardly about Impy the black Chipmunk. This was his first fight and he was fighting an other Chipmunk who was bigger and older than he. Impy was getting rather the worst of it. Yes, sir, he was getting rather the worst of it. That was quite natural. The strange Chipmunk had fought many battles. Not only was he stronger than Impy, but he knew all the tricks of fighting. Over and over they rolled on the ground, biting, kicking scratching; every once in a while one or the other would squeal.

Now, there was a reason why Impy fought so long and so hard. That reason was little Miss Frisky. She was watching that fight and Impy knew it. He was fighting for her. He would have quit long ago had it not been that she was looking on. But the stranger was fighting for her too. Yes, sir, he was so. You see, he had fallen in love with her just as Impy had. So both were fighting for her and each was sure that if he could win the fight he would win her.

Impy was growing short of wind. He was getting very, very tired. Still he fought on. Presently he knew he was beaten. He knew that the stranger was too strong for him. He knew that when he got the chance he would have to run away. He couldn't bear to think of doing such a thing with little Miss Frisky looking on. But when it was a case of his very life there was nothing else to do. He knew that if he kept on the strange Chipmunk would kill him.

Presently the stranger paused for breath. He loosened his grip a little. It was Impy's chance. He made the most of it. He tore himself loose and was on his feet before you could wink an eye. Then Impy ran. Yes, sir, he ran. The other Chipmunk ran after him. Looking over his shoulder Impy saw that the other Chipmunk was gaining. Fear gave Impy speed. How his small legs did move! The next time he looked over his shoulder the stranger had stopped. Impy stopped then. He just had to. He needed a wee bit of rest. The strange Chipmunk said a lot of unpleasant things. He warned Impy never to come that way again. He told Impy that if ever he caught him again he would kill him. Impy said not a word. You see, he felt disgraced. He wasn't disgraced at all, for he had done his best; and no one who does his best is ever disgraced by failure. However, Impy felt that way.

The other Chipmunk ran after him

He ached all over. His coat was torn. He was a sorry looking Chipmunk. He wanted to get away somewhere and hide. He looked around hastily to see if little Miss Frisky was watching him. He didn't see her, but he did see the strange Chipmunk go swaggering along toward the place where he suspected little Miss Frisky was hiding. Poor Impy! You see, he really was very much in love with little Miss Frisky. It was bad enough to lose that fight, but it was worse to lose Miss Frisky; and he hadn't a doubt in the world that he had lost her.

"I'll go 'way off somewhere," said Impy to himself. "Yes, sir. I'll go 'way, 'way, 'way off. I just can't stay here. I'll give up my new home and go 'way off out in the Great World and make me a new home somewhere."

Then Impy sadly made his way home and crept down into the bedroom he had taken so much pride in. And there he licked his wounds and then curled up in his bed.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Manufacturers Foundry Company Waterbury.

The Manufacturers Foundry company was organized in 1900, and began operating as a grey iron foundry in Waterbury that year in a rented building. The original capital was $10,000 and the business for the first four years was that of a so-called general jobbing foundry. In 1904 the capital was increased to $50,000 and a complete new plant built on the present site. With the completion of the new plant the company began specializing in the production of water jacketed cylinder castings for automobiles. It was the pioneer of this line in New England.

Its first automobile manufacturing customer was the Electric Vehicle company of Hartford who were then making the Columbia automobiles. Within a year or two other car manufacturers were added as customers among which were the Steven Duryea company, The Pope Mfg. company, manufacturers of the "Pope-Hartford," Corbin Motor Vehicle company and Locomobile company.

This foundry also made the first cast iron air-cooled cylinder used in the Indian motorcycle. This was about 1907 and this company has been making the "Indian" cylinders continuously since that time.

About 1912 the company began to cast cylinders for the Curtiss Motor company of Hammondsport, N. Y., and supplied many thousands of these cylinders throughout the war years. These castings were used in the motors for the well known "JN" planes.

This company also has supplied for many years, and continues to supply, water jacketed cylinders for marine motors, including among its customers the makers of the Lathrop and the Palmer motors, both of which are Connecticut companies.

The Manufacturers' Foundry company today is the largest producer in New England of cylinder blocs for trucks, automobiles, aeroplanes, marine motors, etc.

As the business of the company expanded the capital was increased to $100,000 in 1909, $200,000 in 1918, and $300,000 in 1920. The present officers are:

Frederick C. Fromm, president; Carl T. Hardt secretary and treasurer; Robert C. Mills, production manager.

HOUSEWIVES HAVE CHANCE TO PUT UP FRUIT AT A PROFIT

Home-Canned Fruits Far Cheaper Than Those Bought Next Winter

Of all money-saving activities a housewife can engage in right now, putting up fruit promises most satisfactory returns. No special equipment is necessary and pure cane sugar and fruit are so low in price that a large quantity can be purchased without upsetting the weekly food budget.

When winter comes, the value of a cupboard well stocked with jellies, jams and preserves will be most apparent. Every glass or jar that you select for your table will be already paid for. What is more, you have a delicious home-made product that wins the praise of everybody.

Canned fruit belongs in the balanced diet. Most of them are rich in vitamins and decidedly appropriate for children.

Menu-planning, especially the dessert problem, is simplified when there are plenty of preserves within reach. A bit of sweet makes the meal complete. The Sugar Institute.

SUMMONS IN LEGAL WRIT MISLEADS MANY CITIZENS

Perhaps the judicial council will do something about it and alleviate the aggravating circumstances surrounding Connecticut's method of summons against a defendant in a civil suit.

The difficulty lies in the commanding summons in a civil writ which directs the defendant to appear in the superior court on the first Tuesday in the month to answer to Mr. Plaintiff and his complaint. This is a curious thing—a legal fiction—as in reality no one is expected to show up on return day and answer the complaint, but the populace does not know that, and the deputy sheriff has placed in their hands a writ which says they are summoned to appear before the court to be holden at Norwich, within and for the county of New London, on the first Tuesday of October, 1930, then and there to answer.

If the defendant lives in another state he may make the trip to be there on time, as he supposes, only to find that he has wasted time and carfare. Others sometimes appear at the courthouse who have lost a day's pay to obey the summons of the imposing court, and in some instances the person sued brings along a witness to refute the allegations of the complaint.

This is all lost time, lost money and lost complacency. The state, the county or the courts do not want the sued person at the court house on return days. The very obliging clerks of the superior court and the court of common pleas use their utmost tact in informing those who appear, that really it was not necessary; that all that the summons means is that the suit is in court the first Tuesday of the month.

No hearing on that day; oh no. It just means that the sued party has 20 days to appear in person, by mail or by having a lawyer enter his appearance, and then there are ten days or so more for filing an answer, but the suit will not be heard in the court until after the pleadings are closed, nor until one of the lawyers has claimed it for trial and a judge of the court has assigned it a date for trial.

And still the piece of paper that the deputy sheriff or other process server leaves in the hands or at the abode of the surprised and sometimes bewildered defendant summonses him to appear before the court to be holden at Norwich, within and for the county of New London, on the first Tuesday of the coming month, then and there to answer. Surely the judicial council can spend some time in drafting a form of writ summons that will mean what it says or say what it means to the none too well informed layman.

R. W. PERKINS INJURED WHEN AUTO CRASHED FENCE NEAR MIDDLETOWN

MIDDLETOWN, Sept. 10.— (AP) — Robert W. Perkins, of Norwich, vice president of the Connecticut Light and Power company was seriously injured today when his automobile left the Meriden-Middletown highway and crashed through a guard rail.

At Middlesex hospital here tonight it was said Mr. Perkins' condition was serious and his chances for recovery militated against by his age. He is 75.

John D. Bailey, truck driver of Middletown, driving toward Meriden this afternoon, said he noticed Mr. Perkins' car coming in the opposite direction. The automobile, he said, was toward the left side of the road. When he sounded his horn, he said the other car swerved sharply to the right. Apparently out of control, it continued on through a guard rail. A piece of the rail was hurled through the windshield of the car striking Mr. Perkins on the right temple with tremendous force.

The accident occurred on a curve in the highway between two reservoirs.

From the Middlesex hospital at Middletown Wednesday night the answer to a telephone inquiry was that the condition of Mr. Perkins was "fair."

Hospital authorities were unable to state whether there were any fractures or whether the x-ray was to be used this morning to determine further the extent of the injuries to Mr. Perkins, which were described as severe facial lacerations.

As quickly as possible after Mr. Perkins had been taken to the hospital about 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon word of the accident was telephoned here to the Perkins home at 60 Broad street and the family chauffeur took Mrs. Perkins to the Middletown hospital. It is understood that Mr. Perkins has been away on a vacation trip, having left here last Saturday and intending to be gone for a week.

He is one of the best known business men of the city, having been for a number of years president of the Eastern Connecticut Power company, now merged with the Connecticut Light & Power company, of which he is a vice president with his office headquarters in this city at 363 Main street.

NORWICH INN PERSONNEL AT MOONLIGHT PICNIC

Following a busy week-end, and taking advantage of the harvest moon, the personnel of Norwich Inn had a picnic supper on the William M. Ryan estate, opposite the Inn, Tuesday. The merry company of about 35 employes spent a delightful evening, which had been arranged by Manager Noble C. Miller, Mrs Miller, the social hostess, Princess Ethel Alferoff Alferieff, Steward Leonard Wright and Senor Jose Valades, the chef.

There was a feast of frankfurters, sandwiches, marshmallows, apples and coffee. Guitar and mandolin music was furnished by Vincenzo Macarione and Hugo Cassano. Old-fashioned New England games were played, and the superintendent of the Inn heating plant, Walter S. Skelly, built campfires over which marshmallows were toasted, Mrs. Skelly assisting with this. The romantic and historic surroundings, on this hill overlooking Trading Cove, where the earliest settlers of the town of Norwich came to "trade" with the Mohegan Indian tribe and their famed Chief Uncas, as well as the fine spirit of co-operation prevailing among the employes of the Inn made the evening one of special enjoyment. The talent of many among the personnel was brought out by means of impromptu stunts and clever acts, which added to the general entertainment.

STONINGTON UNION BAPTIST SCHOOLS IN CONVENTION AT JEWETT CITY

The 73rd annual meeting of the Stonington Union Baptist Bible school convention was held at the Jewett City Baptist church on Wednesday, with an all day and evening session, and an attendance of 125.

The presiding officer was the president, Charles Zabriskie, of Preston. The devotional service was led by Rev. John A. Smith of Preston City with prayer by Rev. A. R. Hylan, of Poquonnock Bridge. Rev. E. E. Scates, pastor of the church, read the letter of the Jewett City Bible school and welcomed the convention most cordially, Mr. Zabriskie responding. Rev. George A. Atha, of Groton, secretary of the convention, at this time said that the programme committee had decided that the topics to be considered as vitally necessary should be, educating the young people in the exercise of prayer, and also daily vacation Bible schools and camps.

The morning address was given by Dr. W. J. Sly, pastor of the Third Baptist church of Norwich. His subject was Building the Prayer Life. He based his remarks on the book Training the Devotional Life, which he said he wished every teacher would read. He enlarged on five essentials—Early training in teaching children to pray, correct habits of prayer, example, to pray with faith, sincerety, earnestness and perseverance, and the practice of intercession. It is a mistake to teach children to pray for themselves only. He quoted the Salvation Army prayer "When I pray, may my prayers be for others" as a model. Not that we should not pray for ourselves, but not ourselves alone. What we need more than anything else is the intercessory side. The world is full of unused power, and in the spiritual realm the greatest unused power is prayer. Later, Dr. Sly spoke on this particular book more specifically. The second chapter, treating on prayer in the home, the third, in the Sunday school class, the fourth, on family prayer. He said there were four parts in every prayer, A-C-T-S—adoration, confession, thanksgiving and supplication.

The offering was received by Messrs. Robbins and Griswold. The secretary read the letters and statistical reports of the 16 Bible schools of Stonington Union. They were from the Groton First Baptist or Old Mystic, Groton Heights, Laurel Glen at Clarks Falls, Union Mystic, Noank, First Baptist North Stonington, Second North Stonington, Third North Stonington, Packerville, Plainfield Union at Moosup, Poquonnock Bridge, Preston City, Sterling Hill, Stonington, Voluntown and Jewett City. The total attendance for the year was 1,527, total average attendance, 933; a gain of 25.

The sum of $815.58 was contributed for missions as far as recorded, the average attendance was 60 per cent. 93 were perfect in attendance, 724 church members are in the Sunday schools, 238 on the cradle roll, 210 members of the home department, and there were 64 baptisms of Sunday school members. Rev. Mr. Scates gave notices for the dinner and supper and also called attention to the many points of interest to be visited near the church. The closing prayer and benediction were by Rev. Frank Robbins of Preston City. A delicious dinner of baked beans, sliced home-cooked ham, beef loaf, escalloped potatoes, cole slaw, pickles, rolls, apple pie, cheese and coffee was served in the vestry.

Afternoon Session

The afternoon session was opened with a devotional service conducted by Rev. P. W. Back, of Stonington. The chairman appointed as nominating committee Rev. E. E. Scates, Jewett City; Rev. Mr. Wise and Miss Gertrude Brown of Noank. John MacLean, of Jewett City, gave a bit of Christian experience which was very interesting and convincing and then sang The Man of Gallilee.

Present Day Trends in Christian Teaching was the subject of an address given by Rev. O. P. Campbell, state secretary, of Hartford. He said the central thing is simply sharing the experience of life with others, what technicians would call creative teaching, the experience center method. Methods and materials and organization must be in this line of business we call teaching. The greatest institution of teaching is the home and the greatest teachers are the parents. Also the use of the Bible is coming into its own. Teachers should be concerned with making the experiences of the Lord Jesus Christ on the level with children's lives. The church is teaching as well as preaching. Teaching should be prepared with newer and better methods. Aren't we going to be accountable for indifference to Bible school teaching of boys and girls?

Mrs. Jennie R. Dixon, of Waterbury, spoke on The Thing We Call Teaching, giving several vivid and true pictures of the haphazard and careless teaching in many classes. She asked three questions: Why are the children coming; what are they getting and what do we want them to get? She said there were three kinds of teachers—One who is remembered and loved for inspiration and help in Christian living; one who is remembered and forgiven for things failed to be done, and the other one who is forgotten, which she considered worse than being hated. The lessons should be built around children's experiences. Know the pupils, their homes and the materials to be used. Challenge them to think. Talking is not teaching. Our problem is to get the mind of our pupils working "on high." Her answer to how to bring it about were: Myself, material and the place in which I teach. Use Bibles, good songs, the honor standards and magazines. Be sincere, love the class, be regular in attendance and on time.

A conference for teachers of young people and adults was led by Rev. Mr. Campbell and for workers with children by Mrs. Dixon, who had many helpful materials on exhibition. Supper was served in the vestry at six o'clock.

The devotional service in the evening was led by William Pratt, Olin Miller and Alfred Bennett from the Union Baptist church of Moosup. Rev. Percy A. Kilmaster, of Norwich, spoke on Daily Vacation Bible schools. Rev. Mr Campbell gave a talk on Summer Schools and Camps, which was illustrated by stereoptican views. There was a special musical programme with organ selections, the prelude being Slavonic Cradle Song, the postlude, Marche Romaine, by Miss Ellen Prior; a solo, For You, by Jean Wilbur and a solo, Open the Gates of the Temple, by John MacLean.

The officers re-elected were: President, Charles C. Zabriskie, Preston City; vice president, William I. Spicer Noank; secretary and treasurer, George R. Atha, Groton; auditor, W. A. Fraser, Noank. The beautiful display of dahlias was from the Cinev Watson garden.

BROOKLYN AGAIN CUTS INTO LEAD OF CUBS BY BLANKING THEM 6 TO 0

BROOKLYN, Sept. 10—(AP)—For the second day in succession, the Chicago Cubs were shut out with five scattered hits by Brooklyn pitching and tonight the National league leaders found their grip on first place reduced to one game and a half over the Robins and the St. Louis Cardinals.

Adolfo Luque, 41-year-old Cuban veteran, followed in the footsteps of the youthful Ray Phelps to win the second of this three-game series by the score of 6 to 0. In addition to five hits, Luque yielded four bases on balls, but great support, including three double plays, kept Chicago's score at an irreducible minimum.

The game was decided in the first inning when the Robins lit into Charley Root with a savage assault that yielded five runs. The sudden and furious attack sent Root to the showers before he retired a man in the first inning. Frederick and Gilbert singled to launch the rally. Herman doubled, scoring Frederick, and Wright hit a line single to score Gilbert and Herman. With Bissonette's double, Jess Petty stepped into the breach.

Rube Bressler, Brooklyn left fielder, had dislocated a finger making a play in the first half of the frame. Hendrick batted for him and lined Petty's first pitch over Blair's head for a double, scoring Wright and Bissonette.

Petty pitched shutout ball for seven full innings before he was taken out for pinch-batter Hornsby in the eighth, but the Cubs over that stretch could make no impression on Luque, who never let the leaders get started on a dangerous rally. Double plays in the fifth, sixth and seventh innings helped him out of trouble.

Nelson, pitching the eighth inning, was the victim of Brooklyn's sixth run, the product of singles by Herman and Wright and Bissonette's infield out. The score:

AGGIE FOOTBALL PRACTICE WILL START THIS AFTERNOON

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Sept. 10—Members of the Connecticut Aggie football squad are scheduled to report for their first practice of the season here tomorrow. It is expected that approximately 30 men will show up during the forenoon to receive equipment. In the afternoon Coach Sumner A. Dole will put his squad through its initial workout.

It was anounced here today that Pinky McCombe, Hartford youth and pitcher on last year's baseball team, and Dan Chubbuck, track star, may be available for use on this year's eleven. McCombe played in the backfield during his freshman and sophomore year and is rated as one of the best defensive backs that ever played on an Aggie team. He was unable to play football last fall because of an injury he received in baseball the previous spring. Chubbuck played tackle during his first two years in college but did not play last year because of an injury received in basketball. In spite of his 200 pounds of weight he is regarded as one of the fastest men on the squad, holding the school record for the low hurles and the unofficial record for the hundred yard dash. Both McCombe and Chubbuck are considered valuable assets to the football squad and it is believed that they will see much service during the coming season.

Charley Murphy, captain of this year's gridsters, has already returned to college and is looking forward to a successful season. He has done outstanding work for the past three falls in the backfield and will lead his term from the position of halfback this year.

With practice beginning tomorrow, Coach Dole will have fourteen days in which to select and drill his team which will face Albright college at Reading, Pennsylvania on September 26.

AMERICAN POLO TEAM RETAINS INTERNATIONAL CUP

INTERNATIONAL FIELD, Westbury, N. Y., Sept. 10—(AP)—With a surging rush as impetuous as anything the famous light brigade ever put on, the "big four" of American polo galloped out of the ruck today and put to rout the finest British challenge mustered since the war.

Trailing after five periods of hard-fought, sensational polo, Captain Tommy Hitchcock's white-clad riders staged a come-back that broke up the Anglo attack, produced a free-scoring barrage in which Eric Pedley shot goals from all parts of the field, and clinched the match by the decisive score of 14 to 9.

It was the second straight triumph for the United States and clinched possession of the classic international cup, emblem of world polo supremacy, for the fourth successive time since the war. The American won the first match by 10 to 5 last Saturday and settled the issue today in spectacular fashion without the necessity of a third contest.

BASEBALL CHATTER

Wonder if the third game of the inter-city series Saturday at the campus is going to be as good as the first two ...... it will have to go some ...... the fans have seen some real baseball in those two tilts ...... Coach Earle E. Brigham when he leaves in a couple of weeks for his new position as athletic director of the four high schools at Worcester, takes with him the well wishes of his former charges to a man .... they all liked him and believed in him and are sorry to see him leave ...... His wonderful record of 107 victories and only 27 defeats in his seven years as Academy baseball coach speaks for itself .... when he came here there was nothing at the campus but the bare field and an old clubhouse .... now what have we, only bleachers to seat 1,500 or 1,600, and scoreboard, flagpole, a new fieldhouse, which was donated by Charles F. Noyes, an alumnus, after the Wildcat baseball teams had made such a good record ...... in addition, baseball has carried track along, in fact, baseball has been the only sport to make money or even break even at the school of recent years .... still another improvement due to baseball was the forming of the school band .... the Academy's going to miss Brigham, no doubt about that .... Hobe Ferris, the former local star, who went up to the big leagues from the old Norwich team of the State league, came east from his home in Detroit for the old-timers game in Boston on Monday and has visited both in Central Falls and in Taftville .... Hobe first shone as an athlete when he played roller polo in North Attleboro, R. I., some 30 years ago .... then he started in at baseball and within a year or so was starring with the Attleboro team .... he came to Norwich and soon after was up with the Red Sox .... Ferris, it might be mentioned, was a pitcher and was the hero of one of the longest games in history, a 24-inning contest in which he went the full route ...... this happened about 20 years ago .... the umpiring in the two "little world series" games here has been very good .... Hank Morin and Joe Cranker handled the game here Labor day and Cranker and Bill Teller the one in New London .... it will without doubt be Hank and Cranker again Saturday ...... when Boots Greene started to the mound to pitch Sunday, some New London fan yelled "Bulkeley wants to see you, Boots" but after Boots and Tony West had got in their work, little more was heard from these quarters .... there's talk of night baseball in the city for next year but only talk ...... it is said that it will be run in Taftville .... there are also whisperings that Hartford will have an International league franchise in another year .... in a recent interview in Boston Connie Mack made it known that he considers Danny Murphy, former Norwich league star, is the next best outfielder to Al Simmons that he has ever had under him ...... because of his work at Holy Cross, Ownie Carroll seems to interest Norwich people about as much as any of the ball players .... his return with the Reds excited interest Tuesday .... maybe he'll come through this time.

AMATEUR BOXING CARD AT NEW LONDON FRIDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 10—According to an announcement made last week by the Thames Arena officials, amateur boxing, long inactive around these parts, will be revived again and shows will be presented bi-weekly on Friday evenings, the first presentation now being made for Friday night. Dick Gray, who has been matchmaking these simon pure-punching parties in New Haven and Hartford for the past few seasons successfully, will have charge of lining up the cards.

For the first show which is to go on at the Arena this week, Gray will have a team of New York's leading amateur chin thumpers on deck and ready to do their mixing with boys who will be imported from Danielson, Westerly, R. I., Waterbury, Norwich, New Haven and New London.

NORWICH GOLFERS AT WILLIMANTIC ON SATURDAY

The golfers of the Norwich Golf club will play a return match with the Willimantic club at the Willimantic Country club course on Saturday afternoon. In the match here last Saturday Norwich was victorious by a score of 53 to 18 and the Willimantic boys are busy this week taking lessons from Barney Gunshinan in hopes of taking over the local mashie wielders. Any of the Norwich members who wish to play in the match should notify Earl Mathewson, chairman of the tournament committee before Friday noon.

Worcester Town Talks at Jewett City

Sunday afternoon at Ashland park in what promises to be the best game of the season, the Ashland club takes on the Worcester Town Talks, one of the fastest semi-pro team in New England.

DeYoung, Ashland's imported pitcher, (who last Sunday against the Colored Giants struck out 8 out of 9 men to face him), will have to be at his best to turn back the hard hitting Worcester sluggers.

The Ashland management will present the strongest lineup in an effort to win.

Fancy Corner has been bitten by the golf bug.

This little section of the town seemed the last place in the world to become inoculated with the golfing germ. But strange as it may seem the golf craze is sweeping through the Corner in epidemic proportions.

To you, who are not familiar with Fancy Corner and its denizens, this may be no cause for wonder, but to those who know their Fancy Corner it's nothing short of miraculous.

In the bygone days the talk about the Corner was of baseball, football and boxing, and he who even broached the subject of golf was considered a fit candidate for the old ladies' home or was decidedly effeminate.

And he who played this "game for old men and women," as it was called then, was someone to be laughed at and held up to ridicule. Golfing togs were the clothes of the sissy in the eyes of Fancy Corner and he who appeared in knickers was the target of abuse such as only Fancy Corner can give.

But today this is all changed. You wouldn't know the old Corner now. The names of Horton Smith, Bobby Jones and Leo Diegel are heard as often as those of Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb and Rogers Hornsby. The talk is of mashies and niblicks instead of bats and six-ounce gloves. When you hear some bronzed lad speak of a hook it's a ten to one bet he's talking of golf and not of baseball or boxing, as in the days of old.

Yep, the little golf bug has been active as a flea on a cat. He's bitten this one and that, here and there, and they've stayed bitten, too. Where once you saw the boys ambling along with bats, and gloves and baseballs, you see them toting golf bags and clubs. They've got the fever.

There's Minnow Beauregard, who you remember flashed across the fistic firmament in a short meteoric career, with his bag of clubs; there's Eddie base for the Velvetmen, practicing pitch base for the elvetmen, practicing pitch shots; and there's Blair Cormier, who instead of telling the boys about the big trout he almost caught, is rehearsing the tragic tale of the birdie he missed.

Then there's Freddy Erlbeck, who used to manage a baseball team, but is now arranging for a golf tournament. Yes, all the regulars about the Corner have been bitten. Others who have succumbed to the golfing urge are Jerry Headon, Nippy Beauregard, Jimmy Murphy, Arthur Patinaude and many others who once thought golf was on a par with tiddley winks.

Yes, the old Corner has changed.

SINGER GIVEN GOOD CHANCE TO BEAT MCLARNIN

NEW YORK, Sept. 10—(AP)—Hungry for glory and recognition as a genuine champion, young Al Singer, baby ruler of the 135 pound division will battle Jimmy McLarnin, toughest of the welterweights, in a ten round match tomorrow night in the Yankee stadium. The fight faithful, often fooled by ring "naturals" in the past that produced more yawns than action, warmed slightly today to the duel of the Jewish boy and the Irish welter.

Pleasant weather and the growing belief that the 20 year old Singer had almost an even chance to win brought lengthier lines to the Madison Square Garden ticket windows and the prospect of a $125,000 gate.

Singer came to town from his training camp at Delaware Water Gap, Pa., in splendid condition, weighing about 135 pounds and supremely confident that he can whip the rugged Vancouver lad.

McLarnin, campaigner in every division at one time or another, from the flyweights to the welters and conqueror of half a dozen champions before and after they won their titles but never at weight, has little idea that Singer will cause him trouble. McLarnin, for his size and inches, is the best two handed hitter in the ring today. He thinks Singer will last three rounds at the most against him. McLarnin will weight about 141 pounds.

Although McLarnin has ruled a 2 to 1 favorite in light betting since the match was made, the confidence of Singer and his fine condition have brought a switch in the odds. Jimmy was still the favorite today but the odds had shrunk to 7 to 5 and 6 to 5.

SHIELDS PROVIDES THRILL BY UPSETTING ALLISON

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 10.—(AP)—Frank Shields, the New York boy with the build and strokes of a champion, provided the big thrill of the fourth day of the national tennis singles championship by upsetting Wilmer Allison in a great five set match decided by scores of 6-4, 4-6, 6-2, 1-6, 6-3.

For two or three years now the fans and the players have been hailing Shields as the boy who could be king if he would make the effort and today the stalwart Shields hit the peak of his brilliant game to eliminate the player who was seeded second only to Big Bill Tilden on the list of leading contenders.

DIEGEL ELIMINATED IN P. G. A. TOURNEY BY SHORT-DRIVING CALIFORNIA PRO

FLUSHING, N. Y., Sept. 10.—(AP)—Harold Sampson, a tall, slight Californian, who cannot hit a golf ball very far, but is very, very straight, today had his hour of golf glory when he removed the champion from the Professional Golfers' association championship in the second round.

Sampson defeated Leo Diegel, one up, although he had to go 38 holes to turn the trick. The 25-year-old pro of the Burlingame Country club sent a 12-foot putt spinning home for a birdie three at the second extra hole and the man who has been champion for two years, and always a threat in this classic competition, was eliminated.

Sampson, who has had three great golf tutors, George Smith, MacDonald Smith and John Black, led Diegel by a hole as they came to the 36th but the champion squared the match there, and a majority of the gallery thought the native son was finished.

Gene Sarazen, who remained in the hunt with a smashing victory over Bob Crowley of Haverhill, Mass., today, seven up and five to play, now is the only former champion left. Sarazen has won twice. Jock Hutchinson, Walter Hagen, Jim Barnes and Diegel are the other great pros who have the crown.

The other survivors are Charles Lacey, who defeated Al Watrous, five and four; Tommy Armour, victor over Bob Shave, Cleveland, seven and five; Johnny Farrell, who barely nosed out Denny Shute, Columbus, one up; Al Espinosa, who eliminated Harry Cooper, four and three; Joe Kirkwood, who was carried to the 37th hole before he could dispose of Jock Collins of Dayton, Ohio, and Horton Smith, who downed Laurie Ayton, Evanston, Ill., five and four.

The elimination of the champion stunned the crowd. Although Sampson has been prominent in Pacific coast golf for years, his greatest fame in the game has been as a teacher.

Diegel heartily congratulated the victor and told him if he had more strength he would rank with the greatest golfers in the business and that was a funny thing to say to a man named Sampson.

"My trouble," the champion continued, "was that I softened up at the close. I should have kept on murdering the ball. That's the only way to play. You can't steer that ball and get away with it."

Tomorrow's play will array Sampson against Lacey, Armour against Farrell, Sarazen against Espinosa and Kirkwood against Smith.

CARDS STAGE 8TH-INNING RALLY TO BEAT GIANTS

NEW YORK, Sept. 10—(AP)—Scoring four runs in a stirring eighth inning rally, the St. Louis Cardinals evening their "crucial" series with the Giants with a 5 to 3 victory in the second game today and moved a step nearer the league leading Chicago Cubs. As Chicago was defeated by Brooklyn, the Cards remained in second place only 1 1-2 games behind the league leaders but only one point ahead of the third-place Robins.

The game was another brilliant mound duel with Big Fred Fitzsimmons holding a slight margin over Sylvester Johnson up to the eighth. Then four hits, of which the last and deciding wallop was a home run by Jim Bottomley with Adams and Frisch on base, overcame the slim Giant lead, gained when Frank Hogan hit a homer in the sixth, and decided the game.

Except for the two homers, the game was a drawn battle in which the Cards made only eight hits and the Giants nine. New York went ahead in the first inning on singles by Critz and Lindstrom, an infield out and a force-out at second which allowed the little second baseman to score.

Singles by Gelbert and Douthit in the third, with a walk which sent Gelbert to second, enabled the Cards to tie the score in the third frame. Hogan's homer into the left field stand after Lindstrom had singled and Ott had forced him in the sixth, gave the Giants a lead that looked big enough to win the game until Bottomley clouted his four bagger two innings later.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10—(AP)—President Hoover was invited today by Mayor Harry A. Mackey, of Philadelphia, to attend one of the world's series games which he expects to be played there.

It was considered probable at the white house today that if Mr. Hoover were able to attend, he would go to the opening game October 1 at Philadelphia, should the Athletics win the American league pennant.

Meanwhile the Red Sox jumped on Urban Faber for a run in the second when Webb hit a home run, added another in the fourth and iced away the game in the fifth when Bill Regan hit one of the longest home runs of the year with two men on the base paths. Moore pitched well after that, fanning the side in the seventh. The score:

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 10—(AP)—The St. Louis Browns climbed back into sixth place in the American league today by turning the tables on the Washington Senators 3 to 2.

Washington's berth in second place was undisturbed. The Browns scored two runs in the second when Ferrell doubled to left center with two men on bases. Their other run was made in the sixth. The Senators scored a run in the fifth and one in the ninth. The score:

TIGERS BLANK ATHLETICS WHEN ROOKIE HITS HOMER

DETROIT, Sept. 10—(AP)—The Tigers blanked the Philadelphia Athletics 4 to 0 in the series' closer here today, due in part, to the efforts of Frank Doljack, a recruit from Wheeling, W. Va.

With the score 1 to 0 for the Tigers, he hit a home run in the fourth inning, scoring two men ahead of him, to give Vic Sorrell a comfortable lead. The extra runs were not exactly needed, for Sorrell held the Athletics to four hits, no two of them coming in the same inning.

Bill Shores was found for four hits in the four innings he held forth. George Walberg allowed but one hit for the remainder of the game. A triple by Gehringer drove in the Tigers' first run. The score:

FERRELL UNABLE TO HOLD YANKEES WHO WIN 7 TO 2

CLEVELAND, Sept. 10—(AP)—Wesley Ferrell was unable to get back into his winning stride today in his first game after the break of his 13-victory streak and the New York Yankees found him for eleven hits and a 7 to 2 victory. The Yankees, in frustrating Ferrell's aim to boost his total victories to 25, took his measure for the third time this season.

Henry Johnson pitched a steady game, granting eight hits, and rose to the occasion whenever danger threatened. Loose playing by the Indians in the third and fourth innings got Ferrell in trouble and paved the way for four Yankee runs. Ruth, Chapman and Porter led the day's slugging with three hits apiece. BILLINGS SCORES QUICK KNOCKOUT OVER YOUNG

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, Sept. 10.—Gene Billings, a sensational Goodyear fighter, just about knocked the ears off Eddie Young, of Worcester, in the course of the first round of the star bout of the last open air show of the season in the North street arena tonight. Billings was in fine physical form and fought at top speed. Young had no chance at all against the battering-ram attack which Billings directed against him and Young on the floor went out of the picture after two minutes and 51 seconds in the first round.

Patsy Flynn, of Worcester, beat up Jack LeBrun, of Warwick, R. I., so badly that the bout ended in the third round. Flynn weighed in at 150 and LeBrun at 161. LeBrun was forced down for a count of nine in the first round and took two counts of nine in the second round. In the third round Flynn had LeBrun down again so promptly that there was nothing to it at all and the Worcester boy was awarded the decision by a wide margin.

Young Plasse, of Webster, 129, beat Anselm Bernier, Danielson, 127, by decision after a fast, hard and very even bout which went the three round limit. This makes it a 50-50 shot between this pair, Bernier winning a decision over Plasse a few weeks ago.

Kid Tourney, of Webster, 110, beat up Paul Jones, Worcester, 109, so badly as to win by a technical knockout after two minutes and 45 seconds of the first round.

William Leo, Danielson, 131, won by a technical knockout after two minutes and 40 seconds of the second round over Gene Moore, Worcester, 131. Leo, a Killingly high school student, achieved his second victory in the two starts he has made as an amateur.

Gene Levesque of Warwick, R. I., 137, won from Kid Cassavant, Webster, 139, by decision at the end of the third round. This was a fiery bout, crowded with action from beginning to end.

Ray Landry, 123 pound Danielson boy, again beat Leo Paradis, 123, of Moosup, at the end of the three round bout which was rather tame and not too filled with action.

The preliminary was between Young Robitaille, 115, Danielson, and Billey Edwards, 117, of Worcester. Robitaille did very little fighting and in a slow bout Edwards was given the decision.

There will be no more open air bouts here this season. The next amateur fights will be put on in the town hall in October.

The Ideal of a Craftsman

In every age men have striven with untiring patience for the achievement of an ideal. The name "STRADIVARIUS" on a violin immortalizes a master craftsman who lived true to his ideals.

Making a cigar of the finest quality was the ideal upon which in 1874, at Manchester, N. H., Roger G. Sullivan—starting with one cigar maker—founded 7-20-4. Today because of its ideal quality, 7-20-4 has grown to the largest hand-made cigar industry in the World.

Quality workmanship and the finest tobaccos are traditional with 7-20-4. The unswerving tenet of its founder—to keep faith with the public—has remained unchanged for over half a century. It is this firm principle which today refuses to alter that method of manufacture which has made 7-20-4 Cigar—FAMOUS FOR ITS CHOICE QUALITY.

We cordially invite you to visit our factory

73RD ANNUAL WOODSTOCK FAIR OPENS

(Special to The Bulletin)

SOUTH WOODSTOCK, Sept. 10—The agricultural society of this town opened its gates today for the 73rd annual presentation of the Woodstock fair, the big autumn classic of northern Windham county. No attendance figures have as yet been given out, but it is estimated that fully three thousand people swarmed through the gates on the opening day. While time has wrought remarkable changes in the fair routine, many scenes taking place on the familiar old grounds were reminiscent of other days. The same spirit of hospitality of the Woodstockers, which has made the society famous in the state agricultural exhibition circles prevailed to the fullest extent.

At an early hour followers of the fair were on hand awaiting the opening of events. With them were lunches and refreshments sufficient enough for the day, for in Woodstock today it was just another holiday, with all roads winding up at the fair ground gate and everyone in the town, in addition to the numbers that came from other communities far and near, followed them. As usual there were the vending stands on which were jars of pink lemonade, attracting the attention of the youngsters; clusters of red balloons that floated leisurely above the gas tanks to which they were moored; the minute-men photographers and developers, who did a rushing business at intervals; gypsy fortune tellers attired in their quaint native costumes; Indian medicine men and their exhibitions of ice numbed reptiles; the cow punching horsemen in their wide somberos and western mode of dress and hundreds of other attractions that managed to command the attention of the country fair goer.

The band master, surrounded by his group of musicians seated in the band stand, in the center of the race track, entertained the crowds in the grandstands with their rendition of old time and present day melodies which were played at intervals between the automobile and harness racing events.

The exhibition hall was crowded with displays of various merchants and manufacturers of the county and the center of the vast auditorium was utilized for the showing of vegetable and agricultural products submitted for premium honors. The pens in the cattle section housed excellent specimens of stock proudly displayed by the owners. But all the attractions were not in the exhibit hall, nor in front of the grandstand. Far across the grounds and extending into what was the midway of the fair in former years, was the automobile show, an open air event in which nearly every make of car from the Bantam Austin to the ponderous "eight" was represented.

Underneath the grandstand was a showroom arranged especially for the feminine patrons where wonderful exhibitions of needle and hand work and products of domestic science skill were viewed with much interest. The automobile and harness cards were excellent. The horse racing programme started at 1:30 and was followed by the automobile heats which started at 3:30 p. m. The last named events were introduced at the fair for the first time this year. As the six cars took to the track the crowds thronged the guard rail to witness the thrilling priming tests in which drivers and mechance participated, previous to the actual races. At the given moment the purring engines of the skeleton framed cars roared out their obligattos and were off in a cloud of dust that floated up from the dirt surfaced track. Due to the shortness of the track, the racers could not accelerate to speeds usually registered in such events on specially constructed automobile racing tracks. Caution was exercised on the turns that loomed before the drivers all too quickly as they traversed the third of a mile stretches at hurried paces.

As the afternoon drew to a close the management unanimously voted the 73rd exhibition, the most successful the society has experienced in recent years and among the factors contributing to the success were the ideal weather conditions prevailing throughout the day as gentle southwest breezes mingled with the rays of a warm sun, typical of a mid-August day that made coats and sweaters and other articles of fall wearing apparel brought by skeptics, useless.

AUTO BURNS AFTER COLLISION WITH OTHER CAR

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 10—A new Ford roadster driven by Michael P. Shirshac, 18, of South Coventry, was practically destroyed by fire and Shursac received minor injuries in a collision of the roadster with a milk truck driven by Albert Levine, 21, of 1510 West Main street about 7:30 o'clock tonight. Both drivers were arrested by Officer John A. Lutton on charges of reckless driving and notified to appear in police court Thursday morning.

Levine, going westerly, was crossing the main thoroughfare to enter a private driveway as the South Coventry machine approached from an easterly direction. In colliding with the truck the roadster turned over on its side and caught fire. Shirshac, his brother, Henry and a young man companion, fled to safety. The driver was treated at the Willimantic General hospital by Dr. Charles A. Jenkins. The fire in the car was extinguished by the night platoon of Engine Co. No. 1, in charge of Lieut. Amos E. Barber.

..for TODAY'S HIGHER SPEED MOTORS

EVERYTHING on the road roars past at new and greater speeds. Down in the motors there's blistering heat and racking strain on every moving part. Modern speeds demand a modern tougher motor oil.

PAN-AM triple-refined an oil free of wax-like impurities. Backed it with all PAN-AM resources and tested it through heat, through cold, under the most exacting road and driving conditions. Through a million gruelling miles PAN-AM proved this new oil for your modern motor. PAN-AM Motor Oil stands up under fire, guarding your motor. Fifty per cent less carbon is formed. Motor repairs are less frequent.

The new PAN-AM motor-tested motor oils come to you after a trial that would have "broken" any ordinary lubricant. Today you can prove it for yourself. Drive to one of the convenient PAN-AM stations. The PAN-AM man knows the "prescription" grade of motor-tested motor oil correct for your car.

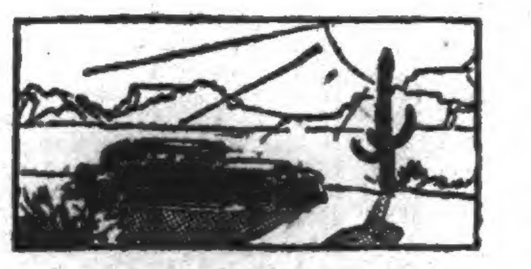
MOTOR PAN-AM OILS

A MILLION MILES OF ROAD TESTS

Through Cold

Down to zero and below. PAN-AM gave instant, smooth lubrication.

Many motor oils thicken at freezing temperatures. PAN-AM's triple-refining process removes wax-like particles. No matter how cold, PAN-AM motor oil answers, "Ready!"



Through Heat

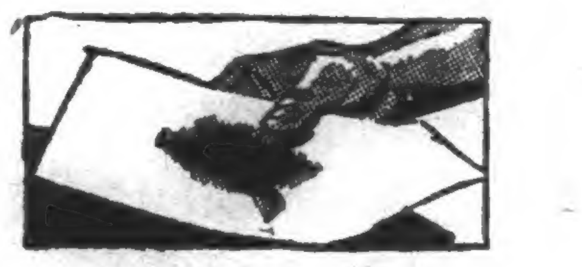
Test cars driven over scorching roads.

Down in the motor . . . greater heat. Up go the revolutions per minute. Up goes the temperature of every moving part. PAN-AM "stands up under fire" at temperatures far above ordinary motor-heat.

Stands Up

The long grind is over . . . long past the life of ordinary motor oil. Rigid examination showed that PAN-AM kept its full body and color.

PAN-AM motor-tested motor oil stands up like a soldier full of fight . . . and ready to "keep going."



Less Carbon

PAN-AM oils proved, in the motors, that they deposit 50% less carbon, by actual weight, than other high-class motor oils.

PAN-AM means cleaner motors. Less grinding of valves. Smaller repair bills. Longer life for your motor.

UTILITY SHARES AGAIN PROMINENT IN THE N. Y. STOCK MARKET YESTERDAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(AP)—The stock market stepped along briskly during most of today's trading, but lost some of its energy in the last hour and closed irregularly. Activity of the first few hours, however, was sufficient to put total sales within 20,000 shares of the 2,500,000 share mark, making volume the largest since August 8.

All groups of stocks received attention from the professional bulls. Merchandising and utility shares were again prominent manufacturing concerns moved rather narrowly, although American Can, General Electric, Westinghouse Electric and General Motors were used as the trial horses for the spurt.

The important news of the day came from the steel companies, and from the longer term viewpoint it was encouraging. U. S. Steel's bookings declined 441,351 tons in August, the largest decrease for that month since 1923, but Wall street declined to be depressed by this report. United States Steel common rallied after publication of the figures and duplicated its high for the recovery, 173 3-4, although it closed half a point net lower.

Iron Age's weekly survey said that although the seasonal recovery in the industry was materializing slowly, ingot production had risen to 58 per cent. of capacity. This was a gain of 3 per cent. in a week. An increase in orders for miscellaneous steel products was noted. "Steel" said that the aparent extension of the August upturn, the determination of producers to stabilize prices and continued buying of structural material "tangibly support the belief that the market situation in steel is improving."

These reassuring advices tended to counter-balance the showing made by the steel corporation last month, and shorts who had used the tonnage figures to sell stocks soon found it expedient to retrace their steps. Much of the late hesitancy in the market appeared to be traceable to profit taking.

The federal reserve board's report that department store sales throughout the country had declined 11 per cent. in August, compared with a year ago, failed to ruffle the merchandising shares. Strength in the store issues was well maintained and there were final gains of one to two points in Woolworth, May Department Stores, Montgomery Ward, Kroger Grocery, W. T. Grant, Kress and Safeway Stores Macy and Real Silk Hosiery advanced 3. Simmons was up a couple of points.

At the top of the rally, Allied Chemical, Ward Baking, Pacific lighting, Brooklyn Union Gas, Western Union, Coca Cola and Checker Cab showed gains of 3 to 4 points, while Union Pacific, Atchison, Southern Railway, Canadian Pacific, Vanadium, Lambert, Continental Baking and Cerro de Pasco were about two points higher. Final prices were irregularly below these levels.

American Can lost an extreme rise of a point and finished unchanged. General Electric, General Motors and Bethlehem Steel closed a shade lower. American Telephone, which had been up 1 1-2, retained only the fraction of its gain. Radio, Paramount, International Nickel and Gillette gained a point and Western Union and Brooklyn Union Gas 3 each. Case, Worthington Pump, Auburn Auto and New York Central turned heavy in the late trading.

Wheat closed steady at advances of 1-2 to 1 cent under the stimulation of a better export demand. Corn was unchanged to a small fraction lower. Cotton was up $1.25 to $1.75 a bale at the finish.

The money markets were easier, although there was no reduction in the official call rate of 2 1-2 per cent. A few dealers who had increased time fund charges by 1-4 of one per cent. yesterday restored the previous rates.

Two millions in gold was withdrawn for export to Canada as the Canadian dollar was at a premium of .15 5-8 cents. Otherwise, the foreign exchanges were dull.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Bonds steadied a little today, after the sagging tendencies of the previous session, but activity in investment market slackened somewhat, as Wall street's attention was turned to increasing activity in stocks.

Furthermore reports of several new offerings by public utilities tended to detract attention from the listed liens. Corporation Securities, an Insul Investment company, is planning an issue of $10,000,000 in serial notes, maturing from 1931 to 1935.

An additional offering of $15,000,000 of Electric Power and Light 5 per cent debentures, due 2030, and priced at 92 1-2, to yield 5.40 per cent, will be made tomorrow by Bonbright and company, also Stone and Webster is offering $1,400,000 of Sierra Pacific Power first mortgage 5s at 95.

An important rail issue, of $12,000,000 Chicago and Northwestern first and refunding mortgage 4 1-2s, is being made by Kuhn Loeb and company, and National City company at 99 3-4 per cent.

The undertone in the money market was a little easier, but rates were practically stationary. Call money was still quoted at the loan desk at 2 1-2 per cent although it was available outside at 2.

The activity in listed bonds was inclined to turn to the more speculative issues, and the convertible or warrant bonds. The averages showed that the general price level was about unchanged at the end of the day, although the average of 10 utilities was a shade lower.

In the rails Atchison convertible 4 1-2s rose nearly 2 points, in sympathy with strength in the stock, and Baltimore and Ohio 4 1-2s of 1960 were active and firm. The St. Paul adjustment 5s were turned over in large volume, moving up 1-4 net. Chicago and Eastern Illinois 5s, International Great Northern first 5s B, each rose a point. Albany and Susquehanna 3 1-2s, and Wabash Detroit and Chicago 5s were comparatively inactive issues rising about a point to new highs. Adams Express 4s also reached new high ground.

A firm spot in the utilities were New Orleans Public Service 5s, which reached new high ground, also, the Interborough Rapid Transit issues were firm reflecting the placing of representatives of the voting trust certificate holders on the board. In the industrials Fisk Rubber 8s rallied nearly 3 points, in response to a statement by the management affirming the company's solvency. Illinois Steel 4 1-2s rose nearly a point. A firm spot in the specialty issues were Gannett company 6s up 2 points. Oils were a little firmer, Standard of New Jersey and Shell Union 5s gaining fractionally.

In the convertible and warrant group, Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron 6s, and Remington Rand 5 1-2s each gained fractionalyl in large scale trading International Telephone 4 1-2s, however, lost a point.

The foreign dollar bonds were irregular. Buenos Aires 6s, gained more than a point, and several of the Argentine 6s were firm, perhaps reflecting the more friendly attitude of the new Argentine government toward the United States.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—(AP)— Grain trade today was largely of a balancing nature with traders reducing commitments in preparation for the United States government crop report, due late in the day. Wheat had a better undertone and prices averaged higher, final estimates on the amount of export business done overnight were 500,000 bushels. Strength of wheat at Liverpool, with the October delivery selling at a premium over the December and March deliveries helped the Chicago market. Corn met with selling pressure towards the end of trading and sagged some.

Closing prices on wheat were nervous, 3-8alc higher than yesterday's finish, Corn closed unsettled, from 1-8c lower to 1-4c higher, oats 1-8a1-4c up, and provisions ranging from a 10c decline to an advance of 2c.

Provisions were firmer on scattered buying, despite lower hog prices.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—(AP)— The curb market blossomed out into one of the broadest advances since last spring today. Gains were moderate and several were not maintained, but scores of issues which have not appeared on the tape in weeks were traded, and the day's transactions, aggregating 565,200 shares, were the largest since August 8.

Natural gas issues displayed the most solid group strength. United Gas was the day's active feature. The issue was bid up 1-2 point to 17 3-4, but closed at 17 3-8, United Light and Power, an electrical power issue with extensive natural gas projects, rose a point in a large turnover, but lost part of its gain. Dixie Gas and Natural Fuel Gas rose about 2 points each and Memphis and Southwestern Gas Utilities gained about a point.

Among the electrical power issues, Electric Bond and Share lost is leadership, rising a little for a time, but closing off 1-2. American Super Power was heavily traded, rising 3-4 to touch 25, but it lost half its gain. American Gas rose 2 points, and Utilities Power and Light sold up 1 5-8 to 19 in the most active trading in this issue in some time. Pacific Public Service "A" was also well bought. Consolidated Gas of Baltimore rose about 5 points, and Nevada California Electric, 7, in a few sales.

Several industrial specialties made substantial headway. Driver Harris gained six points, Carrier Engineering sold up 5 to a new high at 45, and Franklin Manufacturing gained 4. Arcturus Tube, Babcock and Wilcox. and Scovil Manufacturing sold up about 2 points, Armstrong Cork, however, dropped 7 to 40, a new low.

The more active investment trusts made little headway. Securities corporation, general, however, gained 5 points, and Manhattan Dearborn sold up 2 points to a new high for this market at 31. Oils were more or less neglected, but Gulf rallied about 2 points, and Humble, 1. In the mines, Noranda was unusually active, rising 1 point.

NEW YORK. Sept. 10.—(AP)—A blue button bearing the slogan "business is good" has appeared in Wall street by the thousand, bulls have greeted it with cheers, and bears with jeers. On the floor of the stock exchange, bulls enjoy furtively attaching them to the coat tails of bears. One member appeared with a paper disc pasted over his saying "business is lousy with me." One bear consented to wear one, with the remark, "the color is right, whatever it says." The button is the concept of an advertising man who hopes it will improve business sentiment.

Reports in Wall street today said that arrangements for new financing have been completed by Richfield Oil company and that a banking group headed by James C. Willson and company has obtained an option on 400,000 shares at $17 a share. If the entire block is taken, the company will receive about $6,800,000.

GIVE THE LAWN A BEAUTY TREATMENT THIS FALL

There is no feature in the home grounds that is more of an asset to the general beauty of the place than lovely, even turf, with a fine stand of grass. Often a dry summer will leave the lawn in very poor condition in the early fall. As fall is nature's time for sowing grass seed, it is well to take advantage of this opportunity and give the lawn a beauty treatment to restore its youthfulness.

Where the grass is thin and poor, a general renovating and reseeding is in order. Take an ordinary garden rake and file the teeth down so that they are very pointed and sharp. With this rake give the lawn a thorough combing, removing all old grass and weeds and loosening the soil to some extent on the surface.

After this "facial" apply a commercial fertilizer that is rich in nitrogen and give the lawn a top-surfacing with rich soil which contains considerable vegetable matter or humus. This top dressing may be very thin but it will fill up the little irregularities in the lawn and provide a seed bed for the new grass seed. This should be sown directly after the top dressing is in place, sowing about one pound of seed to every 300 or 400 square feet of lawn area.

Usually there are plenty of rains in the fall to bring up the seed, but after one good rain has comes ufficient artificial watering should be done to keep the lawn moist at all times until the new grass gets started.

New lawns are prepared and planted in the fall in the same manner as in the spring. That is, loosen the soil thoroughly, remove all sticks and stones, and rake the ground to a smooth, even surface. Select a quiet day to sow the seed and use one pound of grass seed to 200 or 300 square feet of lawn.

The essentials of a good lawn are: good rich soil properly perpared to a depth of at least one or two inches, good seed, and correct after-care.

Old lawns should be mowed right up to winter or the grass will get very long, will turn brown, and it will then be necessary to rake it out the following spring.

Whether a new lawn is made or an old one reseeded, fall is an ideal time to apply fertilizer or a surface dressing of rich soil.

PLANT FRUITS THIS FALL FOR BETTER RESULTS NEXT SUMMER

Fresh strawberries for shortcake—your favorite preserves made of lucious cherries—apples and pears to store away for winter—gather these fresh fruits right from your own garden! Yes, it can easily be accomplished, for most every home place has an opportunity to grow a few fruits. On the rear lawn and in the borders, fruit trees may be used for shade and ornament, as well as for their fruit. No tree grown purely for ornament can compare with the breath-taking loveliness of an apple, peach, plum or cherry tree that has donned its spring gown or exquisite, fragrant blooms.

Fall is an ideal time to plant many of the fruits for they have a chance to become established in the soil and are ready to start growth early in spring. This puts them weeks ahead of those fruits set out in spring. After all, no fruit you could buy could taste half so delicious as that which you grow on your grounds, so why not take advantage of this extra season—plant this fall and let nature work for you all winter. Then, too, there is none of the rush in fall that there is in spring for the planting season is almost twice as long.

Just a little patch of strawberries will provide quite a supply of this delicious fruit. A hedge of blackberries or raspberries across the back of the lot takes up little room and you will be surprised with the amount of berries you can harvest if a little care is given to the plants.

Grapes are useful both for training over an ornamental lattice or arbor, or when planted as a screen. At the same time they will reward you each year, almost without fail, with an ample supply of fruits for home use.

By giving a little thought to the seasons, you can, in a very little space, provide a complete sequence of fruit from the first of the cherries through the apple and pear season in the fall. Plan now to plant whatever varieties are adapted to fall planting in your locality.

TWO KINDS OF NUTS GROW WELL IN NORTH AND EAST

The native butternut and the Persian or so-called English walnut may well be included in garden and dooryard plantings in many sections of the eastern and northern part of the country, according to C. A. Reed, specialist in the United States department of Agriculture. Both species produce excellent nuts and both are more or less at home in these sections.

The butternut is native in the northeastern states. Although little more than a forest species, in so far as improvement by horticultural methods is concerned, it has certain features greatly in its favor. It grows farther north than the black walnut or any of the hickories. The young trees are rapid growers and come into bearing early. Butternut trees thrive best in fertile, moist soils, such as are usually found in valleys and lowlands adjacent to streams throughout the north and northeast. Many people prefer the nuts to those of any other kind. Prices for butternut kernels are relatively high and the supply is limited.

The Persian walnut is the world's most popular nut among those produced on trees or shrubs, despite the fact that a number of others less extensively grown are much preferred by some people. Numerous experimental plantings have been made in the east, but they have failed to result in commercial Persian walnut production. Nevertheless, dooryard plantings of from one to a dozen trees which collectively count into a considerable number and which are thrifty and good bearers when on favorable sites, are matters of general knowledge. These usually occur in localities where the soil is fertile, moderately moist, alkaline rather than of an acid nature, and where destructive freezing temperatures either in late spring or early fall are not likely to occur. The trees are perhaps more often found in the towns and on farm residence grounds from the Chesapeake and Delaware Bay region westward into northern Maryland and southern Pennsylvania to the Alleghenies, than elsewhere in this country east of the Rocky mountains.

Although Mr. Reed believes that these two species of nuts are not receiving the attention they merit, he warns prespective planters against plunging into nut growing as a business in this part of the country. "Whoever plants butternuts or Persian walnut trees in the eastern and northern states should do so with the full knowledge that he must begin at the ground and work up, both figuratively and literally," says Mr. Reed.

FARMER SELLING WOOD LOSES ON "LONG CORD"

The quantity of wood sold as a "cord" has been found to vary from one third of a legal cord in some localities to as much as a cord and a half in others. The legal cord in the United States, according to the forest service of the United States department of agriculture, is a stack of wood 4 feet high, and 8 feet long, equivalent to 128 cubic feet.

In a certain region of Virginia, when farmers sell a "cord" of pulpwood they deliver 180 cubic feet of wood, nearly one and one-half times the amount of wood in a legal cord. And in central New York the man who buys a "cord" of stovewood gets about one-third of a legal cord. Farmers in North Carolina, now selling considerable quantities of pulpwood, generally assume that a cord of pulpwood is 160 cubic feet, although firewood is sold in incorporated towns of the state according to the law which specifies that a cord shall consist of a pile of wood 8 feet long, 4 feet wide, and 4 feet high—the legal cord in the United States.

To eliminate the likelihood of costly misunderstandings, W. R. Mattoon, extension forester, forest service, proposes a set of specific terms to identify the different amounts of wood which in accordance with local custom are sold as a cord. He would call a stack of wood 8 by 4 by 4 a "standard cord," a stack 8 by 4 by 5 feet a "long cord," or one and one-quarter standard cords, and a stack of stovewood 8 by 4 feet by 12 inches a "short cord," or one fourth standard cord.

There are many points to be considered in dealing with a cord, the forest service says. A standard cord contains 128 cubic feet of space. The open space between the sticks of wood varies widely with different lots of wood. Straight sticks lie closer together than a cord of crooked sticks. If a standard cord of 4-foot sticks is cut into stove lengths it will stack up in less space because the wood will lie closer or more solid, since shortening the sticks lessens the crooks and therefore decreases the space wasted by them. The smaller the sizes of sticks in the stack the more vacant space and the less actual amount of wood. Common usage gives an equivalent of 90 cubic feet of solid wood in a standard cord: or in terms of board feet, 500 board feet per cord.

GARDEN REMINDERS

There is no hard and fast rule for autumn planting, as each part of our country affords different opportunities. Some portions enjoy a long open fall in which much can be accomplished; others can plant through most of the winter months; while those in the arid and northern regions are able to do little after the middle of October.

A cleaned garden in the autumn will offer an easier garden in which to perform the multitudinous tasks that confront us in the early spring.

October is a favorable month for the setting out of fruit trees. Water and mulch are the prime essentials for successful autumn planting.

Move old-established shrubs and plant new ones. Water to the nonsaturation point, and then mulch heavily with grass clippings, leaves, or marsh hay, in order that the tiny rootlets may get a firm hold before the heaving and thawing of frost sets in. This applies to perennials and trees as well. Dry freezing results in serious winter injury.

Keep the grass cut until winter sets in.

Turn off the water pipes in the pool for the winter.

Give the late chrysanthemums a protection of gauze covering at night.

Make notes of the places in your garden that lack autumn and winter color. Write now for an early fall delivery of berry-bearing shrubs, trees, and vines with interesting and colorful twigs and foliage. European cranberrybush (Viburnum opulus), Dogwoods in variety, willows, birch, mountain-ash, bittersweet vines, and the winged euonymus, are a few members of the substantial garden family that furnish interest in the bleakest of winter gardens.

After cutting back the phlox in October there will be a new growth started. This is an opportune time to divide the roots, replacing only the newer growth that has started on the outside.

CHANGING HABITS OF DIET AFFECT VITAMIN SUPPLY

BERKELEY, Cal.—(AP)—Changing food habits of American families cause the lack of vitamin B which stunts children's growth, believes Dr. Agnes Fay Morgan, of the University of California.

Dr. Morgan spent a year in study of diet of undernourished children between the ages of 11 and 18 years.

"This change in food habits," Dr. Morgan says, "of the American people has in general been looked on as physiologically not injurious, because the supposed increase in the use of milk, fruits and vegetables was thought to overbalance any nutritive loss involved in the substitution of sugar for cereals, and particularly for wheat products.

"The protein content of the average succulent vegetables and fruits is practically negligible as compared with that of cereals, and our work has shown that vitamin B of wheat products cannot be replaced by the minute amount of vitamin B in vegetables and fruits."

EARTH'S ELECTRIC CHARGE HIGHEST BETWEEN 6 AND 8

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A recently observed electrical phenomenon that sweeps the entire world at the same instant between 6 and 8 p. m., Washington time, is described to the American Geophysical Union by Dr. O. H. Gish of the Carnegie Institution.

It is a change connected with the earth's electrical charge. This charge, says Dr. Gish, tends to acquire a high value during the hours named. The cause is not definitely known, but is ascribed to some still "elusive, unknown" factor that maintains the earth charge.

Existence of this charge is shown by study of atmospheric electricity. The same studies show that the charge fluctuates and have given some indication of the universal time schedule of these changes.

SENSITIVE SEISMOMETER TO RECORD EARTHQUAKES

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The first Wenner seismometer for regular use in recording earthquakes has been placed in the magnetic and seismological observatory of the federal coast and geodetic survey near San Juan, Porto Rico.

The instrument records through an electrical system of great sensitivity impulses from very distant earthquakes. Many small tremors, known as microseisms, can be detected by this new seismometer developed by Dr. Frank Wenner, of the bureau of standards.

Although little more than a forest species, in so far as improvement by horticultural methods is concerned, it has certain features greatly in its favor. It grows farther north than the black walnut or any of the hickories. The young trees are rapid growers and come into bearing early. Butternut trees thrive best in fertile, moist soils, such as are usually found in valleys and lowlands adjacent to streams throughout the north and northeast. Many people prefer the nuts to those of any other kind. Prices for butternut kernels are relatively high and the supply is limited.

The Persian walnut is the world's most popular nut among those produced on trees or shrubs, despite the fact that a number of others less extensively grown are much preferred by some people. Numerous experimental plantings have been made in the east, but they have failed to result in commercial Persian walnut production. Nevertheless, dooryard plantings of from one to a dozen trees which collectively count into a considerable number and which are thrifty and good bearers when on favorable sites, are matters of general knowledge. These usually occur in localities where the soil is fertile, moderately moist, alkaline rather than of an acid nature, and where destructive freezing temperatures either in late spring or early fall are not likely to occur. The trees are perhaps more often found in the towns and on farm residence grounds from the Chesapeake and Delaware Bay region westward into northern Maryland and southern Pennsylvania to the Alleghenies, than elsewhere in this country east of the Rocky mountains.

Although Mr. Reed believes that these two species of nuts are not receiving the attention they merit, he warns prespective planters against plunging into nut growing as a business in this part of the country. "Whoever plants butternuts or Persian walnut trees in the eastern and northern states should do so with the full knowledge that he must begin at the ground and work up, both figuratively and literally," says Mr. Reed.

FARMER SELLING WOOD LOSES ON "LONG CORD"

The quantity of wood sold as a "cord" has been found to vary from one third of a legal cord in some localities to as much as a cord and a half in others. The legal cord in the United States, according to the forest service of the United States department of agriculture, is a stack of wood 4 feet high, and 8 feet long, equivalent to 128 cubic feet.

In a certain region of Virginia, when farmers sell a "cord" of pulpwood they deliver 180 cubic feet of wood, nearly one and one-half times the amount of wood in a legal cord. And in central New York the man who buys a "cord" of stovewood gets about one-third of a legal cord. Farmers in North Caroline, now selling considerable quantities of pulpwood, generally assume that a cord of pulpwood is 160 cubic feet, although firewood is sold in incorporated towns of the state according to the law which specifies that a cord shall consist of a pile of wood 8 feet long, 4 feet wide, and 4 feet high—the legal cord in the United States.

To eliminate the likelihood of costly misunderstandings, W. R. Mattoon, extension forester, forest service, proposes a set of specific terms to identify the different amounts of wood which in accordance with local custom are sold as a cord. He would call a stack of wood 8 by 4 by 4 a "standard cord," a stack 8 by 4 by 5 feet a "long cord," or one and one-quarter standard cords, and a stack of stovewood 8 by 4 feet by 12 inches a "short cord," or one fourth standard cord.

There are many points to be considered in dealing with a cord, the forest service says. A standard cord contains 128 cubic feet of space. The open space between the sticks of wood varies widely with different lots of wood. Straight sticks lie closer together than a cord of crooked sticks. If a standard cord of 4-foot sticks is cut into stove lengths it will stack up in less space because the wood will lie closer or more solid, since shortening the sticks lessens the crooks and therefore decreases the space wasted by them. The smaller the sizes of sticks in the stack the more vacant space and the less actual amount of wood. Common usage gives an equivalent of 90 cubic feet of solid wood in a standard cord: or in terms of board feet, 500 board feet per cord.

GARDEN REMINDERS

There is no hard and fast rule for autumn planting, as each part of our country affords different opportunities. Some portions enjoy a long open fall in which much can be accomplished; others can plant through most of the winter months; while those in the arid and northern regions are able to do little after the middle of October.

A cleaned garden in the autumn will offer an easier garden in which to perfrom the multitudinous tasks that confront us in the early spring.

October is a favorable month for the setting out of fruit trees. Water and mulch are the prime essentials for successful autumn planting.

Move old-established shrubs and plant new ones. Water to the nonsaturation point, and then mulch heavily with grass clippings, leaves, or marsh hay, in order that the tiny rootlets may get a firm hold before the heaving and thawing of frost sets in. This applies to perennials and trees as well. Dry freezing results in serious winter injury.

Keep the grass cut until winter sets in.

Turn off the water pipes in the pool for the winter.

Give the late chrysanthemums a protection of gauze covering at night.

Make notes of the places in your garden that lack autumn and winter color. Write now for an early fall delivery of berry-bearing shrubs, trees, and vines with interesting and colorful twigs and foliage. European cranberrybush (Viburnum opulus), Dogwoods in variety, willows, birch, mountain-ash, bittersweet vines, and the winged euonymus, are a few members of the substantial garden family that furnish interest in the bleakest of winter gardens.

After cutting back the phlox in October there will be a new growth started. This is an opportune time to divide the roots, replacing only the newer growth that has started on the outside.

CHANGING HABITS OF DIET AFFECT VITAMIN SUPPLY

BERKELEY, Cal.—(AP)—Changing food habits of American families cause the lack of vitamin B which stunts children's growth, believes Dr. Agnes Fay Morgan, of the University of California.

Dr. Morgan spent a year in study of diet of undernourished children between the ages of 11 and 18 years.

"This change in food habits," Dr. Morgan says, "of the American people has in general been looked on as physiologically not injurious, because the supposed increase in the use of milk, fruits and vegetables was thought to overbalance any nutritive loss involved in the substitution of sugar for cereals, and particularly for wheat products.

"The protein content of the average succulent vegetables and fruits is practically negligible as compared with that of cereals, and our work has shown that vitamin B of wheat products cannot be replaced by the minute amount of vitamin B in vegetables and fruits."

EARTH'S ELECTRIC CHARGE HIGHEST BETWEEN 6 AND 8

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A recently observed electrical phenomenon that sweeps the entire world at the same instant between 6 and 8 p. m., Washington time, is described to the American Geophysical Union by Dr. O. H. Gish of the Carnegie Institution.

It is a change connected with the earth's electrical charge. This charge, says Dr. Gish, tends to acquire a high value during the hours named. The cause is not definitely known, but is ascribed to some still "elusive, unknown" factor that maintains the earth charge.

Existence of this charge is shown by study of atmospheric electricity. The same studies show that the charge fluctuates and have given some indication of the universal time schedule of these changes.

SENSITIVE SEISMOMETER TO RECORD EARTHQUAKES

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The first Wenner seismometer for regular use in recording earthquakes has been placed in the magnetic and seismological observatory of the federal coast and geodetic survey near San Juan, Porto Rico.

The instrument records through an electrical system of great sensitivity impulses from very distant earthquakes. Many small tremors, known as microseisms, can be detected by this new seismometer developed by Dr. Frank Wenner, of the bureau of standards.

WEDDING

Larabee-Baldi

A quiet wedding occurred on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock at the First Baptist church when Miss Leda Baldi of Haswell street became the bride of Charles B. Larabee. A double ring service was used by Rev. Byron U. Hatfield, pastor of the church. Attendants were Miss Delia Baldi, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid. Harold Chappell was the best man. Miss Baldi is the daughter of Mrs. Mary Baldi of Westerly and Mr. Larabee, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Larabee of Booth Bay Harbor, Me.

The marches and music for the wedding was furnished by the church organist, Miss Mildred K. Taylor of Ashaway, R. I. The bride was gowned in periwinkle blue with hat and shoes to match and carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Miss Delia Baldi wore beige with hat and shoes to match. Her bouquet was garden flowers.

The gifts to the best man and the maid of honor were gold pieces.

After the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served at the home of the bride.

Early in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Larabee left for a wedding trip through the White Mountains and Maine. While touring Maine they plan to visit Mr. Larabee's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Larabee of Booth Bay Harbor.

On their return to Westerly they will make their home in a furnished apartment at 36 Spruce street. They will be at home after October 1.

The Westerly political pot has begun boiling again this year with the notice by the democrats, in keeping with the party policy this year, to do the leading and not wait for their republican adversaries as in the past political years. The democratic caucus date has been set for the Westerly town hall on Tuesday evening.

The republicans have not yet filed their caucus notice, but have plenty of time under Westerly's special caucus law.

Identity of the democratic candidate for representative from the Second District remains a secret. Chairman George A. Dolan said that five men were being considered, but the party had not definitely made its selection.

The democratic leaders will meet Friday night.

It has been positively decided that Representative John M. O'Connell of the First District will lead the democrats in that district. Dr. O'Connell will be a candidate to succeed himself.

A Pawcatuck youth, Clifford Morley, 15, son of Frank Morley of 3 Wilford court, Westerly, started for school Monday morning and up to a late hour had not returned. His father told police he was missing. He informed Lieut. George H. Champlin his son did not want to resume school and said he believed the boy ran away seeking a job. Clifford is described as 5 feet 8 inches tall, weight 135 pounds, light hair, fair complexion, brownish eyes and good teeth. He was unusually well developed for his age. He wore a blue broadcloth shirt, green sweater, long light trousers and black shoes. As far as the family knew, he had little or no money with him.

Westerly police were on the lookout on Tuesday night for a man at Weekapaug, reported as a possibly insane person escaped from an institution.

Westerly police authorities, following the precedent established last year, when members of the town council police committee and the police chief, lieutenant and patrol officers attended weekly sessions in the Benefit street arsenal, Providence, will again attend police school this year.

This course was decided upon following a meeting of the Rhode Island Police Chiefs' association, held on Tuesday and a committee was appointed to plan for the reopening of the school after the Christmas holidays.

Under the new plan for continuing the police school the state will be divided into four districts so that the course of instruction will not be too cumbersome for members of police departments who have been obliged to journey long distances to the school. The committee will arrange a schedule of instruction, taking in new subjects and providing for a rotation of teachers.

The state has been divided into the following districts: First, Woonsocket and surrounding territory; second, Providence; third, Newport and surrounding territory, and fourth, Kent county, which will take in Cranston and the western shore of Narragansett bay.

The committee in charge of the reopening of the school consists of Chief William F. O'Neil, Providence; Col. Everitte St. J. Chaffee, superintendent of the department of state police; Chief Thomas E. Harrop of West Warwick, president of the conference; Chief William J. Deegan, Portsmouth; Chief William Axon, Lincoln and Chief Ellis A. Cranston of Warwick.

Mrs. Esther Donaldson of Bridgeport, Conn., cousin of the bride, was matron of honor, and Theodore Dabrowski was best man.

The bride wore a gown of ashes of roses crepe and the matron of honor wore blue crepe de chine. Both wore hats and slippers to match their gowns with corsages of rosebuds.

Following the wedding ceremony, a breakfast for immediate relatives was served at the home of the bride's parents. The couple left this afternoon on a motor trip to Montreal, Can. Upon their return they will reside at 3 Douglas Park, Bradford.

Interested and observant citizens and passers-by gathered in numbers on Tuesday evening in the vicinity of the Pawcatuck river bridge at Broad street when Westerly police and Connecticut state troopers of the Groton barracks were stationed at the structure to stop a supposed kidnaper's automobile, believed to be headed this way from Attleboro, Mass.

The police and troopers mobilized here in the state-wide attempt in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut to head off an automobile believed to be carrying Lucille Bereaux, reported kidnaped in Canada. The reported kidnaping followed the discovery of a note signed "Lucille Bereaux" found in Brunswick, Me., and the Westerly police had the report that "Lucille" was in a car of Maine registration and bound for Connecticut with her captors.

PERHAPS you thought of the General Electric Refrigerator as an expense. It isn't. It is an economy.

It keeps food from spoiling—milk from souring. Because spoilage is prevented, you can buy food in larger quantities when market prices are favorable. You can make delicious frozen desserts with it. And while the General Electric Refrigerator is doing all these things, it is freezing all the ice cubes you can use. Operation cost is but a few cents a day.

A General Electric Refrigerator can be installed in your home for as low as .... $25 Down

All the world respects A GOOD COOK

• Cookery... one of the greatest civilized crafts. • A good cook... one of mankind's solidest blessings. • Flour... a basic food which varies widely in quality.

• • •

Heckers' Flour (that superlative flour) does not vary in quality. • In the grocery trade there is a word which means "out of the ordinary run" or "extra good" or the "best obtainable". The grocery word for special excellence is "fancy". Heckers' Flour is "fancy". • It is milled from the world's very best wheats. It is fine, dry and satin-y in texture, lending itself to the nimble artistry of the expert cook.

• • •

Heckers' Flour has been on the market ninety years. A supreme testimonial!

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

"The King of Jazz" one of the most pretentious and elaborate of motion picture productions in the history of that art opens at the Palace theatre today on the double-feature bill which also includes "Double Cross Roads," a story of regeneration.

Paul Whiteman, himself a king of jazz, is only one of the huge cast of stars featured in "The King of Jazz" and the list is too long to enumerate.

"The King of Jazz" is without doubt the most beautiful and most complete production which has ever been presented to theatre patrons and to get a complete idea of the possibilities of the film it is necessary to see it. No description could do justice to the beautiful girls and the gorgeous settings which are a part of the production and to get a full realization of it, it must be seen.

On the same bill "Double Cross Roads" also with a large cast of stars makes a most unusual combination. Here we have the story of an ex-convict who tries to go straight. Fate seems to be against him and although he tries very hard to resist temptation it seems impossible. He is tempted time after time but at last the love of a beautiful girl who has perfect faith in him brings him to the right way of thinking.

This double feature will be shown at the Palace through Saturday of this week. Although this bill is one which could easily be shown as single features the Palace is offering it as a double. This is surely once when every theatre patron in Norwich has an opportunity to get more than his money's worth.

John Buckley, of Malvern, and John Uhrin, of Swedesburg hadn't seen each other for some time and they were so pleased when they met in Norristown, Pa., that they shook hands enthusiastically. Too enthusiastically, in fact, for while so engaged they backed into a plate glass window. They were showered with glass, in addition to being injured they must pay for the window.

POETRY

Country Life in Vermont

One reason why I'll always stick
To country life through thin and thick
Is that the city cramps the soul
And swallows up the body whole;
You spend your time in blowing froth
From off the top of worldly broth;
Your friends are much the same as you,
Just folks, and mighty human, too.

You have no hen to watch with pride
And see her perk her head one side
You have no cosset lamb to feed
And boast about her Cotswold breed;
The doves that circle 'round the sky
Are squab, too dear for you to buy;
The trees grow where such signs prevail,
As, "Keep the path or go to jail."

But in the country, contact-points
Play smooth as universal joints;
Things animate, inanimate,
And neutral on your pleasure wait.
There's cream and curds and cottage cheese,
And nymphs and hamadryades;
There's stove-pipe rooms and lovers' lanes
And traverse sleds with "dogs" and chains.

You know the folks you daily meet,
You grow the stringless beans you eat;
The shadows that befleck your field,
Are yourn, as Shakespeare's wit revealed;
You like to watch your running pine
And see your checkerberries shine;
The leaning corncrib, weathered brown,
Will still be yourn when tumbled down.

Your soul is wholesome, as it were
And feels the cleanly cosmic stir;
The promises with springtime blent
Fulfill themselves in bin and bent;
You feel you have a right to life,
The girl you live with is your wife,
You'll be laid out in no blue blouse
And buried from a boarding-house.

—Daniel L. Cady, in Burling Free Press.

Fishin'

Don't seem t' make no difference
  Wharabouts yuh make your cam,
When yuh bait yer hook fer fishin'
  Yer just boun' t' tramp an' tramp
Way up th' crick this mornin'
  Whilst I ketched a few small trout
A feller campin' down below
  Was pullin' nice uns out
Uh them there holes that's right close by
  T' whar my camp is set.
Guess them fish he had fer dinner
  Was ones I mighta et!

Somehow a feller figgers
  Thet up th' stream a ways
Or mebbe down a mile or two
  Is whar th' big uns lays.
Summers else it allus seems
  Is a better place t' be
An' the blessin's layin' clost t' hand
  Is the hardest fer to see.
Reckon how it's human nature
  Fer t' calkilate like that
When like as not th' best an' most
  Is right what yuh are at!

COUNCILOR WM. C. FOX, NEW LONDON, CLAIMS 100 ERROR IN VOTE COUNT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 10—Councilor William C. Fox came out today with the claim that he is entitled to 100 more votes than he was credited with receiving at the polls Monday, when an election was held at which none of the candidates received the necessary majority vote that would elect them members of the city council. Councilor Fox, who is seeking reelection, claims the error was in the third ward. The master moderator's report showed that Fox received 231 votes while a check-up on the report revealed that the vote accorded the councilor was 331. The additional 100 votes would bring Fox's total to 1581; but even this vote would not result in the re-election of the councilor, for it is about 600 less than a majority vote.

BUDGET COMMITTEE HOPES TO CUT $100,000 FROM TOTAL

At a meeting of the budget committee of the city council held in the municipal building last night, plans were formulated to cut $100,000 from the tentative budget which has been prepared and which amount has been requested for the operating expenses of the city for the fiscal year. It has been revealed that the fixed expenses for meeting the expenses for the year is $822,527. The remaining $700,000, which has been asked for is not an absolute necessity and from this amount it is planned to reduce the proposed budget $100,000.

Alarm for Auto Fire

An automobile owned by Edward Poudrier was slightly damaged by fire this evening. When the car was enveloped in flames an alarm was rung in from Box 412, corner of Bank and Colman streets. Four pieces of apparatus responded, but the fire had been subdued before the arrival of the firemen. Poudrier was cleaning the auto and used gasoline. Suddenly and without warning the car was ablaze and the alarm was sent in. It is believed that a short circuit caused the gasoline to ignite.

Penniless Flapper Arrested

Theresa Rusnack, 21, of Laceyville, Pa., was arrested tonight by Patrolman Frank Philopena charged with vagrancy. She was locked up and will be in the police court tomorrow. The young woman was attired in apparent finery, but she was without funds and had wired a friend in New York for assistance. She was accosting sailors and it is believed that she is of the type that consorts with members of the navy.

Howard Cram, proprietor of an automobile paint shop, corner of Mill and Winthrop streets, this afternoon made complaint to the police that boys caused damage to his property earlier in the day. The youths, who were returning from the Winthrop school, hurled stones through some of the windows and one stone hit and disfigured an automobile that was being painted.

DOCTOR COMPLAINS WOMAN SELLS BIRTH CONTROL DEVICE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 10—(AP)—Dr. Walter L. Douglass, of Hempstead street, this afternoon informed the police that a woman was in the city and was endeavoring to sell a device for birth control and that during yesterday the canvasser solicited women residents of Cottage street. A description of the woman was given, but no trace of her was found. The sale or offering for sale of the device is a violation of the law and in the event that the canvasser is found she will be prosecuted.

CIOCIERKA IDENTIFIED BY HOLYOKE OFFICER

The man arrested in New London Sunday last and who gave his name as Joseph Sutkowski, when the police went to 27 Winthrop street and quelled a disturbance, was positively identified at the New London county jail where he is working out a fine of $10 and costs, as Joseph Ciecíorka. The identification was by a police officer from Holyoke, Mass, where Ciocierka is wanted on a charge of non-support, for a warrant has been issued for his arrest because Cieciorka has failed to support his wife and seven children. Cieciorka will not be returned to Holyoke right away. After he has worked out the amount of his fine and costs, he will be arrested on a charge of bigamy, for since his arrest, it has been learned that while he had a wife living in Holyoke, Cieciorka married Stanislawa Zebrowski in this city in May, 1927. After the charge of bigamy is disposed of, Cieciorka may be returned to Holyoke and made to answer for the lesser crime. Ciecierka was at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Zielenski, 27 Winthrop street, where a drinking party was being staged. Complaint was made to the police because of the noise in the home of the Zielenskis. When officers arrested the husband and wife they also arrested Ciecierka for he was in a disturbing mood. Later it developed that Ciecierka was the man wanted in Holyoke. When the department of that city was informed of the arrest of Ciecierka, an officer came to New London for the purpose of establishing his identity.

The boats have been assigned as a part of the fleet of government craft that will patrol the course over which the yachts will race. William Lange and George Ott, sailors, arrested last night on State street by Patrolman Louis Tooker, charged with breach of the peace, were given into the custody of the shore patrol, who escorted them back to the submarine base, where they will be given military discipline.

P. Eldred, a sailor aboard U. S. S. Camden, reported to Patrolman Frank Linehan at 1:30 o'llock this morning that he had been thrown from his motorcycle at the corner of Pequot and and Glenwood avenues, by the cycle entering a depression. Eldred's knee was cut and bruised and he went to the office of a physician where the wound was dressed. Motorcycle Officer Thomas Cavanaugh was sent to where the alleged rut existed, and reported that the highway was in excellent condition, for no rut or depression existed there.

Escuredo Again Heard From

Simon Escuredo, a Filipino, former service man, was arrested in Waterford last night by State Police Officer John Smith, charged with obtaining money under false pretences. He was locked up and will be in Waterford town court Monday next. Escuredo obtained $25 from Frank Damon, of Waterford, several days ago by misrepresentation and when the former refused to return the money, Damon sought the Filipino's arrest. Escuredo was fined in the New London police court several months ago on a charge of wearing the uniform of the U. S. navy without authority. He persisted in wearing the uniform after he had been discharged from the federal service.

John Hyland, ex-service man, was in Waterford town court yesterday afternoon, charged with conversion. The case was continued to Wednesday next. In default of bail of $1,000, Hyland, whose home is in Utica, N. Y., was committed to jail.

SHEEHAN HEARING ENDS IN 3 MONTHS' SUSPENSION

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 10.—Found guilty on three charges of violation of the police rules and regulations, following a hearing before City Manager William A. Holt yesterday, Patrolman Patrick Sheehan was today meted out the most drastic punishment yet to be given a police officer convicted on charges, excepting in one or two instances when an officer was allowed to resign. Patrolman Sheehan was suspended for three months. The lengthy suspension means that Sheehan will be deprived of salary aggregating $500. The specific charges on which Sheehan was convicted were using obscene and indecent language, wilfull maltreatment of a person by using unnecessary force, and acts contrary to good order and discipline. Captain Charles A. Pinney had recommended that Sheehan be dismissed from the force, but Judge Daniel M. Cronin, Deputy Judge John McGarry and Mayor Cornelius D. Twomey, the body that would approve or disapprove such action and who attended yesterday's hearing, did not consider that Sheehan's acts were sufficiently grievous to warrant terminating his duties as a police officer and it is believed that the city manager, having that knowledge, imposed the long suspension.

DAMAGE IS RECORDED BY LIGHTNING SIGNAL

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—(AP)—The latest man-made curb for lightning destruction is a little white signal.

It jumps into view on high tension line towers whenever lightning strikes, or when for other reasons the electrical power gets out of hand and flashes outside insulators.

The white target is a sign for a lineman to climb the tower and look for lightning damage. It is operated by instruments capable of measuring in split millionths of a second the extra surge of power that comes over a line when lightning strikes.

CLAIMS ULTRAVIOLET RAYS KILL TOBACCO NICOTINE

CHICAGO—(AP)—Dr. A. J. Pacini of Chicago claims to have found that ultraviolet rays will remove the nicotine from tobacco. The original flavor of the tobacco is retained.

An article on Pacini's claim appeared in the Journal of Pharmacology and Experimental Therapeutics. It was prepared by the Chicago scientist and Prof. Hugh McGuigan of the University of Illinois.

The tobacco finding was a chance development, as Dr. Pacini was attempting to detoxify cocaine, and was working with many alkaloids when he subjected the tobacco to light treatment.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

Regis Toomey, former University of Pittsburgh student and athlete, who has supported some of the most important stars of the screen, including William Powell, Charles "Buddy" Rogers, Richard Dix and Richard Arlen, adds a new chapter to his interesting career as a featured player in "A Man from Wyoming," which is the current attraction at Warner's Broadway. Toomey supports Gary Cooper, the star, in this one.

At the opening of the picture Toomey is seen as the fellow-engineer with Cooper on a construction job in Wyoming. Later they both join the Engineer Corps of the army and are sent to France, Cooper as a captain, Toomey as his lieutenant-buddy.

June Collyer, New York society girl, who forsook the activities of a youthful registerite for the more exciting glamor of the films, is Cooper's leading lady. She is presented as an ambulance driver, who meets Cooper in the trenches during a heavy bombardment and afterward falls in love with him.

Only 39 democratic votes were cast in Douglas county, Mo., during a recent primary election.

Mileage can't be added to oil but often it is cooked away

The service you get from your automobile oil depends on what the refiners left in it, not on what he may have added to it. No one even claims to add life and mileage to the lubricant that occurs in crude petroleum. But many ordinary refining processes subtract life from the oil.

Penn-Drake engineers spent years of research toward perfecting a refining method that would not cook life out of the oil. Today, in Penn-Drake oil they offer you a motor lubricant that truly gives double-mileage — goes twice as far before you need to add oil, has double the lubricating value of ordinary oils when the time comes to drain your crankcase.

This extra value oil is produced by a special process that distills under vacuum, at low temperatures, in fifteen seconds where ordinary processes parboil the oil as long as thirty-six hours at scorching temperatures. The result is remarkable freedom from hard carbon, absolute preservation of the heart of the lubricating value of the crude.

Penn-Drake oil is made from Pure Pennsylvania Crude, of course. Buy it where you see the sign of the first oil well.

GREENEVILLE

EIGHTH ST. SIGNALS AGAIN OUT OF COMMISSION

The block signal lights which were recently installed by the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad at the Eighth street crossing were again put out of commission about 9:30 o'clock Tuesday evening. The red lights were continuously flashing with the bell ringing and a large number of automobiles were stopped both coming and going to the Preston side and on North Main street. Officer John Dunion, upon learning of the trouble, reported to the railroad people who sent out their men to repair the signals. This required two hours of labor. Sergeant Mathew Delaney and Officer Dunion performed traffic duty until the lights were again in working order.

The trouble was caused by a break in the track making a short circuit. The sections of the State of Maine trains had to slow down their average speed going through the section near the Warner Arms Co., owing to the track. Torpedoes were placed upon the track to give the trains the signal. Ever since the railroad has taken off their flagman at this crossing and put in two different sets of signals they have been having trouble. The railroad company has had more trouble with the signal system at this crossing than at any other crossing on the road.

This is the first summer within recollection that there has not been a drowning in the Shetucket river. The waters generally claim two to three each year.

Deciding Game Tomorrow Night

The deciding game between the Swanees' Single and Married Men will be played Friday evening at the J. B. Martin grounds. Each team has a victory to its credit and both are out for blood. Managers Swanton and Riordan have both strengthened considerably. John Dowling will be the choice of Manager Riordan of the Married Men but Manager Swanton refuses to let out the name of his pitching ace until game time in order to keep his rivals in suspense. Umpire Peter Gauthier, who has been umpiring in a very capable manner, will hold the indicator as in the past. A very hot contest is expected.

Miss Delia Shea and John O. Shea have returned to their home at Jewett City after spending a few days with their cousin, Mrs. Michael Shea of 495 North Main street.

George Morris has returned to his home on Prospect street, after spending a few days at Pleasant View.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Galligan of Central avenue have returned, after a boat trip to South Carolina.

NORWICH BOYS SHARE IN CAMP NAMAKKIS HONORS

The new Camp Namakkis on the Fuller property at Gardner lake, directed by Ernest P. Roberts, of Brooklyn, N. Y., has just closed a very successful season. Mr. Roberts had previously been director of the largest camp on the lake, for 16 years and under his direction the camp grew from 40 boys to 169. The equipment increased from one building, the "Lodge," to 32 buildings. Mr. Roberts' new Camp Namakkis has enjoyed a remarkable start in its first year with a registration of 24 selected boys from Norwich, New York, Brooklyn, Long Island and New Jersey. The Norwich boys who attended Camp Namakkis were Eliot Payson, Leonard Johnson, Richmond Smith and Randolph Mathewson.

Leonard Johnson, Eliot Payson and Richmond Smith were successful in winning the honor awards which were Camp Namakkis pennants.

Every boy in camp learned how to swim and a number passed the 200 yard swim test.

Arts and crafts work occupied an important place in the programme and over 150 projects were made by the different boys. The average weight gained was from 2 to 10 lbs. The boys became quite adept in horsemanship, riding regularly at the Circle B ranch.

All campers were interviewed by the director who is a specialist in boys work, and these boys will be carefully followed up throughout the winter with suggestions, literature based upon the latest developments in child psychology. Visits to places of interest will be made. Plans are now being made to divide the camp next year into younger and older boy groups. A camp reunion is planned for the Christmas holidays.

The Anti-Saloon league of Illinois gave its endorsement to Lottie Holman O'Neill as an independent dry candidate for the United States senate.

TEACHERS HAVE EXTENSION COURSE AT PLAINFIELD

Fifty-five teachers representing the towns of Plainfield, Sterling, Lisbon, Voluntown, Canterbury and Scotland assembled Tuesday afternoon in Plainfield Grammar school for the opening session of an extension course given by Prof. George Howe of New Britain Normal school.

The course will center around the social studies, units of work, values of field trips for purpose of instruction, value of visual aids, new type tests, etc.

In the lecture on Tuesday, Mr. Howe gave a very clear description of the educational field trip that was taken by a group of teachers who feel the necessity of broadening their knowledge of home geography as it affects people and their industries. He emphasized the educational value of trips planned by the teacher for the pupils in her classroom to visit points of interest in nearby sections.

The course will be given each Tuesday afternoon at the Plainfield Grammar school, from 4 to 6 o'clock, for a period of 15 weeks. Any teacher interested in broadening her knowledge of the social studies will be welcome to enroll.

ACADEMY OPENS WITH RECORD BREAKING NUMBERS

When the Norwich Free Academy opened Wednesday for the fall term there was an estimated registration of 1,150. As customary, only a brief session was held Wednesday as the various classes were assigned rooms. This year's registration is the largest in the history of the Academy.

When some people speak their minds it doesn't take them very long.

WATERFORD CONTRACTOR IS FOUND DEAD IN HOME

The body of Frederick D. Benway, 55-year-old Waterford contractor, was found Tuesday night by Sergeant George Webber and Trooper James Dygert of the Groton state police barracks, who broke into his home at Quaker Hill after neighbors, having failed to see him around for several days had become concerned over his welfare. A small boy residing in the vicinity was sent to the house which Benway, a bachelor, occupied alone, late Tuesday and after rapping loudly and long on the front door without receiving any response, placed a ladder up to one of the bed room windows and peered in to see Benway's body stretched out on a bed.

The state police were notified and Sergeant Webber and Trooper Dygert rushed to the house and after forcing an entrance found Benway dead. Medical Examiner Ross E. Black of Waterford was summoned and after viewing the body, said death had probably been caused by heart failure. Permission was given for the removal of the body to the undertaking parlors in New London and it was being held there pending arrangements for the funeral. Dr. Black rendered the opinion that Benway had been dead for about three days. Persons residing near Benway's house reported that he was last seen about on Sunday and that at that time he appeared to be in good health.

Benway received injuries to the chest and arms on Aug. 26 when the light truck he was driving was struck by a Norwich bound trolley car at the Richard's grove crossing in Waterford, but he did not appear to have suffered any continued ill effects and it is not believed that the injuries received at that time were in any way contributing factors to his death.

The bearers were members of the Taftville Maennerchor club and the Sons of Hermann, organizations of which the deceased was a member. Burial was in the family lot in Yantic cemetery, where Rev. Mr. Storek read the committal service. Undertaker George G. Grant was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Mr. Sticht died Sunday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Filliger, after an illness of four weeks. He was born in Selb, Bayer, Germany, 82 years ago. His early manhood was spent in that country and he served with the Bavarian troops in their invasion of France during the Franco-Prussian war of 1870. He had resided in this country for 45 years, 42 of which were spent in Taftville, where he was employed by the Ponemah mills. He is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Henry Filliger, of Taftville; Mrs. Thomas Simcox, of Norwich, and Mrs. Charles Smith, of West Warwick, R. I., and one son, Wolfgang Sticht, of Taftville. There are ten grandchildren.

NORWICH INSURANCE MEN WIN LEG ON CUP

Norwich insurance men sent such a large delegation to Hartford on Tuesday for the sixth annual Connecticut Insurance day that they led all other cities in proportion of attendance and won a second leg on the silver attendance cup.

The Norwich attendance was 75 per cent of the membership of the insurance agencies of the city and this figure went ahead of all the other agencies and scored their second leg on the cup, on which they took the first leg for attendance last year. One more win will give Norwich permanent possession of the cup.

James L. Case of this city, general chairman of Insurance day committee, gave the official address of welcome at the morning session.

The meeting had an unusually large attendance as there were about 600 at the noon luncheon at the Hartford club. This number was said to be second only to that at the luncheon in honor of Colonel Lindbergh when he visited Hartford.

NORWICH BOY TO BE FRESHMAN AT U. OF P.

Arthur L. Lathrop of this city, will be among those who will enter the University of Pennsylvania as members of this year's freshman class, it has been anounced by the office of admissions of the university. Lathrop is among approximately 1100 graduates of preparatory and high schools who will be admitted this year under the plan of "selective admission" at present in force at the university.

Under the selective admission plan applicants for entrance to the university are required not only to meet the most rigid scholastic standards but in addition must submit to a comprehensive psychological examination, while qualities such as personality and leadership are considered carefully in an attempt to make the process of selection as personal as possible.

Lathrop is the son of Mrs. Ella F. Lathrop, 51 Oneco street, and prepared for the university in Norwich Free Academy where he was prominent in student activities. He was secretary of the Hi-Y club, active in debating and member of Rho Alpha Mu fraternity.

Members of the entering class will arrive on the Pennsylvania campus on Monday, Sept. 22, to participate in the annual freshman week of the University. At this time the new students will be familiarised with the details both of academic life and student activities on the Pennsylvania campus, so that they may more readily adjust themselves to their new environment. The official opening of the 191st academic year will be marked with exercises to be held on Friday, Sept. 26.

PRIZE ESSAY CONTEST ON WOMEN'S ACHIEVEMENTS

The Business and Professional Women's club of this city has been notified of a nation-wide contest for women for the best stories of the achievements of business and professional women submitted within the next month. The National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs is sponsoring the contest in co-operation with the exposition of women's arts and industries.

According to Miss Emily Knenbuhl, executive secretary of the national federation, the purpose of the competition is to add to the large fund of material on the progress of women in the business world already assembled by the federation as part of its service as a business women's organization.

The finest individual story of the achievement of a business woman submitted by Oct. 1, will win the first prize of $50. The next best story will be given honorable recognition and a prize of $25. Records of odd and unusual occupations followed by women, stories of women who have built up businesses for themselves, who have attained high executive positions against heavy odds, or who have scored distinctive success in a field unfamiliar to women—these are the types of material sought.

Judging of the manuscripts will be 50 per cent on their own merits and 50 per cent on the brilliance of the achievements they record. The contest is open to any woman in the United States whether or not she is a member of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs. The contestants may write of their own business success, or may tell of the enterprise of some other woman. Manuscripts must not exceed 1,000 words in length. To be accepted, manuscripts must reach the offices of the federation, 1819 Broadway, New York city, prior to midnight on the evening of Sept. 31. Hard, Red Pimples in Blotches on Face. Healed by Cuticura.

"The pimples on my face were rather hard, and some of them were very large and red. They were in blotches and at times itched very badly, causing me to scratch. They lasted for about six months.

"I tried other remedies but they were not successful. I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. It helped a great deal so I purchased more and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was completely healed." W. L. CROSS DEM. NOMINEE FOR GOVERNOR ON WET PLATFORM

The Entire State Ticket Was Nominated By Acclamation—Patrick B. O'Sullivan, Former Congressman From the Fifth District, Supplants James J. Walsh of Meriden As Chairman of the State Committee—Cross Was Permitted to Name His Own Party Management, After Chairman Walsh Had Announced That He and Secretary Lynch Would Step Aside, Thus Averting An Impending Break

EASTERN POINT, Conn., Sept. 11.—(AP)—The democracy of Connecticut today went into the field of education to select its nominee for the office of governor.

In a sweeping roar of approbation of state convention delegates, Wilbur L. Cross, dean-emeritus of Yale university Graduate school, was chosen as the standard bearer to challenge the 20-year rule of the republican party.

The nomination was by acclamation. No other candidates were proposed to the delegates, who unanimously adopted a platform advocating repeal of the 18th amendment and the Volstead act in line with the beliefs of their nominee.

The convention was marked by its complete accord. A threatened break over the chairmanship of the state committee was averted by the present chairman, James J. Walsh, of Meriden, who abnegated in favor of Dean Cross. The entire state ticket was selected by acclamation.

The Ticket

Daniel J. Leary, comptroller, of Waterbury, was chosen as the candidate for lieutenant-governor. The remainder of the ticket will be:

Alton T. Miner, New London, secretary of state.

Walter E. Goddard, Stratford, treasurer.

Mayor Anthony J. Sunderland, Danbury, comptroller.

David A. Wilson, Hartford, attorney-general.

Features of Platform

Besides repeal of the prohibition law and its enforcement machinery, the platform on which the democrats will present their cause before the electorate next November contains a plank calling for an old age pension system and a proposal for a commission to study the unemployment problem and suggest measures of relief.

Other important features of the platform are those calling for an investigation of rates for public utilities services; good rural roads; increased facilities for tubercular patients; maintenance of a non-partisan judiciary in cities and towns; non-political interference in educational affairs; repeal of confiscatory clauses in tax laws; investigation of the tax system; completion of the trunk line system of highways, building of Merritt highway, beautification of highways and extension of state parks.

The name of Dean Cross was presented before the delegates by Philip Troup, of New Haven, as the man to break the "one-man bureaucracy established by Roraback." When he was finished the cheering delegates rose to their feet and applauded wildly for several minutes. There was another demonstration when Cross' name was approved as their nominee. Again when he was escorted to the rostrum to deliver his speech of acceptance they let loose their enthusiasm.

Dean Cross pledged himself to the welfare of Connecticut, to be a "governor in fact as well as in name." In regard to prohibition, he said that it has "collapsed."

"You cannot," he said, "reform a nation by sending respectable citizens as fast as the courts can act to jail or prison for doing what they and their ancestors for generations have regarded as a matter of private concern."

One Note of Discord

The only note of discord in the convention was produced when Philip Troup offered a resolution empowering the gubernatorial nominee to select his own chairman and secretary of the state central committee. In the flurry which followed, John A. Walsh, of Norwalk, termed it an "insult" and threatened to resign.

After a motion to table the resolution had been defeated, Chairman James J. Walsh averted an open break with a plea to the delegates that they allow it to pass and entrust the selection to Dean Cross. In a speech that was hailed as a most generous gesture for harmony, Mr. Walsh said that while he and Secretary A. S. Lynch had sufficient votes in a test fight, they would step aside.

"We put the democratic party of Connecticut above ourselves," he said.

This master stroke of conciliation was matched only by the withdrawal by Mr. Troup of the resolution, leaving the matter with the committee members.

Later in the afternoon, Dean Cross was permitted to name his own party management headed by P. B. O'Sullivan, of Orange, as chairman.

SKETCH OF THE CAREER OF PROF. WILBUR CROSS

EASTERN POINT, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Prof. Wilbur Cross, nominated today for governor, has been a student, teacher, literary writer and critic during all his manhood years. Politically he is described by his friends as "an old-fashioned Tolland county democrat." By tradition and choice he is a democrat, and cast his first ballot for Grover Cleveland.

Educationally, Professor Cross has long been a big figure, internationally known as an editor and author, and one of the English faculty at Yale university. He long has been an authority on English literature and the English novel, and his particular liking has been for 18th and 19th century authors. He wrote the "Works of Laurence Sterne," English author, in 1904, bringing out much unpublished material, followed with "Life and Times of Laurence Sterne," adding these to the classics, and later a history of Henry Fielding. He was editor-in-chief of a series of English classics and of a Yale Shakespeare. As editor of the Yale Review, which he founded in 1911, he attained international acquaintanceships. Through this medium also, his friends say, he obtained those contacts which have enabled him to study political government and economics.

Professor Cross on his paternal side comes from William Cross, who took up lands in Windsor in 1644. On his mother's side he comes from the Curleys, who migrated from Northampton, Mass., to Coventry, Conn., about 1700, and the family later spread to Mansfield and were neighbors of Nathan Hale. His father was a farmer and Mr. Cross as a boy worked in a village store. He was born in Mansfield, April 10, 1862. He went to Yale from Natchaug high school at Willimantic, and after gleaning many honors for scholarship and work, began his career as a teacher as principal of Staples high school at Westport. Then he went to Shady Side academy, Pittsburgh, and while there lectured each year on literature and brought out a book on the English novel (1899).

He went to Yale as an English instructor in Sheffield, became an assistant professor in 1897, full professor in 1902, dean of the Graduate school in 1916, Sterling professor of English in 1921, acting provost in 1922-23, and was retired July 1. He thrice received degrees from Yale, and from the University of South Carolina, Michigan and Columbia. His research in literature brought him many honors. He has the French Legion of Honor decoration.

Professor Cross is a widower. His wife was Miss Helen Avery. He has two sons, Wilbur and Avery.

PATRICK B. O'SULLIVAN NEW CHAIRMAN STATE COMMITTEE

EASTERN POINT, Conn., Sept. 11—(AP)—A new hand will be at the helm of the democratic party in the campaign this fall to place Prof. Wilbur L. Cross, dean-emeritus of Yale Graduate school in the governor's chair, in the person of Patrick B. O'Sullivan, former congressman from the fifth district.

The new chairman of the state committee is the personal choice of the nominee ratified upon his request by the committee in session for organization after adjournment of the state convention which selected a ticket and adopted a platform.

Prof. Cross likewise made choice of Mrs. Fannie Dixon Welch, of Colum-

FIVE PERSONS KILLED BY STROMBOLI ERUPTION

MESSINA, Italy, Sept. 11—(AP)—At least five persons were killed and several score injured, some seriously, in a simultaneous earthquake and eruption of Stromboli volcano near here today.

The eruption blew off the cone of Stromboli, which is on the island of the same name in the Aeolian group near here, and poured burning rock down upon the town of Stromboli and the villages of Gimostra and San Bartolo.

Four of the dead were killed at Stromboli and one at Gimostra. All of the 400 houses in the former town were made uninhabitable by the great stream of lava.

Fields around the ruined towns were destroyed and flourishing vineyards were wiped out by the searing river. Many buildings were set on fire.

Five ships, including four war vessels, were sent from here to aid the stricken region. They carried food, tents and medical supplies as well as firefighters and officials.

The volcano soon returned to its normal activity.

FESS SAYS TARIFF WILL RESTORE PROSPERITY

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 11—(AP)—The new tariff law will be the instrument through which prosperity will be returned to the nation, United States Senator Simeon D. Fee, the new republican national chairman, declared in a keynote speech at the republican state convention here today.

Senator Fess also said that the present depression in business is only a cycle which always follows a peak of such industrial activity as experienced during the last two years. The depression, which is prevalent throughout most of the world, was last to reach the United States, Senator Fess said, and added that this country will be the first to rally from its effects.

13 PERSONS WERE KILLED IN RIOTING AT SULAIMANI

BAGDAD, Irak, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Thirteen persons were killed and 35 injured in a riot today outside the government offices at Sulaimani. Officials said the disorder was caused by Kurds who were dissatisfied with the new Anglo-Irak treaty.

Kurds armed with revolvers, daggers, and sticks blockaded the government office and attacked police and soldiers called to drive them away. The dead included one Irak soldier.

The Kurds have opposed the new treaty ever since it was negotiated. Last month they refused to vote at the general election as a result of this dissatisfaction.

REPUBLICAN NOMINEE FOR MAYOR OF MIDDLETOWN

MIDDLETOWN, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Councilman Richard E. Mylchreest today was nominated by acclamation to be the republican standard bearer in the mayoralty race here at a party caucus. In a contest for the nomination for the post of city treasurer, Lucien M. Baldwin outdistanced Councilman Frank M. Dunn, 175 votes to 58. Dunn then was named as the party's candidate for first selectman.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

GENEVA, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Another conference, to be held next May to consider new economic problems, was urged today by Pedro Cosio, Uruguayan minister to Berlin, in a discussion of world tariff policies at the League of Nations assembly.

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Captain Figueroa, commanding the Dominican army detachment at Asua, in the Dominican Republic, arrived here today with a pathetic story of the suffering confronting the people of his section as a result of the recent hurricane.

ODESSA, Ukrainian Socialist Soviet Republic, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Eight street car passengers were killed and 50 injured today when a derailed street car ran away down a hill and crashed into the entrance to a railway bridge. Officials blamed the accident on defective brakes.

CALCUTTA, India, Sept. 11.—(AP)—The ingredients of another Indian bomb plot were uncovered today by a police raid on a house in North Calcutta. A live bomb in a suitcase, several shells and materials for the manufacture of bombs on a fairly large scale were found. Three persons were arrested.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Dantes Belgrade, representative for Haiti in the League of Nations assembly, today called the attention of that body to the misfortune of the hurricane-ridden Dominican Republic. He asked the league to remit the country's annual contribution toward the league expenses and to send a message of sympathy to the Dominican people.

MOVE TOWARD RENEWAL OF WATERWAYS NEGOTIATIONS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11—(AP)—A move toward resumption of negotiations over the gigantic St. Lawrence waterways project has been initiated in an exchange of notes between the United States and Canada looking to a settlement of differences and the writing of a waterways treaty.

The text of neither note was made public. The United States suggestion, however, was said authoritatively to have been brief, merely reiterating the willingness of this country to proceed with negotiations at any time. It was taken to Canada by Hanford MacNider, the new American minister.

Advices from Ottawa said the Canadian reply contained assurance by Premier Bennett that he would take up the negotiations soon after his return from the imperial conference in London in October. The Canadian note had not been received at the state department late today.

The exchange of notes was the first known move through formal diplomatic channels since 1928.

"CONNIE" LEWIS SUFFERING FROM MENTAL BREAKDOWN

DANBURY, Sept. 11—(AP)—Clifford J. "Connie" Lewis, erstwhile head of the lottery system in Fairfield county, is suffering from a mental breakdown at the Danbury jail, according to a report issued today by Dr. William M. Stahl, Danbury physician. Called in by Jailer Alpheus A. Baker, Dr. Stahl examined Lewis and found him suffering from a temporary mental condition and recommended that he be removed to a sanotarium.

Sentenced to a year in jail and fined $300 by Judge Frederick M. Peasley in the superior court on June 9, for setting up a lottery, Lewis was transferred to the Danbury jail from Bridgeport on July 15 for violating the rules of the county institution. Lewis started his sentence on June 16 and by the transfer lost sixty days off which would have been granted for good behavior.

TROUBLE IN COPPER MINING REGION OF PERU

LIMA, Peru, Sept. 11—(AP)—The troubles this week in the Cerro Pasco copper mining region, where employes have protested against the treatment given them by the American company which owns most of the mines, have caused the evacuation of American families and other foreigners to nearby towns.

Peruvian troops still are on guard to prevent disorder.

Employes of the Cerro Pasco Copper corporation today sent a delegation to Lima bearing a protest signed by 400 persons, to be delivered to the junta protesting against the "abusive attitude of W. G. Bassett, superintendent of said company, who dismissed the organizers of a demonstration in favor of the new government."

The newspaper La Prensa, which describes the protest, says the workers demand that the "abusive conduct of foreign officials be stopped."

FORMER ACTRESS SUED FOR A CLOTHING BILL OF $22,675

NEW YORK, Sept. 11—(AP)—Clara Kimball Young, a few years ago one of the most popular of movie stars, today was sued for a clothing bill of $22,675.

A Fifth avenue firm brought the action, declaring that the actress' purchases included a mink coat $2,500; a gold brocade coat, $425; a blue crepe gown, $375, and a bag, $95.

RUMOR ABOUT KING CAROL'S COMPANION IN EXILE

BUCHAREST, Sept. 11—(AP)—Society and political circles were discussing a new rumor today that Mme. Bagda Lupescu, who was King Carol's companion in exile before he acquired the Rumanian throne, had arrived in Rumania and was living at Sinaia. No confirmation could be obtained.

Sinaia is a popular resort and is the summer residence of the royal family.

CHICAGO, Sept. 11—(AP)—M. E. Seller, piloting a Ford tri-motor plane, led the contestants in the national air tour into Curtiss field today for the first overnight stop of the 1930 tour. Seller made the flight from Kalamazoo, Mich., in approximately one hour and eight minutes.

150 Pupils On Strike For 25 Hour Week

At Watertown, Mass.—Paraded Streets and Broke Windows

WATERTOWN, Mass., Sept. 11—(AP)—More than 150 pupils of the Watertown high school went on strike today for a 25-hour week.

Displaying placards announcing: "We want shorter hours," the dissatisfied students left the school at the noon recess, paraded the streets and broke a window in the school committee room. The school day hitherto ended at 1:45. An additional hour had been required with the opening of the fall term.

Police assistance was summoned when the paraders reached the school commissioners and one of the strikers was taken to the station house. He was later released.

SHAMROCK V. AND ENTERPRISE READY FOR RACE TOMORROW

NEWPORT, Sept. 11—(AP)—Glistening in new paint and varnish, Shamrock V, Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger, and Enterprise, Harold S. Vanderbilt's defender in the America's cup series opening off here Saturday, returned to the water today after their final overhauling in shipyards. Both almost immediately spread sail and it was evident there would be no let down in activity during the 36 hours, or less, remaining before the starting signal is sounded nine miles southeast of Brenton Reef lighthouse.

Both boats glided down marine railways on the morning tide, Sir Thomas' green sloop from a local boatyard, and Enterprise at the Bristol yard from which she was launched April 14, the same day Shamrock V took her initial dip at Gosport, England. Shamrock's crew got sail on her and she was son bowling along over the sparkling waters of Narragansett bay, driven by a brisk southwest breeze.

Enterprise arrived at her mooring in Brenton Cove under her own canvas from Bristol. The two boats, Britain's hope of regaining and Columbia's hope of retaining yachting supremacy, bow saucily to each other as they rise and fall with the motion of the water tonight. Their moorings are close by, so close that each crew is aware of the other's activities.

NATIONAL AIR TOUR PLANES HAVE ARRIVED AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—(AP)—A caravan of 35 airplanes, 18 of them contesting in the 1930 national air tour, landed at Curtiss Reynolds airport this afternoon, completing without mishap the first leg of their 4,500-mile sky tour.

M. E. Zeller, piloting a Ford tri-motor plane, put his big ship down at the airport at 2:08 p. m., (C. S. T.) approximately an hour and eight minutes after he had taken off from Kalamazoo, Mich., where the fliers took lunch.

Within an hour the entire fleet had arrived at the airport, where it will remain until 9 a. m., (C. S. T.) tomorrow, when the fliers will take off at minute intervals for Davenport, Ia.; the next overnight stop will be Wausau, Wis.

Among the scores of fliers in the competing ships and the escort planes are many celebrated pilots. The youngest fliers are Eddie Schneider, 18, junior transcontinental record holder, and Miss Nancy Hopkins, 21, the only competing woman pilot.

The caravan took off from Detroit this morning. Captain Ray Collins, manager of the tour, said the standing of the competitors as a result of their first day's flight, would be announced tomorrow.

SERIOUSLY INJURED RESISTING TWO ROBBERS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 11. —(AP)—John W. Harvey, engineer at the Chatham hotel, 20th and Walnut streets, frustrated an attempt to hold up the cashier tonight, but he may sacrifice his life as a result.

Physicians said his skull was fractured in the battle with the intruders and that he may die.

Harvey was in the basement when two men, armed with pistols, entered and ordered him to throw up his hands. The engineer swung a hefty right to one of the men's head. The other beat Harvey senseless with a blackjack and took $25 from his pockets.

The robbers then dashed upstairs to the cashier's office, but Harvey regained consciousness, stumbled into the lobby and spread the alarm. Other employes rushed to the cashier's office and the robbers ran from the building, but were captured after a chase of two blocks.

They gave their names as John Hammond, 37, of Providence, R. I., and Ernest Mullins, 41, of this city.

HURRICANE INJURED IN EMERGENCY HOSPITAL

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic, Sept. 11—(AP)—President Rafael L. Trujillo today went to Roosevelt Emergency hospital, operated by the Red Cross and staffed by Porto Ricans, for what might be termed its formal opening, although 450 victims of last week's disastrous hurricane already had been admitted.

With Commander L. W. Johnson of the United States Navy Medical corps, Dr. Fernos Isern, head of the Porto Rican medical unit, and Ernest J. Swift, an official of the American Red Cross, he inspected the tent hospital which was erected in 48 hours to take the overflow of patients from the established hospital.

The president's training in the United States marines made him interested in the completeness of the establishment, which can care for 1,000 patients, has all equipment from an operating tent to a cook fly and is equipped with the San Juan municipal motor ambulance.

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 11.—(AP)—Mrs. Helen Ross, 35, shot and killed her 15-year-old daughter, Joyce, today wounded a second child, Wilma, 10, and missed her aim when she fired at a son, Gordon, 9. The woman then committed suicide.

[illegible] popular assumption was that he [illegible] for the nearby city of Mon[illegible], Uruguay, but the government [illegible] no official statement as to the destination.

The embarkation was conducted in secrecy.

Late this morning, half of the Seventh infantry regiment went to the Central docks—half a mile by motor car from the city of La Plata—and deployed in the surrounding area to prevent the entrance of anyone, even newspapermen.

At 11 a. m., Irigoyen, accompanied by a daughter and his private physician, Dr. Meabe, was placed in a motor car and rushed to the docks. He went aboard the cruiser at 11:35 and 15 minutes later the ship weighed anchor.

His departure is said to have been by his own choice.

Irigoyen's downfall began last Friday when, under pressure of his ministers, he "retired" under a constitutional provision and turned the government over to the vice-president, Enrique V. Martinez.

This aroused a military-naval coalition which Saturday night marched into Buenos Aires and took over the government house. Martinez and the cabinet resigned and Irigoyen fled to La Plata. There he was arrested, and Sunday morning, just a few minutes after midnight, he wrote a brief resignation.

He then was informed that he was not under arrest but in view of his illness was given a bed in the infantry barracks. There he remained until today, his illness described variously as pneumonia, grippe, or a combination of old age plus the depression caused by his fall from power.

With the former president out of the country and his leading supporters either refugees or under arrest, the country apparently is calm. The people have returned to work and the government is turning toward financial and diplomatic problems.

ONE OF THREE FLEEING BANK BANDITS KILLED

KENTWOOD, La., Sept. 11.—(AP)—Abandoning their automobile and taking to a swamp with a sheriff's posse hot in pursuit, three bandits who held up the Bank of Kentwood and robbed it of $10,000 today showed fight and one of their number was shot and killed.

At word that the trio, armed with sawed-off shotguns and wearing over their faces what appeared to be women's silk stockings, had held up the bank, Sheriff Edwards hurriedly gathered a posse of deputies and started on their trail south from Kentwood.

Nearing a swamp about six miles south, with the officers in the pursuing automobile drawing near, the robbers abandoned their car and took to the swamps. In their flight they left 200 in silver dollars in their automobile.

The unidentified leader of the gang took up a sniping position in a tree and dared the officers to come on. But an unnoticed member put a bullet through his head. The other two were surrounded and their arrest was expected.

In the hold-up the robbers forced J. H. McGehee, the bank cashier, and J. H. Pate, his assistant, to line up against the wall with their hands over their heads, and scooped up all the money in sight into a pillow case.

PHILADELPHIA THEATRE MUSICIANS ON STRIKE

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 11.—(AP)—A strike call, effective at midnight, was issued tonight by the Philadelphia Musicians' Protective association to all its members employed in the Fox theatres and the Warner Brothers-Stanley theatres here and in Camden, N. J.

The action came after the refusal of the motion picture theatre owners to retain all musicians now in their employ for two weeks pending further negotiations. The musicians sought renewal of employment for the 210 musicians employed in the Warner-Stanley chain and the 42 in the Fox theatres. The owners recently agreed on a cut of 65 per cent.

Representatives of the stage hands and moving picture machine operators will meet tomorrow night to determine whether they shall strike in sympathy with the musicians. Interlocking agreements among the three unions were said to provide for such a step.

The motion picture managers said talking pictures had reduced their needs for musicians.

BRIAND AND HENDERSON AT ODDS IN L. OF N. ASSEMBLY

French Foreign Minister Stressed the Necessity of a Grouping of European Nations—Foreign Secretary For Great Britain Demanded in Flat Terms That Disarmament Be Accomplished—Briand Replied That in the French View Absolute Security Must Precede Disarmament

GENEVA, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Two of the great and authoritative voices of the League of Nations were heard in its eleventh assembly today and two theses of the basis of world peace were expounded.

Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, pleaded the utility and necessity of a grouping of European nations. Arthur Henderson, foreign secretary for Great Britain, demanded in flat terms that disarmament be accomplished.

In his exposition M. Briand stressed the necessity of an arms reduction, maintaining at the same time the French point of view that full reduction of armaments must be preceded by "absolute security."

To this view Mr. Henderson took flat exception. "In our profound belief," he said, "security and disarmament are closely interlocked and nothing can make our peoples truly safe from war until a treaty of general disarmament has been made. Security is impossible if competitive military preparations continue as they are going on today. x x x After all, there is none of us who in his heart does not know that of all security measures disarmament is in itself the most important."

The British foreign minister insisted upon the idea that only general disarmament is consonant with article eight of the League of Nations covenant obliging members to reduce their naval and military establishments by international treaties.

"Reduction by individual powers, by small groups of powers, or in respect of certain forces only, do not fulfill the pledges we have made," said Mr. Henderson. "We hope that the world conference or disarmament may be summoned by the council for next year, and that within the measurable future we shall take a decisive step toward fulfillment of the undertakings which bind us all."

M. Briand, asserting that in the French view absolute security must precede disarmament, also pleaded for reductions of armed forces. He expressed a belief that the naval negotiations now going on with Italy would "complete, and be added to the agreement of London." He said he hoped the Franco-Italian agreement would "add something further, we hope and trust, towards promoting the stabilization and peace of the world."

M. Briand pleaded with all of his old warmth and personal force for a union of European states but left it to the league assembly to determine the extent of such a union and the means of procuring it.

Referring to objections that the proposed grouping would be inimical to the interests of the United States, he declared that the contrary was true.

"I have discussed this matter at length," he continued, "both with statesmen and business men from the United States and they regard it as an insult to their intelligence to insinuate that they desire Europe to remain in disorder . . . From a very selfish point of view, no one has anything to gain if their most profitable market is not organized.

"It is to the interest of all people to set their house in order, particularly from the economic point of view, when their power of consumption and absorption will, ipso facto, increase—that is the feeling of the United States."

ALLEGED KIDNAPED MAN SAYS HE HAD "BEEN FISHING"

ELDORADO, Ark., Sept. 11.—(AP)—James Terrell, alleged by authorities in New Orleans to have been kidnaped with Samuel Irby from a hotel in Shreveport, La., after they had gone there to file a slander suit against Governor Huey P. Long, returned to the home of his mother here today with a report that he had "been fishing" for a week.

After greeting his mother, Mrs. H. C. Hasselroth, at her hotel, Terrell gave the following statement to newspapermen:

"I have been fishing since I left Shreveport and don't know anything about this kidnaping except what I have read since I got back to New Orleans Tuesday night. I certainly have not been kidnaped. I went fishing with Irby and several others on my own free will."

Terrell asserted he did not go to Shreveport to file a suit against Governor Long. He said the fishing party went to an island in the Gulf of Mexico, which he said he later learned was Grand Isle.

SLEW CONDUCTOR WHO SLAMMED GATE IN HIS FACE

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP)—The fatal shooting of an elevated train conductor nearly four years ago was ascribed today, by a man who police said confessed the slaying, to his fury at having a train gate slammed in his face.

James Marino, 30, of Brooklyn, was held without bail in homicide court. His confession, as related by police, declared Marino and his wife and children were about to step aboard the train at the Chatham Square station, on the Bowery, when John Heany, 22, the conductor, swung the gate shut.

The slayer ran alongside the train as it pulled out of the station and shot Healy.

Marino's wife, Nora, was held as a material witness. Rewards of $5,500 had been oered for capture of Healy's killer

Mr. Gorman, commenting on the report, said he was sure the executive committee would order such action.

"We have stayed out of Gastonia up to now for several reasons," he said, "chief of them being that we knew the communists wanted us to come in so they could benefit from our work. I believe the new executive council will decide the time is now ripe and we will go in there."

TO TAKE OFF TOMORROW ON FLIGHT TO LONDON

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 11.—(AP)—The veteran trans-Atlantic plane Columbia, seized on a legal writ, was set free in court today and two fliers promptly announced plans to take off Saturday in the craft on a flight across the ocean to London.

Capt. J. Erroll Boyd, Toronto flier, and his American navigator, Lieut. Harry P. Connor, said they would make Harbor Grace, N. F., their first objective and would make the ocean hop to London from there.

Plans for the flight had been held in abeyance while the plane was held for non-payment of debt at the instance of Roger Q. Williams, who flew to Spain last year with Capt. Lewis Yancey. Williams alleged debts were owed him by the Columbia Airliners corporation, which owns the Columbia. SCHOOL BOARD FACED WITH TRANSPORTATION PROBLEM

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 11—The desire of a number of parents to have their children transferred from the Oaks school, a state controlled institution, to the Natchaug grammar school, under town supervision, comes in the form of a problem to the town school board. Last spring the board voted that no such transfers would be granted unless application in writing was made on or before May 1. Despite this edict of the board, several children attempted to make a change this term. They were ordered back to the Oaks school and the parents have expressed dissatisfaction, as conditions and teaching at the Oaks are considered inferior. This problem was taken up by the board at its first meeting of the present term Wednesday night and Superintendent Egbert A. Case was named to confer with Principal George H. Shafer and Principal F. R. Noble of the Windham street school in regard to the matter.

The board heard a detailed report of repairs and alterations to school property done during the summer months. The report, submitted by Committeeman William B. Sweeney of the properties committee, stated that the grading at Hayden field, the new school athletic field, had been done at a cost of $2,150.20 and the expense of seeding, fertilizing, etc., amounted to $271.02. These amounts were paid from the school fund.

The walls and both floors and the basement of the Natchaug school annex have been painted and other work done there so that the building is now in excellent condition. The [illegible] of the Windham high school building was revarnished and oiled and the additional study room, accommodating 31 pupils, built on the third floor. The Windham Center and North Windham schools were reported in good condition. At the trade school, the windows on the third floor were repaired. Hayden field is expected to be ready for use in the near future. Filling will be done in the southeast corner, where it is planned to erect a club house at some future time.

Superintendent Case read his annual report, including figures of the budgets for last year and the coming year, the 1930-'31 budget amounting to $204,000. Copies of the budget were ordered printed for distribution on election day.

The removal of John [illegible] McKenna from the city has caused a vacancy in the position of truant officer and applications have been received which are under investigation.

The applications of Doctors Fred M. Smith and Nathan Spector were read for the position of town school physician. By ballot that of Dr. Smith was accepted.

Committeeman Raymond A. Parker reported that all contracts for the transportation of school children from the outlying districts of the town had been signed with owners of busses and liability insurance provided for the protection of the town and children. Seven of the ten members who were present at the meeting were: Chairman Dr. F. E. Guild, Walter R. King, Raymond A. Parker, H. C. Lathrop, William B. Sweeney, John Reilly and C. H. Backus.

The degree team from Lieutenant Cadwell Colt Robinson post of Hartford has accepted an invitation to initiate a class of recruits at the next meeting, it was announced at the regular session of Gold Star post No. 1724, Veterans of Foreign Wars, held in V. F. W. hall on Main street, Wednesday evening. A social will be held in connection with the initiation. The appointment of James [illegible], local commander, as a member of the national committee on foreign service and publicity, was made known in a letter from headquarters. An outline of the aviation program for next year, terminating at the state encampment in this city with the presentation of a purse of gold and a trophy to the Connecticut aviator whose record for the year shows the greatest amount of safety, was read. A favorable report to the proposal to stage boxing exhibitions in the city during the winter and to conducting a series of entertainments for the encampment fund was made. Over a score of members will accept the invitation of Lacroix-Murdock post No. 595 of Meriden to attend an outing there Sept. 14. It was also reported that two recent entertainments had netted $250 to the treasury.

Contests Expected at Caucus

Growing interest is manifest in the republican town caucus to be held in the town hall Friday night, when candidates for the town elections, Oct. 6, will be nominated. The possibility of two or more contests for the leading positions on the ticket has served materially to arouse this interest. The outstanding contest will be between Harold C. Lincoln and Robert G. Remington and possibly one or two "dark horses" for the position of town clerk and treasurer. Ernest P. [illegible], Sr., and Albert L. Lightning's Pranks

Early Sunday morning people here were awakened by terrific thunder and lightning, but no serious damage was reported. It was noted that the electric fluid had followed a wire fence for some distance and coming to a barway, it ripped out a large cedar bar and reduced it to fine kindling wood, scattering it in all directions. The rain filled the cisterns, but the wells are going dry.

Exhibition Flying

It is interesting to watch the young humming birds as they spend much time every day around the flower beds; and the pranks and playful stunts they do beat the airplane stunt flying.

GERMAN COOPERATIVE PLAN APPEALS TO GANDHI MEN

BOMBAY — (AP) — Proposals of 200 German capitalists to start Indian industries, to be financed partially by Indians themselves, have been greeted enthusiastically by the national congress party.

Members of the party see in the scheme a chance to hit back at British industries.

The Germans purpose to establish, with the help of Indian capitalists, various industries, and in time assisting the country to meet her own demands.

The nationalists admit that importing goods from Germany will scarcely be conducive to the well-being of India any more than importing them from England. But it is contended that the object of the Germans is at least noteworthy, and that their attempt should be supported on that ground alone.

German manufacturers sent agents here last January. A trust has been formed known as the Export-Dienst of India, Ltd., and the plan is to capture the Indian market for German goods of every conceivable variety.

At the same time, in cooperation with swadeshi, or home industry, capital, there would be endeavors to develop Indian industries.

The head of the organization here is Theodore Ficker, of Berlin, a former member of the German nationalist party.

SAYS ANGLO-SAXONS HALT MOROCCAN PLAN

RABAT, Morocco — (AP) — Lucien Saint, French resident general of Morocco, says that Anglo-Saxon elements often resist his plans for modernizing the country.

M. Saint, an energetic executive, explained that Englishmen and Americans, still protected by "capitulations" under the treaty of Algeciras, sometimes have resisted condemnation proceedings incidental to city planning.

He cited a recent instance at Marrakech where an American proprietor tied up building projects, but he feels that "time and good-will" will overcome such difficulties.

Meanwhile here and at Fez and other towns modern office buildings and business blocks are going up and the resident general says that Fez in particular need not fear comparison with the best of American towns.

NORWEGIANS ON CIRCLE TRIP AROUND ANTARCTICA

OSLO — (AP) — The whaler "Norvegia," which has carried several expeditions to the Antarctic, is starting a new expedition from Cape Town.

The Norvegia will sail around the whole Antarctic continent, the purpose being scientific observations. The movements of whales will be especially studied. This time no airplanes will be carried.

Asked whether the expedition would try to claim new land, one of the leaders said that he saw no reason why that should not happen if they should happen to find any.

COLLEENS AND GOSSOONS SHUN AMERICAN SHORES

DUBLIN — (AP) — Emigration from the Free State to the United States is lessening year by year.

In 1928-9 the quota was 28,567, but only 22,096 went. In 1929-30 the quota fell to 17,853 and this was filled. There were 4,198 rejections, mostly on the ground of illiteracy

It is reported that rejections on this ground are growing. This is attributed not to any falling off in the efficiency of Irish education, but to the fact that the better educated Irish young people are staying at home.

Blessed are the meek, for they are expected to rise to the occasion.

TIME AND SPACE LINKED IN NEW THEORY OF SOUND

NEW YORK—(AP)—Space and time are linked in a theory of hearing advanced in a report to the Acoustical society of America by its president, Dr. Harvey Fletcher.

In hearing, some scientists have held that time of the vibrations was the important factor. Others have considered the pattern the sound waves make in space as the distinguishing difference between sounds.

Some sound waves are long and smooth; others crowded together choppily. Dr. Fletcher shows how both the time and space components are impressed on the membranes of the inner ear and concludes that "space-time" is the way to account for the effects.

PROTEIN FEED INCREASES AUSTRALIA'S WOOL OUTPUT

CANBERRA, Australia — (AP) — A council of scientific and industrial research appointed by the Australian federal government has discovered a protein preparation which, fed to sheep, substantially increases their wool yield.

When wool fell in price the economic effect to Australia was alarming and the country was faced with the necessity of producing much more wool. It is predicted that the new protein sheep feed will solve the problem.

Fed to 100 sheep over a long period as an experiment, the preparation increased the fleeces by an average of 20 ounces and improved sheep's physical condition.

PASTEUR'S NEPHEW BREEDS BETTER RAT-CHASING CATS

LE HAVRE, France—(AP)—Pussy is more efficient than science in rat-catching.

Dr. A. Loir, nephew of Pasteur, prefers cats to chemicals and gas in chasing rodents. He plans soon to establish a cat farm to develop breeds that will take "mousing" seriously and make it their life work.

For four years Dr. Loir has been selecting breeds. His project is backed by scientific societies and warehouse and shipping interests, which have suffered heavy losses from rats.

RADIO PUT IN THIRD OF COUNTRY'S HOTELS

NEW YORK—(AP)—Thirty per cent of the country's hotels have radio installations, a survey shows.

With about 25,000 hotels and apartment hotels now in operation, this estimate means that 7,500 of them have fitted up their guest rooms either with loud speakers connected to a central receiver or with receiver outlets for antenna and ground connections.

The same estimate, which is based on data gathered by Lewis Winner, New York radio expert, indicates that by the end of the year 12,000 more hotels will have installed radio.

EARTH'S RUBBER LAND WOULD GIRDLE GLOBE

NEW YORK—(AP)—It takes a lot of land to produce the world's rubber supply.

Dr. E. G. Holt says in a report to the American Chemical society that this area would stretch in a band nearly a mile wide around the earth at the equator.

Yet all the rubber produced in 1929 made into a solid ball would be barely 600 feet in diameter.

MISSISSIPPI STATION PUTS GAS WELL ON AIR

JACKSON, Miss—(AP)—Hundreds of radio listeners heard the roar of the Payne No. 1, wild gas well of the Jackson field, when WJDX featured the gasser in a recent news period.

In addition to broadcasting the roar, the radio staff had officials at the well to tell the listeners what it was all about.

The microphone was set up in a closed automobile, the windows being opened to broadcast the gas roar and closed when the speakers were on the air.

COUNTY AGENT USES FARMS TO DEMONSTRATE THEORIES

HOUSTON, Tex.—(AP)—Actual farm demonstrations are used by W. D. Seals, county agent of Van Zandt, Tex., to prove his theories on better farming.

He utilizes eight farms upon which he depends to practice the best methods and show the best results. These farmer demonstrators, in joining his scheme agreed to rotate crops, to plant the best seed and soil-building crops, to introduce well-selected livestock and raise enough feed economically to care for the stock.

Seals invites other farmers to attend his demonstrations and learn how it's done.

DAIRYMEN USE NEWSPAPERS TO ADVERTISE PUREBREDS

EAST LANSING, Mich.—(AP)—Dairy extension workers in Michigan have decided to use display advertising in newspapers to carry their arguments for purebred sires to farmers.

A six-weeks' advertising campaign was authorized in 11 counties through the cooperation of bankers. Banks, which had contracted for the display space, turned it over to the extension specialists.

Creameries also were asked to cooperate on a similar basis.

FARMERS URGED TO CAN ANIMALS THAT DON'T PAY

CLARKSVILLE, Ark. — (AP) — Farmers unable to feed their scrub cows and cull hens are urged to can the unprofitable animals and birds.

That's the advice given by Harry Wise, county farm agent, and Mrs. Mabel Hunt, Johnson county demonstration agent. To back their advice the agents have arranged beef canning demonstrations.

These animals, say the agents, will continue to consume feed, already scarce on account of the long drought, and soon will be unfit for table use unless canned now, while in good condition.

A woman never forgives a man she has insulted if he fails to apoligize.

SUN AFFECTS AUTO FINISH LIKE IT TANS HUMAN SKIN

WILMINGTON, Del.—(AP)—Sunburn is the worst enemy of a good automobile finish, says G. W. Sherwin of the duPont company.

That is, the same ultraviolet light which tans humans digs into the lustrous surface, causing erosion of microscopic particles, eating away the surface for wind and dirt to complete the job of destruction.

As with humans, there is a protection against this auto sunburn, Sherwin remarks. For man the protection is ordinary window glass. Equally opaque to ultraviolet light is the wax that polishes the finish. So long as a film of wax covers the surface, no ultraviolet rays can get at the auto paint.

DANIELSON

TELETYPE CONNECTS LOCAL BARRACKS WITH STATE DEPT.

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 11.—The prattle of a teletype at the state police barracks on North Main street for the first time today was significant of the fact that the local officers are now afforded a constant and instantaneous contact with the entire state police organization of the state, and incidentally with various city police departments in Connecticut.

The control station is at department headquarters in Hartford, but communication is possible with all state police barracks similarly equipped. Not only does the teletype bring to the barracks here all information that is of interest to it, but also permits of broadcasting police news from Danielson to headquarters and other state barracks. The speed and efficiency with which it works is amazing to persons unfamiliar with the apparatus.

Incoming information clicks off the machine in typewritten form. A keyboard, much after the manner of a typewriter's, permits the local officers to send out any information they desire.

With the teletype, the direct wire to Willimantic that is now installed and the similar direct wire that is to be hooked up between Danielson and Putnam, the local barracks is well equipped to receive information that is directed to it in the course of the daily routine of work and to send out its material with equal facility.

Approximately 125 persons were in attendance at the meeting of Danielson chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, at the Masonic building on Broad street last night. The occasion brought a group of grand officers of the organization here for the annual inspection of the local chapter, holding its first meeting in the recently enlarged home. A chicken salad supper was served, the meal being the first in the new banquet hall, which is on the lower floor of the newly constructed addition, prior to the business meeting and inspection. Grand officers in attendance were: Worthy Grand Matron Jennie E. Stevens of Greenwich, Worthy Grand Patron Fred A. Verplank of South Manchester, Associate Grand Matron Mrs. Carolyn F. Lawrence, Associate Grand Patron John L. Brevoort, Grand Conductress Miss Ida B. Nixon, Associate Grand Conductress Carolyn N. Kane, Grand Martha Miss Fannie B. Perry, Grand Electra Mrs. May A. Davis, Grand Warder Mrs. Jessie T. Howe, Grand Sentinel George Sturges.

After the inspection a degree was conferred upon candidates.

The evening was an exceptionally pleasant and interesting one. There were visitors registered from Moosup, Putnam, Willimantic, South Manchester, Providence, Woodbury, South Woodstock, Greene, R. I., Woonsocket Baltimore, Pawtucket, Fultonville, N. Y., East Hartford and South Glastonbury.

To Be Hunt Judge

Dana Shippee, East Killingly, will be one of the judges at the hunts of the Brunswick Fox club when they come into Windham county on October 12, to remain for a week, making their headquarters at the Putnam inn, and hunting in Pomfret and other territory suitable for the sport.

About 200 members of the club are planning to be in attendance, and they will bring along a pack of 80 hounds and the necessary number of horses. This will be the first hunt of this famous club in this section. For a generation past the club has met at Barre, Mass. It was originally formed at Brunswick, Me., and takes its name from that city.

On its membership rolls are the names of many distinguished persons, and numbers of them come from sections of the country far removed from Windham county. Many a thrill is promised for persons interested enough to arise early some morning and watch a hunt get underway. They are assured a picturesque sight, and one that heretofore has not been possible in eastern Windham county.

Mr. Shippee, who acted as a judge at Barre last year, is one of the most expert fox hunters in this part of the country.

J. H. Hale peaches 50 cents per 16-quart basket at A. M. Paine's, East Killingly, Conn.—adv.

Today, the body of Ignazio Longo was brought here by Undertaker L. E. Kennedy from Norwich, where Mr. Longo died during last night. Mr. Longo, a native of Italy, was 72 years of age on August 16 last. He had been a resident of Danielson 28 years, coming here that long ago and establishing a fruit, produce and candy business in which he continued for a long term of years in association with his brother, Augustus, under the name of Longo Brothers. Later, Mr. Longo was in business on his own account, and became a familiar figure throughout the territory for miles about. He was a tremendously hard worker, laboring many hours each day in covering his routes and serving his patrons, as well as directing the management of his store.

Mr. Longo, a member of St. James parish, is survived by his wife and the following children: Mrs. Mary Lombardo and Michael, of Willimantic; Annie, Marion and Loreno, of Danielson.
